Mr. Trippier: YTS schemes are making use of a wide range of existing vocational qualifications. The YTS certification board has now been established and has begun work on the approval vocational qualifications suitable for use in YTS. We intend that assessments within YTS should come within the new vocational qualifications framework to be set in place by the recently established National Council for Vocational Qualifications.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of people unemployed in Leeds metropolitan district council area for the last year for which figures are available; and what is the number of people unemployed who are (a) under 25 years old, (b) 25 to 40-years-old and (c) 41 to 60-years-old.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the number of claimants at 10 July 1986, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by age is available.

Unemployment claimants in the Leeds local authority district area

	Number
Age under 25 years	16,062
Age 25 to 39	13,655
Age 40 to 59	12,475
All ages	43,085

Mr. Fatchett asked the Paymaster General how many people in Leeds metropolitan district council area have been unemployed for (a) less than six months, (b) six months to one year, (c) one year to two years and (d) over two years.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the number of claimants for the durations requested as at 10 July 1986, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by duration is available.

Unemployment claimants in the Leeds local authority district area

	Number
Under six months	16,795
Six months to one year	8,133
One year to two years	6,670
Over two years	11,487

Nove Leather Company (Dispute)

Mr. Parry asked the Paymaster General what efforts the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service has made to end the official union dispute with the Nove Leather company in Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I understand that ACAS has been conciliating in this dispute and remains available to assist the parties.

Claimants (Tests)

Mr. Knox asked the Paymaster General what action will be taken in line with the report of the Public Accounts Committee to strengthen tests of the availability of unemployed claimants for work.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer my hon. Friend to my statement earlier today.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

European Community Legislation

Mr. Alexander asked the Lord Privy Seal what percentage, in total and by type, of the European Economic Community regulations, directives and other decisions of the Council of Ministers brought before the House in 1985 were brought before the House for debate with a recommendation for a decision.

Mr. Biffen: Four hundred and thirty European Community documents incorporating proposals by the Commission were deposited in Parliament in 1985. Of these, 283 (66 per cent.) were proposals for Council regulation, 63 (15 per cent.) proposals for Council directives, and 84 (19 per cent.) proposals for Council decisions. In the same year, following recommendations from the Commons Select Committee on European Legislation, 43 documents—some of which would have been deposited before 1985—were debated either on the Floor of the House or in Standing Committee, of which 25 (58 per cent.) concerned regulations, 16 (37 per cent.) directives, and two (5 per cent.) were decisions. Three proposals (7 per cent.) of those debated) were formally adopted by the Council of Ministers before the House had debated them. Two of these had been agreed by the Committee as being suitable for adoption before debate by the House; as for the third, the Chairman of the Commons Select Committee on European Legislation was informed of the position in accordance with the procedure laid down in the House of Commons resolution of 30 October 1980.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorism

Sir John Biggs-Davison and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Protestant and (b) Roman Catholic tenants of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, respectively, have been moved to other accommodation since November 1985 in consequences of sectarian and terrorist violence.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. I am informed by the chairman that the Housing Executive has no record of the religious persuasion of its tenants or applicants, but the executive is aware of 179 cases where its tenants or the occupants of houses in the private sector have been intimidated since 10 July 1986 and have since been rehoused.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Grain Store, Coventry

Mr. Park asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the number of tonnes of grain, in addition to what is already in store, which can be taken into store in Red Lane in the Coventry, North-East constituency.

Mr. Gummer: Information on individual stores is not given on grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Food Labelling

Mr. Coombs asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to announced his modified proposals on the labelling of fats and other nutrients.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We are still in the process of considering the many comments made on the proposed Fat Labelling of Food Regulations, and on the guidelines for fuller nutrition labelling. We hope to be able to make a further announcement shortly.

Fishing Fleet (Decommissioning Scheme)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food (1) what gross tonnage has left the fishing fleets in England, Wales and Scotland as a result of the decommissioning scheme;

(2) how much cod, haddock, saithe and whiting was caught and landed by vessels which are no longer active in the fleet by virtue of their having been decommissioned since the decommissioning scheme was introduced.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food (1) how many fishing vessels have left the fleets in England, Wales and Scotland due to factors other than decommissioning in the period since 1981;

(2) how many of the owners who received money to decommission fishing vessels have subsequently purchased replacement fishing vessels;

(3) how many fishing vessels have been decommissioned in England, Wales and Scotland since the decommissioning scheme was introduced.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Ritual Slaughter

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the extent of ritual slaughter in the United Kingdom; what is his policy towards seeking amendment of the law with regard thereto; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986]: Statistics of animals slaughtered by religious methods are not maintained centrally. However our most recent estimate is that less than 1 per cent. of total animals, including poultry, slaughtered in Great Britain are slaughtered under the exemption from prior stunning. A further 2 per cent. are slaughtered according to religious law after being stunned. Government policy on religious slaughter is under review in response to the recommedations of the Farm Animal Welfare Council.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will detail the numbers of claims pending from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for each of the last five years; and if he will state the average length of time it has taken for settlements to be made in each of these years.

Mr. Mellor: The numbers of cases before the board at the end of each financial year for the last five years were:

	Cases pending
31 March 1982	28,700
31 March 1983	32,100
31 March 1984	34,300
31 March 1985	41,800
31 March 1986	51,500

Information is not available about the average time taken to deal with applications; the table gives the proportions of cases resolved by the board within 12 months of application.

Percentage of cases resolved within twelve months of application

Financial year
1982-83	76·3
1983-84	75·3
1985-86	[1]69·6

Prisoners (Court Hearings)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken following the complaints by a London magistrate of the ability by some London prisons to produce prisoners for court hearings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We are discussing with the courts and other parties concerned how this problem might be tackled. In the longer term, we are taking forward the recommendations of the court escort scrutiny for rationalising the Prison Service's escorting commitment to courts, we are preparing plans for the more efficient deployment of prison staff across the service as a whole and we are considering the proposals made in the scrutiny report for changes in magistrates' courts procedure which would have the effect of easing the burden on the Prison Service.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions so far in the current year prisons have not been able to ensure the presence of prisoners due to attend court hearings of their cases.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available centrally.

Police Custody (Deaths)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the inquiries which have taken place into the death of people while in police custody during each of the last five years;

(2) what has been the number of people who have died in police custody in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The number of persons who died in police custody (or otherwise with the police) during the years 1981-85 is contained in the annual reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary — HC 463 (1981), HC 15 (1982), HC 528 (1983), HC 369 (1984), HC 437 (1985) and for those within the Metropolitan police district, in the annual reports of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (Cmnd. 8569, 8928, 9268, 9541 and 9790). There have been no inquiries under section 32 of the Police Act 1964 into any death in police custody in the last five years. Information as to the number of investigations following a complaint against the police, or internal police inquiries, undertaken as a result of a death in police custody is not separately recorded. The number of inquests and inquest verdicts is dealt with in the annual reports.

Prison Officers (Attacks)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of attacks by inmates in Her Majesty's prisons against prison officers in each of the last three years.

Mr. Mellor: Information on offences against prison discipline of gross personal violence or assault on a prison officer is given annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 9(g), (h) and (i) of the latest issue, for 1985, (Cmnd. 9903)).

Prisoners (Working Arrangements)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what record is kept by prisons as to the number of inmates who are locked up each day due to the lack of prison work.

Mr. Mellor: Governors are required to manage the resources available to them so as to enable inmates to spend the maximum possible time out of their cells in employment, education, individual or collective recreation, or other activities. Lack of prison work would not therefore necessarily lead to inmates being locked up and governors are not required to keep a separate record of when locking up is directly due to lack of prison work.

Voting Rights

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to prohibit citizins of the Republic of Ireland, Australia, Canada, the Republic of Cyprus, India, New Zealand, Tanzania and Zimbabwe voting in local elections in Great Britain.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have no plans to introduce such legislation.

Mr. Sukhjinder Singh

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department received a passport application in respect of Mr. Sukhjinder Singh of 132 Brewery Road, SE18; when the passport was finally issued; why there was a delay in considering the application; and why letters written on behalf of the applicant on 27 February and 16 June went unanswered.

Mr. Waddington: The hon. Member has kindly supplied further information to help to identify the case. I shall write to him as soon as possible.

Police (Complaints)

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to authorise the reimbursement from public funds of legal and other expenses properly incurred by police officers against whom allegations are made and investigated, but are not pursued to a formal hearing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The matter of the legal costs of police officers subject to a disciplinary investigation which does not result in charges being brought has been raised in connection with the case of the deputy chief constable of Greater Manchester. My right hon. Friend has already announced that he is reviewing all aspects of the case to consider whether there are any lessons to be learnt from it.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will provide a breakdown by police area of the figures contained in the Home Office statistical bulletin issue 24/86 "Statistics on the operation of certain police powers under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 First Quarter 1986," tables 1 to 6, September 1986; and if he will also provide a breakdown of the table No. 6 by sex of the persons searched;

(2) if he will state the nature of the harmful article found as indicated in table No. 6 of the Home Office statistical bulletin issue 24/86; where on the person it was found; and whether or not the search was carried out by a police officer;

(3) if he will provide details of the type of class A drug and the quantity found as indicated in table 6 in the Home Office statistical bulletin issue 24/86; and if he will further state with what offence the persons on whom these drugs were found were charged and in which police authority area;

(4) if he will provide details by category of offence of the number of charges laid against persons detained and recorded in table No. 4 in the Home Office statistical bulletin issue 24/86.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Quarterly figures for individual police forces are likely to be subject to considerable variation and so, as stated in note 2 to the Home Office statistical bulletin Issue 24/86, it is intended to publish figures for individual police forces only in an annual bulletin, which it is planned to publish in the spring of 1987. The other requests relate to information which is not collected centrally and which could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Detained Persons

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide details of the reasons used to justify detention beyond 24 hours of persons identified as being detained under section 4 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Section 4 of the the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 controls the setting up of road checks. It is part IV (sections 34 to 52) of the Act which deals with the conditions and duration of detention. Under section 42 an officer of the rank of superintendent or above may authorise the detention of a person beyond 24 hours if he has reasonable grounds for believing that:

(a) the detention of that person without charge is necessary to secure or preserve evidence for which he is under arrest or to obtain such evidence by questioning him;

(b) an offence for which he is under arrest is a serious arrestable offence; and

(c) the investigation is being conducted diligently and expeditiously.

Police (Staffing)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide information on the number of police officers and civilians based at each of the eight area headquarters, broken down by rank, grade and function.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the current police policy in relation to the use of empty property for the use of surveillance within the Metropolitan police district;

(2) what is the current Metropolitan police policy with regard to the use of council-owned property; and what procedures are adopted in contacting local councils when the need for the use of council property for surveillance arises.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner that the police use of vacant premises, including council-owned property, is arranged by application to the person in control of the property, which in the case of council property is an official of the borough council concerned.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide information on the costs of reorganising the Metropolitan police, to include the costs, actual and planned, of rehabilitating and adapting buildings and providing new and additional facilities.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Visas

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will arrange for a passport and local inquiry office to be established in Bradford to assist those in Yorkshire affected by the provisions of the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules", Cmnd. 9914; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: No.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken to ensure those who are affected by the provisions of the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules", Cmnd. 9914, are aware of what action they are required to take; what publicity material has been issued; in what languages that material has been written; what public information has been placed in the British ethnic press and broadcasting media; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: An information leaflet prepared initially in English, to explain the implications of the new visa requirements, has been made available to inquirers. It has been sent to many immigration, community relations and advice organisations and to the ethnic press.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has given to airlines about nationals, affected by the provisions of the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules", Cmnd. 9914, settled in the United Kingdom, who do not require visas to return, within two years of departure, to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The details of the new visa requirements given to airlines operating international flights into the United Kingdom included details of visa exemptions for those settled in the United Kingdom who return within two years of their embarkation.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if nationals, subject to the provisions of the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules", Cmnd. 9914, and who wish to comply with immigratiion rules requiring that couples should have met prior to entry clearance interviews, will be able to obtain visas to visit the United Kingdom for the purpose of meeting their fiancés/fiancées;

(2) if nationals, subject to the provisions on the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules", Cmnd. 9914, will be eligible for a visa to visit the United Kingdom for the purpose of attending any appeals in connection with a refusal to grant entry clearance for settlement; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if nationals, subject to the provisions on the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules", Cmnd. 9914, will be able to apply for a visa to visit the United Kingdom for the purpose of obtaining a DNA test; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Cmnd. 9914 makes no change to the substantive criteria in paragraphs 17 to 20 of the immigration rules for admission as a visitor, other than to require those coming for a visit to obtain a visa.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what documents students seeking a visa to the United Kingdom, who are covered by the provisions of the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules", Cmnd. 9914, require; what evidence they are required to offer to show ability to meet the cost of their tuition; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Those applying for a visa for admission as a student should produce evidence to establish that they meet the requirements of paragraphs 21 to 23 of the "Statement of changes in the Immigration Rules" (HC 169), in particular that they have enrolled for a course of study. A prospective student who has not yet enrolled on a course of study may also be granted a visa to come to this country for a short period to seek a place on such a course.

DNA Testing

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place between his Department and Imperial Chemical Industries about the commercial development of DNA testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: ICI has held preliminary discussions about its plans for commercial developments of DNA testing with officials of the Department.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans have been made for a trial of DNA testing by his Department; how many applicants are included in the trial; from what countries the applicants originate; who will analyse the DNA tests; where that analysis will take place; what criteria have been used to identify those taking part in the trial; and if they will be charged fees;

(2) what information has been given to interested individuals and organisations about the progress of the DNA trial; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what plans have been made for a pilot study in connection with DNA tests; how many applicants are included in the study; in which countries the applicants live; who will analyse the DNA tests; where that analysis will take place; what criteria have been used to identify the applicants taking part in the pilot study; if the applicants taking part in the pilot study will be charged fees; what information has been given to interested individuals and organisations about the progress of the pilot study; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: We plan to hold a trial applying DNA testing to a sample of about 40 immigration cases, drawn from various countries, where a parent-child relationship is fundamental to the claim to enter or remain in the United Kingdom. The details have yet to be finalised. Dr. Jeffreys of the University of Leicester has agreed to undertake the analysis. There will be no additional fee other than the normal entry clearance fee payable by entry clearance applicants.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed our proposals with representatives of a number of interested organisations in April. Families invited to participate in the trial will be given full information.

Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how observations from interested persons or organisations should be submitted for Lord Colville's report on the operation during 1986 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984.

Mr. Hurd: Observations, at this stage in writing, should be sent to Lord Colville direct or received on his behalf by the Home Office, F4 division, not later than 28 November 1986.

Immigration

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations have been made by right hon. and hon. Members to Ministers in his Department about (a) port refusals and (b) other immigration matters in each month since May.

Mr. Waddington [pursuant to his reply, 23 October 1986]: Since May the number of stops on removal made by right hon. and hon. Members in port refusal cases has been as follows:

	Numbers
June	710
July	886
September	979

The available information as to the number of representations made on all immigration matters relates to the number of immigration files[1] created. Since May the numbers, which include cases arising from port refusals, have been as follows:

June	1,728
July	1,279
August	1,255
September	1,745

[1] Notes:
1. These figures include a small number of letters dealing with general issues rather than individual cases.
2. Representations made on behalf of a single family may be counted as more than one case where the immigration circumstances of more than one member of the family are under consideration.
3. Further representations made after reply has been sent are included separately in these figures.
4. Representations received about the same case from more than one right hon. Member or hon. Member are counted separately.
5. Not all stops were followed by written representations.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

General Certificate of Secondary Education

11. Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what advice he has given in reply to representations from the Wales Comprehensive Parents' Association about the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The letter from the Wales Comprehensive School Parents' Association was received last May. The Department's reply set out the support which has been given to the GCSE both to provide books and equipment and for the programme of preparation for teachers.

27. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received on the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education syllabus.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received some 150 letter about the introduction of the GCSE since the beginning of September. Ministers have also recently met representatives of the National Association of Head Teachers and my right hon. Friend hopes to meet representatives of the Secondary Heads Association next month.

Research and Development

12. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will estimate the level of direct financial support from industry and commerce for research and development in Britain's higher education establishments; how this compares with the European and United States experience; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Universities' income from British industry and commerce for research and development in 1984-85 totalled £47 milion, compared with £23 million in 1981-82. Comparable figures for the public sector of higher education and for other countries are not available. However, in the wider context of gross domestic expenditure on R and D, some 40 per cent. of UK expenditure is financed by industry, compared with about 50 per cent. and 60 per cent. in the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany respectively.

Teachers (In-service Training)

13. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consultations are taking place on his implementation of provisions for in-service training of teachers contained in the Education Bill.

Mrs. Rumbold: A wide range of interests were consulted earlier this year. The local authorities are now submitting their detailed proposals for implementation to my right hon. Friend. A number of bodies, mainly representing providers of training, are making further comments to him.

29. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from teachers' unions about the level of funding for in-service training.

Mrs. Rumbold: No representations have been received from the teacher unions concerning the level of funding announced by my right hon. Friend on 7 August.

Teachers (Pay)

15. Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress he has made in reforming the teachers' pay negotiating machinery.

49. Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about his plans for the future of the Burnham committee.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I accept that there are strong grounds for changing the present arrangements for settling teachers' pay and conditions of service, but we need to be clear that new arrangements will work better. The proposals made so far in the current talks do not pass that test.

17. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement as to progress on the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service negotiations on teachers' pay.

Mrs. Rumbold: The employers and unions intend to meet in Nottingham for more talks on 8 November. The NAS/UWT has called a series of half-day strikes for the week beginning 3 November. This scandalous act will be condemned by all those concerned about children's education.

Children (Special Educational Needs)

18. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidance he gives to local education authorities on the speed with which they deal with the assessment of children with special educational needs.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has issued no such guidance to local education authorities.

Non-advanced Further Education

20. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the future funding of non-advanced further education.

26. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the future funding of non-advanced further education.

60. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the future funding of non-advanced further education.

68. Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the future funding of non-advanced further education.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend receives representations from local education authority representatives and others from time to time.

National Advisory Board (Planning Exercise)

21. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what impact he expects the Government's funding intentions for advanced further education in the public sector in 1987-88 to have on National Advisory Board planning.

70. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the proposals of the National Advisory Body for Public Sector Higher Education.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend proposed in August that the resources available for polytechnics and colleges should increase by £54 million, or 8 per cent., in 1987-88. The National Advisory Body has accepted that this is fully adequate to meet student demand and will plan accordingly.

32. Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education on the National Advisory Board planning exercise 1987-88.

56. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education on the National Advisory Board planning exercise.

57. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education on the National Advisory Board planning exercise 1987-88.

62. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education on the National Advisory Board planning exercise 1987-88.

Mr. Walden: I refer hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown), and for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist).

Sex Education

22. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he plans to bring into effect the provisions of the Education Bill relating to sex education.

Mrs. Rumbold: Subject to royal assent, the requirement to offer any sex education within a moral context supportive of family life will come into force two months after enactment. Control over the content and organisation of sex education will pass to the governing bodies of county, controlled and maintained special schools when these are reconstituted.

Parental Choice

23. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has to extend parental choice within the state school system.

Mr. Dunn: Our 1980 Act substantially increased parents' rights in school admissions and established the assisted places scheme. Our current Bill to increase parental influence over their children's schooling is a powerful extension of that choice. Additionally, my right hon. Friend has announced plans to establish a network of city technology colleges, to offer a further choice of school to the parents and children of our cities.

School Equipment

24. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the provision of equipment in schools.

28. Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the provision of equipment in schools.

36. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the provision of equipment in schools.

55. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the provision of equipment in schools.

69. Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the provision of equipment in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received no representations arising from Her Majesty's Inspectorate's judgment on the provision of equipment in schools in its report on "The Effects of Local Authority Expenditure Policies on Education Provision in England — 1985". Provision for equipment, as for all other aspects of the education, is discussed annually with representatives of the local authorities.

University Grants Committee

25. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the Association of University Teachers about the future funding of the University Grants Committee.

44. Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the Association of University Teachers about the future funding of the University Grants Committee.

48. Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the Association of University Teachers about the future funding of the University Grants Committee.

66. Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the Association of University Teachers about the future funding of the University Grants Committee.

Mr. Walden: I refer hon. Members to my reply to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) earlier today.

School Buildings

30. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his Department now proposes to make available additional resources for the repair and maintenance of school buildings.

Mr. Dunn: The Government's proposals for local authority expenditure in 1987-88 imply an increase of over 14 per cent. in planned expenditure on education, compared with this year's plans. It is for local education authorities to deploy their resources, but the Government believe that they should give high priority to the better repair and maintenance of school buildings. The plans allow for a substantial increase in expenditure for this purpose, provided that authorities contain their other costs.

35. Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the standard of maintenance of school buildings.

43. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the standard of maintenance of school buildings.

53. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the standard of maintenance of school buildings.

58. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received on the report of Her Majesty's Inspectorate with regard to the standard of maintenance of school buildings.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis) and for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours).

Secondary Education (West Essex)

31. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further representations he has received about the proposed reorganisation of secondary education in west Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Objections have been received in respect of statutory proposals published by Essex local education authority on 16 May to reorganise secondary and further education in the west Essex area. Comments on the objections are awaited from the authority.

Mathematics Teachers

33. Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further proposals he has to increase the number of teachers of mathematics in schools.

40. Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further proposals he has to increase the number of teachers of mathematics in schools.

64. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further proposals he has to increase the number of teachers of mathematics in schools.

65. Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further proposals he has to increase the number of teachers of mathematics in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave on Friday 24 October to my hon. Friend the Member for Wansdyke (Mr. Aspinwall).

Education Standards

34. Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further action he is taking to improve education standards.

Mrs. Rumbold: All the Government's education policies are in pursuance of my right hon. Friend's main aim, which is to improve standards throughout the education service and increase the value obtained from the substantial resources allocated to it.

Details of many of the Government's initiatives to improve standards, and the practical measures taken and planned to give them effect, were set out in the White Papers "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) and "Working Together—Education and Training" (Cmnd. 9823).

First Degree Students

37. Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the number of first degree students enrolling in the current academic year at universities.

54. Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the number of first degree students enrolling in the current academic year at universities.

59. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the number of first degree students enrolling in the current academic year at universities.

63. Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the number of first degree students enrolling in the current academic year at universities.

Mr. Walden: Figures for 1986-87 are not yet available. Early indications suggest that there will be a small increase of around 1 per cent. in the total numbers of home full-time and sandwich first degree students in universities in Great Britain compared with the previous year.

Mature Students

38. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received about the level of grant provision for mature students.

Mr. Walden: My right hon Friend receives representations about many aspects of the student support arrangements. It is not possible to distinguish those which relate mainly or exclusively to the level of grant provision for mature students.

School Books

39. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the level of expenditure on school text books by local education authorities in England and Wales.

50. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the level of expenditure on school text books by local education authorities in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: In 1984-85, the latest available year for which firm figures are available, local education authorities in England spent a total of £63 million on books in primary and secondary schools. Expenditure in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

School Sports Facilities

41. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress is being made in encouraging more dual use of school sports facilities, as recommended in paragraph 56 of the second report from the Environment Committee, Session 1985-86.

Mr. Dunn: Proposals in the Education Bill aim to encourage the greater dual use of school facilities. Additionally a research project has been initiated to look into charging policies and to provide practical guidance.

School Services

45. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to increase incentives to schools to improve their services to pupils.

Mr. Dunn: The Education Bill contains various measures to increase schools' responsiveness to the communities they serve. In particular, governing bodies will be more broadly based and have effective powers, including an appropriate measure of financial responsibility.

Primary Schools

46. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will bring forward proposals to support educational projects similar to the Cranborne Chase project for rural primary schools throughout England.

Mr. Dunn: Fourteen LEAs in England are currently in receipt of educational support grant for pilot projects to improve the quality or range of the curriculum in primary schools in rural areas. The Cranborne Chase project is one of two being supported in Dorset. Regular evaluation is a feature of all the projects, the objective being to assist LEAs to experiment in ways capable of replication in other rural areas of the country.

Free Speech

47. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the latest discussions he has had concerning the maintenance of free speech in universities and polytechnics.

Mr. Walden: Pursuant to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend on 1 July, at column 474, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State wrote on 7 August inviting the bodies concerned to seek a further meeting with officials to discuss freedom of speech before the resumption on 21 October of the Report stage of the Education Bill. A response to that invitation was received only on 17 October and a meeting with officials took place yesterday. In addition, on 16 October my hon. Friend the Minister of State discussed with representatives of the Catholic Education Council and the Church of England Board of Education the bearing of the proposed legislation on the voluntary colleges.

University Funding

51. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the funding of universities in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Walden: The funding of the universities in 1987-88 and later years is currently under review, as promised in the statement by my right hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-East (Sir K. Joseph) on 20 May.

School Governors

52. Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to seek to alter the powers given to school governors.

Mr. Dunn: One of the main purposes of the Education Bill is to guarantee reconstituted governing bodies significant powers in running individual schools.

Secondary School Pupils (Expenditure)

61. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent per pupil in secondary schools in England in real terms in 1978 and in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what are the comparable figures for secondary schools in Staffordshire.

Mr. Dunn: Local education authorities in England spent an average of £945 per secondary pupil in 1978-79 and £1,085 in 1984-85. The comparable figures for Staffordshire are £945 and £1,025. The cash figures for 1978-79 have been repriced to 1984-85 prices using the gross domestic product (market prices) deflator.

Erith School

71. Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to visit Erith school.

Mr. Dunn: No.

Teachers (Shortage)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the shortage of teachers of mathematics, sciences and craft, design and technology in schools.

42. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the shortage of teachers of mathematics, sciences and craft, design and technology in schools.

67. Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the shortage of teachers of mathematics, sciences and craft, design and technology in schools.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the shortage of teachers of mathematics, sciences and craft, design and technology in schools.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) and for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett).

Design Courses

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of full-time students in higher education currently on design-related courses compared with the number five years ago.

Mr. Walden: In 1984 there were 27,000 full-time and sandwich students in higher education in Great Britain on art and design courses compared with 18,000 in 1979. 1985 university figures are not yet available. In English public sector higher education the number was 23,000 compared to 22,000 in 1984.

Council for Educational Technology

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the current membership of the Council for Educational Technology, indicating in each case the basis on which the member was appointed.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is as follows:

Youth Service (Report)

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when the report on the youth service, compiled after receiving responses from local education authorities, will be released; and whether copies will be available in the Library.

Mr. Dunn: An analysis of the responses to circular 1/85 received from local education authorities is nearing completion and will be made freely available to hon. Members and others in due course.

Mid-day Supervision

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy that mid-day supervision of school children be part of the detailed contractual negotiations between representatives of the teachers' unions and the employers.

Mr. Dunn The Government accepted last year that mid-day supervision should not be a duty of teachers under their contracts of employment as teachers. We have made education support grant available to assist local education authorities to recruit mid-day supervisors: these may be teachers employed under separate contracts, or non-teaching staff.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those local authorities that have a pupil-teacher ratio of 15·4:1 or better in their secondary schools.

Mr. Dunn: The following local education authorities in England had pupil-teacher ratios of 15·4:1 or less in their maintained secondary schools in January 1986:

	Ratio
Barnet	14·5
Brent	12·0
Croydon	15·2

Students (Payments)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether new students receiving grants for the first time in the current year have suffered longer delays in receiving their cheques; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I am not aware that, in general, grant payments to new students in the current academic year have been made any later than is usual. Inevitably there are occasionally circumstances which lead to delays in particular cases.

Nursery Education

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Cambridgeshire, North-East of 22 October, whether he will list the number of pupils aged under five years receiving education in January 1979 in (a) nursery classes of maintained primary schools, (b) nursery schools and

(c) all under fives in maintained schools, together with the proportion these represent of the three and four-year-old population.

Mr. Dunn: The number of pupils aged under five receiving education in January 1979 in (a) nursery classes of maintained primary schools (b) nursery schools and (c) all under-fives in maintained schools, together with the proportion these represent of the three and four-year-old population are given in the table.

TRANSPORT

Roads (Inquiries)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to modify the public inquiry procedure for major roads and motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: For the majority of road proposals the public inquiry system works well. Most inquiries last less than 14 days. A few are lengthy and this is a matter for concern. Procedures are kept under review. Suggestions for change are given careful consideration. The scope for change is limited by the Government's concern to safeguard the rights of objectors.

Pedestrian Crossings

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on changes to the timings on pedestrian crossings which are heavily used by either elderly people or children.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the then Minister of State for Transport, to his similar question on October 24 1985 at column 187. It is expected that the revised Pelican Pedestrian Crossing Regulations and General Directions 1969 (as amended) will be laid at the end of the year.

Driving Licences

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many applicants for (a) car and (b) lorry goods driving licences there have been in each of the last five years; and what percentage of these applicants did not pass the test.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The information required is not readily available from a common source and in precisely the format required. Figures which can be provided are as follows:

(a) In each of the past five calendar years DVLC has received applications for driving licences as below:

	Applications (millions)	First application[1]
1981	6·2	1·4
1983	6·3	1·2
1984	5·7	1·4
1985	5·6	1·3

[1] those who have not yet passed a driving test, included in the total.

Details of applications received for driving tests and the failure rates are:

	Applications received (not applicants)	Percentage failure rate
1981	1,837·254	52
1982	1,891·615	52

	Applications received (not applicants)	Percentage failure rate
1983	1,916,951	51
1985	1,935,244	51

(b) Details for HGV (lorry) applications are not available for calendar years. But the following information is available HGV licence applications

		Provisional HGV licences issued included in the total
1 October 1980 to 30 September 1981	361,400	55,200
1 October 1981 to 30 September 1982	351,700	53,500
1 October 1982 to 30 September 1983	376,700	52,700
1 October 1983 to 31 March 1984	177,700	28,700
1 April 1984 to 31 March 1985	351,100	57,000
1 April 1985 to 31 March 1986	365,700	60,600

Applications for HGV driving tests in the following five calendar years are

Applications received

Year		Per cent. Failed
1981	33,345	44
1982	34,032	45
1983	33,977	45
1984	38,038	45
1985	42,638	46

Driving Test

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied that the current driving test is adequate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I am satisfied that the current driving test is soundly based and provides an adequate assessment of a candidate's basic driving skills.

M11 (Extension)

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made with the extension of the M11 southwards into London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no plans to extend the M11. Following public inquiries, orders have been made fixing the line of the A12 Hackney Wick to M11 link road. This will provide a new all-purpose dual carriageway relieving traffic-congested shopping and residential streets through Stratford, Leyton, Leytonstone and Wanstead. The necessary consultation and statutory procedures in respect of the intermediate interchanges and land acquisition are now being undertaken.

Disabled People (Public Transport)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration his Department has given to the document "All Change: A Consumer Study of Public Transport Handicap in Greater London", published by the Greater London Association for Disabled People, a copy of which has been sent to him; if there is any action he will be taking on its recommendations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We were interested to receive the GLAD report. We shall be giving careful consideration to the recommendations contained in it and I shall be meeting representatives of GLAD shortly to discuss them. The Department of Transport has a long-standing commitment to ensuring that the transport needs of people with disabilities are given a high priority.

Stansted Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the chairman of the North of England Regional Consortium about subsidy to Stansted Airport; if there is any action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I have received a letter from the chairman to which I have replied. I have made it clear that I consider the provisions of the Airports Act 1986 fully adequate to ensure the prevention of unfair cross-subsidy leading to pricing policies which harm, or are intended to harm, another airport's business.

M25 (Construction Time)

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state the total time the M25 motorway has been under construction.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Fourteen years. Work started in March 1972 on the section between Reigate and Godstone. The first section open to traffic was between junctions 23 and 24 (A1-A111), in September 1975. The final section, between junctions 21A and 23 (A405-A1), is to open on 29 October.

M25 (Service Areas)

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many motorway service areas will be operational on the M25 motorway when it is completed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None. The motorway service area at South Mimms will provide fuel from mid-November, and is expected to be fully open in the spring. Tenders have been obtained for a site at Thurrock and I aim to announce a decision on this shortly. The proposal for a site at Clacket Lane near Westerham is currently being considered at a public inquiry. We are still examining the possibility of a site at Iver on the west side of the M25.

M25 (Repair and Maintenance)

Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects all carriageways of the M25 motorway to be completely open to traffic and unimpeded by repair or maintenance work.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The final section of the M25 is to be opened to traffic on 29 October. It is not possible to predict the timing of all maintenance work on the 117 miles of motorway, the earliest section of which is over 10 years old. Works to relieve congestion on certain sections and to improve safety are under way or planned, in addition to necessary maintenance work, including routine and emergency maintenance. I drove around on Monday 27 October without hindrance.

Lorry Ban (London)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation took place between his Department and the London residuary body prior to the announcement to relax the former Greater London council's lorry ban.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None. The way in which the London residuary body is administering the London borough's lorry ban as its agent is not a matter for me so the question of consultation did not arise.

Aircraft (Engines)

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy towards the use of marginally unserviceable engines with regard to extended twin-engined aircraft operations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority is statutorily responsible for aviation safety. It has informed me that the use of marginally unserviceable engines is not permitted for any purpose, least of all for extended range twin-engined operation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Entry Certificates

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the towns in Ghana and Nigeria where personal applications can be made for entry certificates.

Mr. Eggar: Accra in Ghana and Lagos and Kaduna in Nigeria.

Visas

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any consideration is being given, following the Government's decision to extend visa requirements for some visitors to Britain, to establish any additional British posts in the countries affected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. But entry clearances are now being issued in Madras. Three entry clearance officers have been posted there.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements are being made by British overseas posts in countries whose nationals are subject to the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules," Cmnd. 9914, to ensure that interviews in connection with visa applications are recorded, that the explanatory statements are prepared within fixed time limits and that entry clearance officers' handwritten notes are also made available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Entry clearance officers are under instruction to take notes of all interviews and to despatch explanatory statements as soon as practicable after receipt of an appeal. The independent appellate authorities will shortly be considering the value of experimental cases in which the vital exchanges of an entry clearance officer's record of interview are incorporated verbatim into the explanatory statement.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken by British posts in countries whose nationals are subject to the provisions of the "Statement of change in Immigration Rules," Cmnd. 9914, to distribute widely information about the requirements of visa applications written in local languages; what consideration has been given to extending independent advice facilities overseas; of the sort provided by the United Kingdom Immigration Advisory Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: A Home Office leaflet explaining how the recent statement of change in immigration rules affect nationals of India, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka is being sent to all entry clearance issuing posts for reprinting in the local language as necessary. Any extension of independent advice facilities overseas is a matter for the agencies concerned.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement explaining more fully the criteria to be observed by British entry clearance officers overseas in deciding whether visa applications by those wishing to visit the United Kingdom fall within the categories of compassionate, medical or other particularly compelling circumstances; and if he will identify what documentation entry clearance officers will require to make such judgments.

Mr. Eggar: Applications for visit visas in the subcontinent are at present normally dealt with on the day they are received. Because circumstances vary from case to case no detailed criteria are laid down, nor is essential documentation defined, in connection with cases requiring a higher degree of urgency.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the minimum and maximum cost of appointing extra entry clearance officers in Dhaka, Accra, Islamabad and Karachi.

Mr. Eggar: The estimated average costs (that is, allowing for marital status and other factors) based on 1986-87 prices are:

Accra	106,300
Islamabad	89,000
Karachi	104,400

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs during what hours each day British posts in Dhaka, Islamabad, Karachi, Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, New Delhi and Accra are open to receive personal calls related to visa applications; on which days during each year each post is shut; what arrangements are being made for staffing of entry clearance offices to ensure the taking of holiday leave does not increase the time taken to consider visa applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is as follows:

Post	Hours open to public
Dhaka	0730 to 1400
Islamabad	0800 to 1230
Karachi	0800 to 1230

Post	Hours open to public
Bombay	0800 to 1130
Calcutta	0900 to 1230
Madras	0900 to 1230
New Delhi	0900 to 1230
Accra	0745 to 1145

Posts are instructed as far as possible to ensure that officers take leave outside the seasonal peak period for which, at all posts, additional summer relief staff are provided to cope with increased demand.

I shall write to the hon. Member about the public holidays taken by each post.

Expo 86

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who was responsible for the design and layout of the British pavilion at Expo 86 in Vancouver.

Mr. Eggar: The Central Office of Information was commissioned by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to undertake the design and layout of the British pavilion. It consulted many other organisations, including private sector design companies, the Department of Transport, the British Overseas Trade Board, and British Rail.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the British Government spent on the British pavilion at Expo 86 in Vancouver.

Mr. Eggar: We contributed £1·5 million, from Foreign and Commonwealth Office overseas information funds, to the cost of the pavilion. Expos of this type are intended primarily for the education of the public, in this case on the theme of transportation and communications.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what other British organisations contributed towards the cost of the British pavilion at Expo 86 in Vancouver; and how much in each case.

Mr. Eggar: In addition to the £1·5 million from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, 96 British companies provided exhibits, and financed the construction of a VIP lounge within the pavilion, at an estimated total cost of £3 million. Ten regional tourist organisations in Britain provided staff to assist at the information desk. Details of the cost of these contributions are not readily available.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the British pavilion at Expo 86 in Vancouver.

Mr. Eggar: One parliamentary question and nine letters from the public, three of which were forwarded by hon. Members, have been received about the British pavilion at Expo 86.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many European Economic Community regulations, directives and other decisions of the Council of Ministers were brought before the House, in total and by type, during 1985;

(2) in respect of what percentage of those European Economic Community regulations, directives and other decisions of the Council of Ministers brought before the House in 1985 for debate with a recommendation for a decision, the Council's decision had already been published in the European Economic Community's Official Journal before the House debated them.

Mr. Biffen: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has asked me to reply on his behalf.

A total of 430 European Community documents incorporating proposals by the Commission were deposited in Parliament in 1985. Of these 283 (66 per cent.) were proposals for council regulations, 63 (15 per cent.) proposals for Council directives, and 84 (19 per cent.) proposals for council decisions. In the same year, following recommendations from the Commons Select Committee on European Legislation, 43 documents — some of which would have been deposited before 1985 — were debated either on the Floor of the House or in Standing Committee, of which 25 (58 per cent.) concerned regulations, 16 (37 per cent.) directives, and 2 (5 per cent.) were decisions. 3 proposals (7 per cent. of those debated) were formally adopted by the Council of Ministers before the House had debated them. Two of these had been agreed by the Committee as being suitable for adoption before debate by the House; as for the third, the Chairman of the Commons Select Committee on European Legislation was informed of the position in accordance with the procedure laid down in the House of Commons resolution of 30 October 1980.

ENVIRONMENT

Thamesmead

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the transfer of assets in Thamesmead from the London Residuary Body to Thamesmead Town Limited.

Mr. Chope: Since January there have been eight direct written representations, all from hon. Members. If my hon. Friend would let me know which aspects interest him, I should be glad to write to him.

Green Belt (Developments)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department intends to issue any planning guidelines for out of town shopping centre developments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our existing policy on planning and large new retail developments was set out by my right hon. Friend the Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Jenkin) in an answer he gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, West (Mr. Butterfill) on 5 July 1985, in which he said inter alia:—

"Since commercial competition as such is not a land-use planning consideration, the possible effects of a proposed major retail development on existing retailers is not in this sense a relevant factor in deciding planning applications and appeals. It will be necessary, however, to take account in exceptional circumstances of the cumulative effects of other recent and proposed large scale retail developments in the locality, and to consider whether they are on such a scale and of a kind that they could seriously affect the vitality and viability of a nearby town centre as a whole—for example, whether they seem likely to result in a significant increase in vacant properties, or a marked reduction in the range of services the town centre provides, such as could lead to its general physical deterioration and to the detriment of its future place in the economic and social life of the community. Town centres need to maintain their diversity and activity if they are to retain their vitality, but the range and variety of shops and services will change, as they have always done, in response to changing conditions." — [Official Report, 5 July 1985; c. 277.]

We also propose to make a direction requiring local planning authorities to consult the Department before granting permission for retail developments of 250,000 sq ft or more, to enable my right hon. Friend to consider whether the application should be referred to him for decision under section 35 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971.

Dogs

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to permit local authorities to introduce local licensing and warden systems for dogs.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. As my right hon. Friend announced on 23 July — [column 266] — the Government have decided to abolish the dog licence when a suitable legislative opportunity arises.

Public Record Office (Air Conditioning)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make a statement on the air conditioning system of the Public Record Office at Kew, and the work so far undertaken by the Property Services Agency; what has been the total cost to public funds of rectification of the difficulties over the last five years; and what attempt is being made to identify the persons or firms responsible and recover the expenditure from them.

Mr. Chope: An independent review of the building, its plant and services, was commissioned by the PSA in 1984. This has revealed no major faults in the building or its services. A number of improvements were recommended to enhance the working environment overall and better to safeguard the stored records, including a new computer control and monitoring system, new lighting, new steam humidifiers, and overhaul of the air distribution system and new duct work on the repository floor. Work on these improvements is now virtually complete at a cost of £750,000. Of this, £205,000 is directly attributable to the air conditioning system. Over the past five years a total of £1,186,000 has been spent on air conditioning, including £800,000 on routine and regular maintenance.

The independent review has confirmed that the original designs of the air conditioning system were fully in accordance with the standards which applied at the time. In the light of that review there is no case for claiming recovery of the subsequent costs incurred.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reply to the Devon county council solicitor's letter of 17 September regarding housing powers of county councils as it applies to the Torbay ring road and properties at Churscombe green at Marldon.

Mr. Tracey: The Department is replying to this letter today.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost of transferring personnel from the present Property Services agency area works in York, including travelling expenses.

Mr. Chope: The latest management estimate of transfer costs arising from the move of staff from York to Leeds is £363,000 over three years.

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the square footage currently used by the Property Services Agency area works office in York.

Mr. Chope: The area of accommodation occupied by Area Office York staff is 12,820 sq ft.

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what alternative office accommodation is being considered for the staff currently employed at the Property Services Agency area works office in York; and at what cost per square foot by comparison with existing accommodation.

Mr. Chope: I shall answer this question shortly.

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much public money has been available to the Leicester city council for the provision and for the improvement, respectively, of public sector housing in each of the last 10 years for which records are available.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 28 October 1986]: Local authorities are free to determine how to spend the resources available to them for capital expenditure. My Department does not have information about the total resources available to individual authorities over the past 10 years, which since 1981-82 have included use of the prescribed proportion of capital receipts. The housing investment programme allocations to Leicester city council, which represent permission for the council to borrow money to finance capital expenditure, have been as follows:

1977-78	19·923
1978-79	22·681
1979-80	20·524
1980-81	17·379
1981-82	17·036
1982-83	18·496
1983-84	17·373
1984-85	18·900
1985-86	15·000
1986-87	13·200

The council's total capital expenditure on housing has been considerably larger, and in 1985-86 was over £28 million.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing subsidy paid to each London borough, metropolitan district and non-metropolitan district in each of the years from 1978-79 to 1986-87, expressed in constant 1986-87 prices.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 23 October 1986]: I am placing in the Library the information requested for the years 1981-82 to 1986-87 inclusive. Information for the years prior to 1981-82, when the present housing subsidy system came into operation, cannot be provided except at undue cost.

Hospitals (Infection Prevention)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the working group on the prevention of infection in hospitals was set up; who were the members of it; what were its terms of reference; what was its method of operation; when its report was completed; if it is to be published; what action is being taken on its recommendations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Hospital Infection Working Group was convened in September 1985.

The chairman of the working group is Professor E. M. Cooke of the Central Public Health Laboratory Service, Director of Hospital Infection.

Other members of the working group are:

Professor G. Ayliffe — Director of the Hospital Infection Research Laboratory, Birmingham
Dr. J. A. Child — Consultant Clinical Haematologist and Physician at Leeds General Infirmary
Dr. R. T. Mayon-White — Consultant Epidemiologist, John Radcliffe Hospital, Oxford
Mr. M. Ruane — District General Manager, Central Manchester Health Authority
Ms. L. J. Taylor — Clinical Nurse, Central Public Health Laboratory, Director of Hospital Infection
Mrs. M. A. Worsley — Senior Nurse on Central of North Manchester Health Authority
Dr. A. P. Gillett — Stoke Mandeville Hospital
Dr. C. L. R. Bartlett — of Public Health Laboratory Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre

DHSS officers also participated and provided the secretariat.

The terms of reference were:

"To provide expert support to the DHSS in its central coordinating role in the field of infection control in hospitals; to revise the guidance on the management of infection control in hospitals including monitoring; to highlight any gaps in guidance on infection control in hospitals relating to specific areas; and to highlight current guidance or practice that is not cost effective".

As their first task the group were asked to prepare draft guidance on management arrangements for hospital infection control. In undertaking this task they have taken account of relevant recommendations in the report of the Stanley Royd hospital inquiry. The group's method of operation was by discussion of papers prepared by individual members, who collectively have considerable expertise and experience of all aspects of this subject. The final version of the group's recommended guidance on management arrangements for hospital infection control is imminent. We shall consider urgently the best way of promulgating this advice.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Hypnotherapy

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what representations he has received about the provision of hypnotherapy by the National Health Service; and what response he has given;

(2) what organisations regulating the use of hypnotherapy are recognised by his Department; and what is his estimate of the number of recognised hypnotherapists in England and Wales.

Mrs. Currie: We have received a representation proposing legislation to restrict the title of "hypnotherapist", and the practice of hypnotherapy, to members of certain professions, but this was not concerned with the National Health Service but with people who offer hypnotherapy privately.

I am aware that within the National Health Service a number of doctors, dentists and psychologists make use of hypnosis for different purposes, but they are employed as doctors, dentists and psychologists, and are regulated by their relative professional bodies.

The Department is aware of the existence of several organisations which offer training leading to some form of qualification in hypnotherapy. Hypnotherapy, however, is not a registered profession and there is no officially recognised qualification.

There are no centrally collected figures, either of those using hypnotic techniques within the Health Service, or of those using them more generally.

Elderly People

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list for each social services authority area the number of people over 75 years of age in (a) 1979 and (b) 1985, or whenever the latest figures are available; and what percentage change this represents;

(2) if he will list for each social services authority area the number of people in residential care for the elderly in (a) local authority homes, (b) private homes and (c) voluntary homes; and what percentage change this represents from the numbers in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1984.

Mrs. Currie: Copies of the latest available data have been placed in the Library.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the number of people in residential care for the elderly in (a) local authority homes, (b) private homes and (c) voluntary homes; and what percentage change this represents in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1984.

Mrs. Currie: The available data are given in the table.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of places provided for the elderly in both public sector and privately-owned establishments in each of the last seven years.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 27 October 1986]: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to residential establishments rather than hospitals or nursing establishments. The available data are given in the table.

Local authority and registered residential care homes for the elderly and disabled.

Health Authorities (Property)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what requirements are made of, or advice given to, regional and district health authorities when they are deciding on the disposal of property surplus to their health requirements; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The National Health Service Handbook on Land Transactions, a copy of which will be placed in the Library, provides detailed advice to health authorities on all aspects of land transactions including the disposal of surplus property.

"The Health Service Today"

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many copies of the leaflet "The Health Service Today" July 1986, were printed; how they were circulated; and what has been the total cost of the operation.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of producing the pamphlet, "The Health Service Today"; how many have been printed; and by what method they were circulated to National Health Service staff.

Mrs. Currie: Six hundred thousand copies of the leaflet "The Health Service Today" were printed, at a cost of £10,900. Copies were sent to all Members of Parliament representing English constituents and to the press. The main distribution is through regional health authorities and family practitioner committees.

Specialist Postgraduate Hospitals

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action has been taken about the future funding of the specialist postgraduate hospitals, which became part of district health authorities on re-organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Funding for the specialist postgraduate hospitals was separately identified from the financial year 1982-83 for a period of three years, during which time the regional and district health authorities concerned have been developing their own plans. The right hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the two regional health authorities concerned — North East and South East Thames — for further details.

Retirement

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the estimated cost in a full year of implementing a retirement age of 60 years for men (a) gross of benefit savings and (b) net of benefit savings.

Mr. Major: Reliable estimates of the costs of reducing men's pension age are extremely difficult because they are highly sensitive to what assumptions are made about how change would affect retirement behaviour and labour market behaviour. At present, our best estimate is that a reduction in men's pension age to 60 would involve a gross cost approaching £5,000 million in a full year. The estimated net cost is about £3,000 million.

Hypothermia

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of deaths in each month in 1985 and 1986 (a) in which hypothermia was cited as a contributory factor and (b) in which hypothermia was cited as the cause.

Mrs. Currie: The tables show the number of deaths registered in England and Wales by month for 1985 and to the latest available month of 1986 (a) with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, irrespective of whether it was or was not stated as the underlying cause of death, and (b) with hypothermia stated as the underlying cause of death. The figures for underlying cause for 1986 exclude deaths at age under 28 days. This is because of the introduction of a neonatal death certificate on 1 January 1986, from which it is not possible to assign an underlying cause of death.

All figures for 1986 are provisional.

[2] Excludes deaths under age 28 days.

n/a = not available

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what measures he intends to take in the winter of 1986-87 to prevent further deaths from hypothermia.

Mr. Major: The Government are supporting initiatives to provide elderly people and those caring for them with advice on how to minimise the effects of cold. A comprehensive new pack of training materials and information on this subject for those in contact with elderly people is being launched today by the Health Education Council. "Warmth in Winter", a leaflet published by the council containing simple, practical advice on keeping warm, aimed directly at elderly people, will also continue to be available.

Considerable help is given towards heating costs through the supplementary benefit scale rates and weekly heating additions. Furthermore, the Government have referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee proposals for a new, simplified system of exceptionally severe weather payments.

Benefits

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Leeds metropolitan district council area are in receipt of (a) child benefit, (b) housing benefit, (c) additional heating allowance, (d) invalidity benefit, (e) mobility allowance and (f) sickness benefit for the latest date available.

Mr. Lyell: The information is as follows:

Housing benefit: information is not available in the precise form requested. The estimated number of rate rebate recipients in the Leeds City Council area in 1985-86 was 99,000.

Invalidity benefit and sickness benefit: no separate figures are available for these benefits. However, at 23 September 1986 there were 13,351 people in the area receiving benefit on account of incapacity for work. (This figure excludes people living in the Wetherby area, because of local office boundaries.)

Child benefit and mobility allowance: these benefits are administered centrally and there is no information specific to Leeds.

Additional heating allowance: the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at excessive cost.

AIDS

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will institute a television advertising campaign advising the public of the danger of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Newton: We are committed to further public education and are actively considering ways of taking this forward, including the use of television.

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is proposing to introduce screening for long-term visitors to the United Kingdom from countries with a high incidence of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for South Hams (Mr. Steen) on 24 October.

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he now intends to introduce regulations to make acquired immune deficiency syndrome a notifiable disease.

Mr. Newton: A system of voluntary reporting of cases on a confidential basis to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre has been established, and we have taken no decision to go beyond this.

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is proposing to encourage the carrying of suitable identity cards by acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus carriers.

Mr. Newton: This is a matter for individual AIDS virus carriers to decide in the light of the counselling provided by health authorities in connection with tests.

Great Ormond Street Hospital

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the current estimated cost of the rehabilitation works in the cardiac wing at Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children;

(2) what is the esitmated date of completion of the rehabilitation works on the cardiac wing at Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children.

Mrs. Currie: The current estimated cost of rehabilitation work to the cardiac wing, Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children is £11,766,000 (exclusive of fees and equipment).

The current estimated date of completion of rehabilitation works is 28 February 1987.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many exceptionally severe weather payments have been made so far in 1986 to claimants in (a) Scotland, (b) England and (c) Wales; and in the case of each country, what was the total amount awarded.

Mr. Lyell: The information is not yet available. Local offices have been asked to make a return so that the number of payments and amounts paid can be calculated. I shall write to the right hon. Member when all of these returns have been received.

Heating Additions

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate the total expenditure during 1985 on all heating additions (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in Scotland.

Mr. Lyell: The latest available information on receipt of heating additions in Great Britain is for December 1984. A copy of the annual statistical inquiry for that year is in the Library. It is estimated that expenditure in Great Britain in 1984-85 was approximately £400 million. I regret that no separate estimate is available of expenditure on heating additions in Scotland.

Information in respect of Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what rates of heating additions are presently available; and how many people in Scotland received each category of heating addition in 1984.

Mr. Lyell: The detailed criteria for receiving heating additions are contained in regulations 11-12 and schedule 4 (part I) of the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations (SI 1983 No. 1399). The rates of addition presently available are shown in the table. Where a claimant is receiving the long-term rate, the available scale margin, presently £1, is offset against the value of additional requirements (including heating additions, with the exception of those paid in respect of children under five). I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply concerning heating additions paid in Scotland in 1984 as soon as possible.

Rates of heating addition (July 1986)

[1] Payable only to those continuously entitled to a central heating addition since before 5 August 1985.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what current amounts are deducted from certificated housing benefit for (a) heating, (b) cooking, (c) hot water and (d) lighting.

Mr. Lyell: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my predecessor to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. Wilson) on 11 February at columns 436-37. There has been no change since then except that the limit for heating increased from £6·55 to £6·70 from 28 July.

National Blood Products Laboratory

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) why the National Blood Products Laboratory at Elstree is behind schedule, when it was originally due to open; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the National Blood Products Laboratory at Elstree will be open;

(3) what estimate he has made of the financial implications for regional health authorities of the delay in the operation of the National Blood Products Laboratory at Elstree.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 24 October 1986]: We expect the new blood products laboratory to be completed during the early part of 1987. Given the "design and build" method used for this development the completion date was impossible to forecast accurately at the outset when we had expected that completion would be a year or so earlier. There is no single identifiable reason for the building taking longer than originally expected other than the complexity of the design being greater than anticipated.

Regional health authorities will need to continue to purchase blood products commercially until the new blood products laboratory is operating fully. The cost of purchasing commercially is currently estimated at around £15 million per annum.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many complaints claiming discrimination against disabled people he received in each year from 1980 to 1985, inclusive; and what his findings were and responses in each case;

(2) how many representations about cases of alleged discrimination against disabled people he has received in each of the years 1980 to 1985 and in the first nine months of the current year; how many such allegations were proved; and what action he took in each case.

Mr. Major [pursuant to the replies, 24 July 1986, c. 437, and 21 October 1986, c. 868]: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the cases sent to us to investigate as a result of the invitation issued at that time to responsible organisations and hon. Members by my hon. Friend the Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi) to send him details of such cases. Since 1 January 1983, 27 cases have been sent to us for consideration and the number investigated in each year was as follows:

	Cases
1983	22
1984	3
1985	2
1986 (first 9 months)	None

There are five cases still under consideration. In those cases where investigations have been completed:

We judged there was no evidence of discrimination in five cases.

There were genuine problems of access in four cases.

Two cases involved commercial judgments, the basis of which could not effectively be checked.

One case concerned maritime regulations laid before Parliament.

One case was a complaint by a disabled person against an employee who was subsequently disciplined for acting against the general policy of the employer.

One case involved a conflict of opinion over the application of "right to buy" housing legislation.

In three cases insufficient information was provided to enable inquiries to be pursued.

Three cases involved judgments by a potential employer, or in one case, a motor sport event organiser, that the individual's disability adversely affected their ability to perform the job in question effectively or safely.

In two cases the problem was resolved in favour of the complainant during the course of our inquiries.

Maternal Deaths

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many of the maternal deaths registered in England and Wales in 1979 to 1984 were of women born in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the Republic of Ireland, (c) the New Commonwealth, (d) India, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka, (e) the West Indies, (f) Africa, (g) Gibraltar, Malta and Cyprus, (h) New Commonwealth countries not included in (a) to (h) and (j) country unstated; and if he will subdivide these into (i) direct maternal deaths, (ii) indirect maternal deaths, (iii) fortuitous maternal deaths and (iv) late maternal deaths.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 27 October 1986]: The table shows the number of deaths registered in England and Wales from 1979 to 1984 by selected country of birthplace for (i) direct and (ii) indirect maternal deaths. From the statistics of death registrations, it is not possible to identify separately either fortuitous or late maternal deaths.

National Association of Young People in Care

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether a decision has yet been reached on the application by the National Association of Young People in Care for financial assistance over the next three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 27 October 1986]: Officials of the Department met with the association last week to discuss the grant application. The association agreed to provide additional information and a decision will be reached as soon as possible after this is received. Meantime an interim grant has been paid.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimate he has made of the number of deaths attributable to drug abuse, particularly heroin addiction, in each of the past five years for which figures are available; and whether there is any discernible relationship between known or estimated length of level of addiction and age of death.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 27 October 1986]: The following table shows separately numbers of deaths where the underlying cause was drug dependence and non-dependent abuse of drugs, particularly morphine type drugs. Information on the relationship between length of level of addiction and age of death is not held centrally.

England and Wales

305·5	Non-dependent abuse of morphine type drugs	1	3	1	4	14

[1] Morphine type includes heroin, methadone and opium and its derivatives.

Diabetics

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make blood glucose monitoring equipment and plastic syringes available on National Health Service prescription for diabetics.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 27 October 1986]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 23 October and to my replies to the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) during the debate on the motion for the Adjournment on the same date, at columns 1431-36.

SCOTLAND

Railway Station, Prestwick

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has held on the possibility of opening a new railway station at Prestwick; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: This proposal has been the subject of discussion between the British Airports Authority, British Rail and Strathclyde Passenger Transport Executive. I understand that there were practical difficulties associated with the provision of a station at the airport. However, the courtesy bus service between the airport and Prestwick town station which emerged from these discussions is proving to be very successful and popular with passengers.

Road Passenger Transport (Jobs)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of all categories of personnel employed in the road passenger transport industry in Scotland as at June 1979 and the same date in each year to 1986.

Mr. Ancram: The total numbers of personnel employed by operators of public service vehicles, as at 31 December 1985, for the years 1979-1985, are as follows:

Year	Numbers
1980	23,807
1981	22,170
1982	21,302
1983	21,704
[1]1985	20,300

[1] The 1985 figure is an average over the whole year as the method of collecting statistics was changed in 1985.

Figures for 1986 are not yet available. There are no equivalent figures for persons employed in the hire-car industry.

Erskine Bridge Toll

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, whether he will now abolish the Erskine bridge toll; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: No.

Ferries

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what reduction there has been in the number of people working for state owned ferries in Scotland since 1 January 1985.

Mr. Ancram: The staff complement of Caledonian MacBrayne was 777 in 1985 and 776 in 1986.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce an equivalent grant along the lines of a road equivalent tariff to offset the cost of ferry transport in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the statement my right hon. Friend made on 21 February 1984, at columns 697-98.

Airports

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the privatisation of Scottish airports.

Mr. Ancram: The four British Airports Authority airports at Aberdeen, Edinburgh, Glasgow and Prestwick will be privatised as subsidiary companies of British Airports Authority plc next year. There will be a Scottish subsidiary holding company, Scottish Airports plc. There are no plans to privatise any other Scottish airports.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps Her Majesty's Government take to regulate tourist traffic at Scottish airports.

Mr. Lang: The British Tourist Authority is the main vehicle for the promotion of overseas tourism to the United Kingdom and does much to encourage visitors to Scotland by all modes of transport. The Scottish Tourist Board is active in considering and promoting ways in which air travel for the prospective tourist to Scotland can be improved. The board's overseas promotion programme, while supplementary to that of the British Tourist Authority, includes a number of marketing ventures in North America, Scandinavia and Germany. These ventures should help to increase arrival at Scottish airports. In particular, "Gateway Scotland" missions in the United States and Canada are geared to promoting direct flights to Scotland.

Rural Scotland

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the disincentive to the development of rural Scotland which results from high air fares from other parts of Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: In general, air fares in Europe are far too high and this is disadvantageous to industry, particularly in remote areas. That is why we are making strenuous efforts, both bilaterally and within the European Community, to allow a greater degree of airline competition.

Pollution

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his written answer to the hon. Member for Falkirk, West on 29 October 1985, Official Report, column 471, and 25 June 1986, Official Report, column 200, what response he has had from his inspectorate about discharges from generating stations.

Mr. Ancram: The inspectorate investigations are continuing. I shall send the hon. Member a copy of the results of the analyses when they are available.

School Leavers

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many school leavers in 1986 within the Banff and Buchan area registered with his Department; and how many are still without employment.

Mr. Lang: The number of unemployed school leavers claiming benefit, aged under 18, in the Banff and Buchan parliamentary constituency on 11 September 1986, the latest date for which information is available, totalled 125. Information about school leaver unemployment is available in the Library, but the statistics do not indicate the date of leaving school.

Labour Statistics

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the total number of (i) males, (ii) females and (iii) young unemployed in the Banff and Buchan constituency since 1983 and the latest figures.

Mr. Lang: The number of (i) males, (ii) females and (iii) young unemployed claimants in the Banff and Buchan parliamentary constituency in each year from 1983 to 1986 is shown in the table. Due to the changes which have taken place in the compilation of the unemployment statistics the figures are not directly comparable. Detailed information is available in the Library.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many long-term unemployed were registered with his Department in the Banff and Buchan area for the years 1983 to the latest figures available for 1986, by age category.

Mr. Lang: The total number of unemployed claimants by age in the Banff and Buchan parliamentary constituency group who had been unemployed for more than one year in July of each year from 1983 to 1986 is shown in the table. This information is available in the Library. Due to the changes which have taken place in the compilation of the unemployment statistics the figures are not directly comparable.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of those working in manufacturing industry in Dundee in 1979; and what is the latest available figure.

Mr. Lang: The estimated number working in manufacturing plants with over 10 employees in Dundee city in 1979 was 29,200 and in 1985 was 15,900. These estimates are taken from the regional data system (RDS). No reliable information is available from this source for plants with fewer than 10 employees. The estimate for 1985 is provisional.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the number of people in Dundee unemployed for one year or more in each year since 1979; and what percentage of the total number of the unemployed they make up in each case.

Mr. Lang: The number of people unemployed for one year or more in the Dundee travel-to-work area in July of each year since 1979, and the percentage of the total unemployed they represent, is shown in the table. This information is available in the Library. The figures are not directly comparable due to the various changes which have taken place in the compilation of the statistics.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the present number of young people in Dundee who have never had a job since leaving school.

Mr. Lang: At 11 September, the latest date for which information is available, the number of people under the age of 18 in the city of Dundee local authority district who have not had a job since leaving school totalled 747.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the average number of people unemployed in Dundee in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lang: The average number of people unemployed in the Dundee travel-to-work area since 1979 is shown in the table. This information is available in the Library. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will disaggregate the latest available unemployment figures for Dundee by age group.

Mr. Lang: At 10 July 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants disaggregated by age group in the city of Dundee local authority district was as shown in the table. This information is available in the Library.

City of Dundee Local Authority District

Rates

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give figures to show, for each year since 1973, the average level of domestic rates, net of rates relief, payable as a percentage of gross household income, excluding those households where rebates are received.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 24 October 1986]: Information to exclude households where rebates are received from data for average domestic rates or gross household income is not available. The estimated average domestic rates bill as a percentage of gross household income in Scotland since 1973 is set out in the table.

M9 (Traffic Control)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the M9 motorway between Glenfarg and the Forth bridge has been subject to width restrictions or contra-flow arrangements during October 1986; and if he will estimate how many traffic cones were placed on that section of road during that period.

Mr. Ancram: I assume the hon. Member is referring to the M90, and not the M9. Four sections of the M90 totalling 10·6 km, about 34 per cent. of the length between Glenfarg and the Forth Road bridge, have had such restrictions this month to enable structural repairs to be carried out. The number of traffic cones is governed by safety requirements, which have recently been strengthened.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 29 October 1986

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

County Courts (Hearings)

Mr. Rowlands asked the Attorney-General what is the average time for appointments before the registrar in the county courts of England and Wales for (a) maintenance hearings and (b) access hearings.

The Attorney-General: The average waiting time for an appointment before a registrar in county courts in England and Wales is six to eight weeks for both maintenance and access hearings.

BBC (Libel Action)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General what action the Director of Public Prosecutions has taken in the light of the evidence of alleged interference with witnesses to the Hamilton-Howarth BBC trial submitted to the police by the hon. Member for Workington.

The Attorney-General: I understand that the only document provided by the hon. Member to the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police is a letter dated 24 November 1984 from Mr. Philip Pedley to Mr. J. S. Gummer, then chairman of the Conservative party. This letter does not justify any police inquiry. No evidence of the nature suggested in the question has been made available to the Director.

ENERGY

North Sea Oil

Mr. Rowlands asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many barrels of crude oil and liquids have been produced in the United Kingdom sector of the North sea in 1986 to date; at what average daily rate; and what his forecast is for production for the whole of 1986.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: United Kingdom North sea production of crude oil and liquids up to the end of August 1986 was 656 million barrels; giving an average daily rate of 2·70 million barrels per day.

Our current expectation for the whole of 1986 is the mid-point of the Brown Book range of 920 to 1,035 million barrels.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

South Africa

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list all aid and the geographical location of the recipients which his Department has given to black people in South Africa;

(2) what funding from the Overseas Development Agency budget, and for what projects, has been given to assist black people in South Africa.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1985 Her Majesty's Government made available almost £1 million, mainly in the fields of education and training, for non-white South Africans. Nearly £700,000 of this was provided direct from aid programme funds; a further £227,000 was spent by the British Council, of which £90,000 was financed by the aid programme. The greater part of the total spending is used to provide training places in Britain. We also support with advice, books and equipment a number of educational and community projects in the Republic of South Africa. The projects are located in different parts of the republic in both rural and urban areas.

WALES

Regional Aid

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for the last year for which figures are available, the total amounts of financial assistance made available for the Welsh Development Agency and the Development Board for Rural Wales, respectively, both in total and per head of the insured population for the areas covered.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information requested is as follows:

	Total resources 1985-86	Resources per member of the economically active population of the area served by each body[2]
	£ million[1]	£
Welsh Development Agency	67·2	57
Development Board for Rural Wales	15·1	197

[1] These figures include Government grants and income generated by the bodies themselves, including proceeds from the sale of land and buildings and rents.

[2] The term "economically active" population corresponds broadly with the insured population. The figures quoted are derived from the economically active population in Wales in 1981—the last date on which figures are readily available.

Highways Act 1980

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985, the applications received for the making by him of public path creation, diversion and extinguishment orders under the powers in sections 26(2) and 120(3) of the Highways Act 1980 stating in each case (a) the community concerned and the number of the footpath or bridleway, (b) whether the application was for a creation, diversion or extinguishment order, (c) whether he agreed to prepare a draft order and (d) where a draft order was prepared, whether or not it subsequently was made.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: There have been no applications.

PRIME MINISTER

Service Communications (Report)

Mr. Kinnock asked the Prime Minister whether she has yet received the report of the Security Commission on the security arrangements at 9 Signal Regiment and the other static communications units of all three services; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Though the members of 9 Signal Regiment who had been charged with offences under the Official Secrets Acts were acquitted, it was clear that some questions remained to be answered about the security arrangements at this and other static communications units of the armed services. As I announced to the House on 12 November 1985, I therefore invited the Security Commission:

"To consider the measures already in hand for improving security arrangements at 9 Signal Regiment and the other static communications units of all three Services, and to advise whether these are adequate or whether any further changes are necessary or desirable."

The commission has now completed its task and has submitted its report. I am most grateful to the chairman, Lord Griffiths, and to Lord Justice Lloyd, Lord Allen of Abbeydale and General Sir Hugh Beach for their work. A Command Paper is being published this afternoon giving the full text of the commission's report, save for five appendices which contain highly classified information which it would not be in the public interest to disclose.

The commission has had access to detailed information about the reviews of security procedures at 9 Signal Regiment and other units which have been carried out by the Ministry of Defence, and I understand that it has taken oral evidence from those who conducted the reviews. In its report the commission commends the urgency and thoroughness of the work which the Ministry of Defence has undertaken, and the speed and readiness with which the recommendations emanating from those reviews were accepted. The commission has endorsed those recommendations and has made three additional ones:

(i.) That there should be random searches of baggage and clothing, including pockets and an occasional "frisk" at static communications units.

(ii.) That any information compiled by a unit security officer indicating that an individual might be "at risk" should be passed on to the next unit security officer when the individual is posted.

(iii.) That, so far as possible, postings of very young service men and women to Cyprus, or to other sensitive locations, should be avoided.

The security objectives set by the commission in these recommendations are fully accepted, and the Ministry of Defence is now urgently considering how to implement them most effectively. The commission believes that when these and the earlier recommendations are fully implemented, everything that can be done will be being done to ensure that, so far as it is humanly possible to do so, the danger of further breaches of security at these highly sensitive units is minimised.

NATIONAL FINANCE

EEC (Interest on Payments)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost of lost interest in United Kingdom payments to the EEC paid in advance of the due date.

Mr. Brooke: There is in effect no interest cost: wherever an advance payment is requested, the Government always take care to ensure that, without it, the Commission would have to draw down and overdraw its non-interest-bearing accounts with member states and/or delay payments to member states.

Northern Ireland (Territorial Block Formula)

Mr. Fallon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the working of the public expenditure territorial block formula for Northern Ireland will be revised to take account of moneys pledged by the United States Government for future financial years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: No. The United States authorities have announced contributions to the international fund for Ireland which the United Kingdom and Irish Governments have agreed to establish. The fund will be used to stimulate private investment and enterprise, to supplement public programmes and to encourage voluntary efforts. These contributions will not affect the working of the formula used in the public expenditure survey to calculate changes to the Northern Ireland public expenditure block budget.

Income Tax

Mr. Leighton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the standard rate of income tax in each year since 1956.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information is in the table:

Standard/Basic Rate of Income Tax
1956-57 to 1986-87

Year	Standard Rate	Year	Standard Rate/Basic Rate	Year	Basic Rate
	Per cent.		Per cent		Per cent.
1956-57	42·50 (33·06)	1966-67	41·25 (32·08)	1976-77	35·00
1957-58	42·50 (33·06)	1967-68	41·25 (32·08)	1977-78	34·00
1958-59	42·50 (33·06)	1968-69	41·25 (32·08)	1978-79	33·00
1959-60	38·75 (30·14)	1969-70	41·25 (32·08)	1979-80	30·00
1960-61	38·75 (30·14)	1970-71	41·25 (32·08)	1980-81	30·00
1961-62	38·75 (30·14)	1971-72	38·75 (30·14)	1981-82	30·00
1962-63	38·75 (30·14)	1972-73	38·75 (30·14)	1982-83	30·00
1963-64	38·75 (30·14)	1973-74	30·00	1983-84	30·00
1964-65	38·75 (30·14)	1974-75	33·00	1984-85	30·00
1965-66	41·25 (32·08)	1975-76	35·00	1985-86	30·00
				1986-87	29·00

Note: Under unification, the standard rate of income tax was replaced in 1973-74 by the basic rate. For years before 1973-74, the figures in brackets show the effect of the standard rate after allowing for earned income relief of $\frac{1}{9}$ on the first £4,005 of earned income.

Debt (Householders)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the increase in the ratio of debt to householders' income since 1979.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Personal sector liabilities have risen from 57 per cent. of personal disposable income in 1979 to 85 per cent. in 1985. Personal sector liquid assets, excluding notes and coin, have risen from 65 per cent. of personal disposable income to 82 per cent. over the same period. Figures for the household sector are not available.

Interest and Exchange Rates

Mr. Janner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of exchange and interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The sterling index closed at 67·8 on 28 October. Base rates are 11 per cent.

Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will make a statement about the current level of interest rates;

(2) if he will make a statement on the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Base rates are 11 per cent.

Infrastructure (Expenditure)

Mr. Boyes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about current levels of Government expenditure on the infrastructure.

Mr. MacGregor: A number of representations have been received.

National Health Service

Mr. Pavitt asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to public expenditure of each 1 per cent. increase in the proportion of gross domestic product devoted to the National Health Service.

Mr. MacGregor: In 1985-86 it would have cost £3·6 billion to increase public expnditure on the health services of the United Kingdom by one percentage point of GDP.

Public Services (Funding)

Mr. Adley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he employs in determining which public services should receive funding from the taxpayer.

Mr. MacGregor: Decisions on the funding of public services are taken in the annual public expenditure survey. This takes account not only of the Government's priorities for public expenditure, but also such factors as value for money. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer will be publishing expenditure plans for the next three years in his forthcoming autumn statement.

North Sea (Oil and Gas Revenues)

Mr. Rowlands asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much Her Majesty's Government have so far collected in oil and gas revenue from the North sea in the current financial year; and what his estimate is for the whole of 1986-87.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Government revenues from United Kingdom oil and gas production amounted to £1·3 billion in the first half of the 1986-87 financial year. The "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1986-87" included a forecast of £6·1 billion for the whole year. A revised forecast will be included in the 1986 autumn statement.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Overseas Trade Board

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the number of British Overseas Trade Board staff serving in the United Kingdom and abroad for each year since 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: Export promotion services, under the guidance of the BOTB, are provided by the Department of Trade and Industry in England, by the Scottish Office in Scotland, by the Welsh Office in Wales and by the Industrial Development Board in Northern Ireland. In carrying out its work overseas the BOTB calls on the resources of the FCO.

The numbers of DTI staff providing export promotion services under the guidance of the BOTB are as follows:

	Number
1979	1,217
1980	1,123
1981	995
1982	933
1983	913
1984	818
1986	728

Note: The figures are based on an estimate of the time spent by some staff on other work such as trade policy and trade relations. They include DTI regional office staff. Because of organisation changes in the period there are variations which mean that the figures are not completely comparable.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the reductions that have been made in British Overseas Trade Board export services for each year since 1979 in terms of reductions in, or the elimination of specific services.

Mr. Alan Clark: Numerous changes in, and adjustments to, BOTB services have been made, including many designed to improve value for money. Some services have been expanded. The main services withdrawn have been:

Overseas Traders List (1980). A computerised version of this service is expected to be introduced in 1987.

Institute of Directors' scheme for bringing overseas students to the UK for very short visits (1985).

The market entry guarantee scheme was suspended early this year, because it overran its budget. This is pending the outcome of a review of its effectiveness.

The main reductions in services have been:

Export marketing research scheme — limit placed on number of times single company could use service 81986).

Overseas projects fund — firms now eligible only where help is likely to increase chances of significant orders for UK (1981).

Overseas trade fairs — number of events supported annually reduced from about 350 to about 300 between 1979 and 1986. South Africa now excluded.

Outward missions — number of events supported annually reduced from about 220 to about 145 between 1979 and 1986. North America and South Africa now excluded as destinations.

Inward missions and VIP visits — number of events supported annually reduced from about 100 to about 65 between 1979 and 1986.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list (a) those export services available to industry and administered by the British Overseas Trade Board which were free in 1979 and for which a charge is now made and (b) in respect of which services that were charged for in 1979 the fees have since been increased and by how much.

Mr. Alan Clark: The only service now charged for which was free in 1979 is the provision of tender documents and project lists through the export intelligence service, which are now charged for at £2 and £5 per set respectively.

The main increases in charges since 1979 are as follows:

Market prospects service — export representative, currently charged at £175 and £125 per report respectively replaced agency funding service at £50 + VAT.

Overseas status report now cost £21 + VAT compared with £10 + VAT in 1979.

Overseas projects fund — a premium of 15 per cent. is now charged on repayment of BOTB assistance when contract won.

Export intelligence service: charge increased from 30p per notice in 1979 to 40p at present.

Fees for participants in joint ventures at overseas trade fairs have been increased from flat charges of from £4·50 to £18 per square metre in 1979 to percentages of direct costs (currently 40 per cent. for first time participant, 55 per cent. for second time, 75 per cent. others). Changes have been made in the method of calculating travel grants, especially for regular participants in overseas trade fairs and export missions, which have almost certainly involved reductions in real terms.

Overseas seminar participation fees have been increased from £150 to £300.

Percentage of eligible expenditure reimbursed under the overseas advertising scheme for UK fairs have been reduced from between 50 and 25 per cent. in 1979 to between 40 and 20 per cent. in 1986.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the priority given by his Department to export services; and whether he has any proposals to increase or extend the range of British Overseas Trade Board services and the resources devoted to them.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government are committed to maintaining a balanced programme of export services through the BOTB. These services are kept under continuous review to ensure that they are operating effectively to the benefit of exporters, and provide value for money. The possible introduction of new services, or the withdrawal of existing ones, is reviewed as part of this process.

Commercial Representatives

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the number of his Department's staff serving abroad as commercial representatives for each year since 1979.

Mr. Alan Clark: Department of Trade and Industry staff serving abroad on loan to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office at 31 March each year were as follows:

	Number
1979	32
1980	34
1981	34
1982	34
1983	31
1984	20
1985	19
1986	21

Note: Not all these staff would have been engaged wholly in commercial work.

Northern Region

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much is being spent on industrial support in the northern region in the current year.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In the last 12 months (period 1 October 1985 to 30 September 1986) a total of £114·6 million was spent on industrial support in the northern region. The corresponding figure for the first nine months of this calendar year was £93·6 million.

Investment

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those companies which have inwardly invested in the United Kingdom during the last five years.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Tripartite Business Ventures

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department is taking to promote tripartite business ventures by United Kingdom, United States and Japanese partners, such as that by Cable and Wireless plc in international telecommunications; and if he will give the number of such tripartite ventures of which his Department is aware.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government seek by a variety of means to promote co-operation between British companies on the one hand and US and Japanese companies on the other. Apart from the Cable and Wireless venture referred to, my Department is aware of one other of comparable scale involving British, US and Japanese companies.

Productivity

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the statistics on productivity in the private and public sectors for the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: This information is not separately available for the public and private sectors.

Copyright

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what priority he accords to the protection of copyright in intellectual property and innovation in the promotion of high technology industries.

Mr. Pattie: The protection of intellectual property serves to secure a fair reward for innovators. It is therefore an incentive to innovation and thus an important factor in the promotion of high technology industries.

Imports and Exports

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement regarding the current balance of imports and exports; and if he will publish statistics for the preceeding 12-month period.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the 12 months ended September there was a surplus at £403 million on the current account.

Schools and Industry

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the various programmes encouraging interaction between schools and industry; and if he will give the number of corporate and student participants in each .

Mr. Pattie: There are a great many ways in which schools and industry work together, and there are a large number of organisations, both at local and national level, which seek to encourage them. There is no requirement on schools and industry to notify their involvement, however, and so the detailed information that my hon. Friend requires is not collected centrally. I am, however, pleased to say that Industry Year 1986 has led to a considerable increase in liaison between schools and industry and it is estimated that some 60 per cent. of schools now have formal links with at least one company, and the number is growing. Many of the others have more informal arrangements with companies.

I am also placing in the Library copies of a directory of "Schools Industry Links" published by the Department of Education and Science and my Department, which describes the work of the main national organisations in this area.

Regional Aid

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, for the last year for which figures are available, what was the total amount of financial assistance made available as regional aid to each United Kingdom assisted area; and if he will express these figures as the amount per head of the insured population for the areas covered.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The most recent figures available for regional aid as defined are provisional estimates for 1985-86. Payments and payments per head made under the conditions for assistance relating to the pre-29 November 1984 assisted areas were as follows:

TABLE 1

Assisted areas (pre-29 November 1984 definitions)	SDA		DA		IA
	Payments[1] (£ million)	Payments per head[2] £	Payments[1] (£ million)	Payments per head[2] £	Payments[1] (£ million)	Payments per head[2] £

East Midlands	—	—	5·9	195·53	0·5	17·34
South West	1·6	47·10	7·7	33·51	0·4	3·49

[1] All figures are gross and include payments to nationalised industries.
[2] Information on the insured population is not available in terms of pre-29 November 1984 assisted area coverage. Therefore payments per head have been calculated using estimates of the working population for these areas.
Note: The items included in the expenditure are section 7, regional selective assistance and old regional development grants under the Industrial Development Act 1982.

Payments and payments per head (provisional basis) for regional aid as defined below made under the conditions for assistance relating to the post-28 November 1984 assisted areas were as follows:

Assisted areas (post-28 November 1984 definitions)	DA		IA
	Payments[3,4] (£ million)	Payments per head[5] (£)	Payments[3,4] (£ million)	Payments per head[5] (£)

East Midlands	1·7	72·06	0·2	16·08
South West	1·5	22·89	0·7	3·99
West Midlands			5·6	3·38

Notes

The items included in the payments are section 7, regional selective assistance and new regional development grants under the Industrial Development Act 1984 and expenditure on land and factories in the assisted areas by the English Industrial Estates Corporation and the Welsh Development Agency.

The tables exclude payments of £147·1 million (£251·39 per head of the working population) to Northern Ireland. Northern Ireland has a different range of financial incentives, but the figure has been restricted to aids similar to the main forms of regional aid available to Great Britain.

[3] All figures are gross and include payments to nationalised industries.

[4] It has not been possible to provide a breakdown by assisted area type for expenditure by the Highlands and Islands Development Board, the Development Board for Rural Wales and expenditure on land and factories by the Scottish Development Agency; the expenditures concerned are £17·9, £0·5 and £32·4 million respectively.

[5] Information on the insured population is not available in terms of the current assisted areas map coverage. Therefore payments per head have been calculated using estimates of the working population for these areas.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what percentage of the total regional development grant received in the Merseyside special development area in each of the years 1981 to 1985, inclusive, was paid to firms investing (a) within the county of Merseyside and (b) within the city of Liverpool;

(2) what was the total payment of regional development grant to firms investing in the Merseyside special development area in each of the years 1981 to 1985, inclusive; and what were the comparable figures for those investing (a) within the county of Merseyside, and (b) within the city of Liverpool in each of those years.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986]: No special development areas (SDAs) have existed since the regional policy changes of November 1984. The following information relates to the Merseyside SDA as it was until that date and to payments of old-style regional development grants only. The figures quoted are the totals of individual payments of over £25,000, since payments below this size cannot be attributed to any unit smaller than a planning region. The information is as follows:

Calendar Year	Merseyside County	Merseyside SDA	Liverpool City
1981	85,812	73,517 (86)	925 (1)
1982	72,047	65,402 (91)	1,880 (3)
1983	58,459	57,028 (98)	1,584 (3)
1984	61,054	59,840 (98)	1,596 (3)
1985	38,000	37,597 (99)	737 (2)

Notes

(i) Merseyside county consists of the following travel-to-work areas: Birkenhead, Liverpool, Widnes, St. Helens and Southport.

(ii) The Merseyside SDA consists of the Birkenhead, Liverpool and Widnes travel-to-work areas.

(iii) Liverpool city consists of Everton and Toxteth employment office areas.

(iv) Figures in brackets represent the percentages of grant paid to establishments in the Merseyside SDA and Liverpool city within the totals for Merseyside county.

Merseyside Enterprise Board

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is satisfied with the working of the Merseyside Enterprise Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I cannot comment on the activities of the Merseyside Enterprise Board. It is an independent company which is not required to report its action to my Department.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make an official visit to the Merseyside Enterprise Board to discuss with its officials its rôle in the economic regeneration of the area.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Although I shall be visiting Merseyside this week, I have no plans to visit the Merseyside Enterprise Board.

Crafts (Exhibition)

Mr. Bellingham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to crafts to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Arrangements have been made for such an exhibition in the Upper Waiting Hall to take place from Monday 3 November to Friday 7 November 1986.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

House and Parliamentary Papers

Mr. Roger King asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will make a statement about the format of House and Parliamentary papers in the forthcoming Session.

Mr. Biffen: On 2 May 1984, the House approved the First Report of the Select Committee on House of Commons (Services) of Session 1983-84, entitled "House and Parliamentary Papers". The main recommendation of the report was that the process of transferring the House's papers to the larger, A4 format, which had begun with the Official Report, should be extended to other House papers.

In paragraph 15, the Committee informed the House that it was proposed that the change would be effective for the Vote bundle in October 1986. I am informed that Her Majesty's Stationery Office's programme for these changes is on target. Accordingly, at the beginning of the new Session, hon. Members will find that the Order Paper, the Notice Paper and all other papers included in the Vote bundle are being printed in the new format.

The change will also affect Bills and Acts, although until the end of 1986 some of these, if they are expected to receive Royal Assent before 31 December 1986, will for technical reasons continue to be produced in the old form. Other Sessional papers and delegated legislation will also convert to A4 at the beginning of the new Session.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Paul Fitzgerald Smyth

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what precautionary and other action has been taken by the education and library boards, and by the Northern Ireland Office, following the conviction of Paul Fitzgerald Smyth, of Lisnaskea, who had been recruited for the Irish Republican Army by a woman teacher at his school.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 24 October 1986 c. 996]: A confidential letter has been received in the Department making allegations against a named teacher and investigations have been put in hand.

EMPLOYMENT

Restart

Mr. Pike asked the Paymaster General what has been the record of the restart programme in leading to participants (a) joining other training schemes, (b) becoming self-employed, (c) obtaining employment and (d) becoming involved in voluntary organisations.

Mr. Lee: Since restart became a national programme in July:

(a) 5,488 people have started training courses (other than the restart course).

(b) 1,585 people have taken the first steps to becoming self-employed through the enterprise allowance scheme.

(c) 12,304 people have started jobs or employment on the community programme.

(d) 1,054 people have joined the voluntary projects programme.

The figures given represent only those placings arising from referrals made at restart interviews. Seventy six per cent. of participants agree to pursue offers made at their interviews and some of these submissions are still in the process of being followed up. The placings also do not include the many people who later find jobs, or training, start self-employment or become involved with voluntary organisations wholly or partly as a result of advice given by counselling staff or on restart courses.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what percentage of those placed in jobs by the restart programme were eligible for the jobstart allowance; and what percentage of the budgeted cost of the jobstart allowance for the current financial year has been used.

Mr. Lee: By 11 September 1986, 10 per cent. of all people placed in employment by the restart programme were in receipt of the jobstart allowance. By 30 September 1986, 2 per cent. of the 1986-87 jobstart allowance budget had been used.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General how many people have been removed from the unemployment count over the last 12 months by special employment measures and YTS.

Mr. Lee: In September 1985 some 312,000 people were participating in the employment measures and it was then estimated that around 227,000 people were in jobs, training or early retirement instead of claiming benefit. At the end of September 1986, some 369,000 people were participating in the employment measures, with an estimated direct effect on unemployment of 285,000. YTS is a training measure and there are no estimates of its direct effect on unemployment. Since the nationwide introduction of restart from July 336,451 people have had a personal interview and of that number 30,218 have left the unemployment count.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what percentage of all people in work in 1979 were working part-time; and what was the percentage in each year since.

Mr. Lee: Within the regularly published employment series the estimates of the numbers of male employees in employment do not separately identify those in part-time employment. Estimates of the numbers of full-time and part-time male and female employees in employment are available from censuses of employment. For the dates specified, census of employment results are available only for September 1981, at which time 21 per cent. of employees in employment were part-time employees.

The labour force survey provides information on a different basis, but separately identifies part-time male and female employees and self-employed. The available estimates of the percentages of employees and self-employed in part-time employment are presented in the following table.

Labour force survey estimates[1] of employees and self-employed in part-time[2] employment
Great Britain

Year	Per cent.
1981	[3]19·7
1983	19·0
1985	21·2

[1] Estimates relate to the spring of each year. Percentages for 1983, 1984 and 1985 exclude those on Government schemes, whereas 1979 and 1981 include those on schemes if reported as in employment.

[2] In this table a person has been included as in part-time employment if he considers his job to be a part-time job.

[3] Employees only, as in 1979 and 1981 the self-employed were not asked if they worked full or part-time.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what percentage of the work force in hotels and catering are male and female; and of these how many are full-time and how many part-time.

Mr. Lee: Within the regularly published employment series the estimates of the numbers of male employees in employment do not separately identify those in full and part-time employment. The latest available estimates of all male, all female and part-time female employees in employment in the hotels and catering industry in Great Britain are given in table 1.4 of the labour market data section in the October 1986 issue of Employment Gazette, a copy of which is in the Library.

YTS

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General if he will give a breakdown of the number on the YTS by skill being learnt; and if there is any intention of giving YTS trainees a contract.

Mr. Trippier: The most recent figures available giving a breakdown of the numbers of young people on YTS by skill being learned are for the period April to December 1985. The numbers of young people starting on 1 year YTS by occupational training family (OTF) in Great Britain are shown in the table.

Occupational Training Family	Starters April-December 1985 (Male and Female, All YTS1 schemes)
01 Admin, Clerical, Office	67,687
02 Agriculture, Horticulture, Forestry, Fishing	16,417
03 Craft, Design	17,152
04 Installation, Maintenance, Repairs	52,208
05 Technical, Scientific	7,085
06 Manufacture, Assembly	54,081
07 Processing	1,951
08 Food Processing	15,319
09 Personal Services, Sales	68,505
10 Community and Health Service	15,694
11 Transport	6,668
98 Unclassified Starters	26,129
99 Unclassified Places	14,287
All Training Families	363,183

Figures for two-year YTS are not yet available.

Managing agents must issue to all YTS trainees a training agreement which gives information on their training programme and the terms and conditions which apply. Contracted status is not essential for that purpose but managing agents are free to give such status to their training agreements if they so wish.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General in which trades the youth training scheme has been integrated with apprenticeships.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that a full list of trades is not available. However, the main industries in which integration has been achieved are agriculture, building, electrical contracting, heating and ventilating, engineering, engineering maintenance, printing and road transport. It is estimated that in 1984 around half of all first year apprenticeships were brought within YTS.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what are the payments to trainees on the YTS agreed by the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Trippier: All trainees on the YTS scheme have employee status and are paid the full rate for the job by the Milk Marketing Board.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what information he has on the extent of topping-up of the YTS allowance by employers.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that I am unable to offer reliable information. Payments made to YTS trainees in excess of the standard allowances to which they are entitled are a matter for the training providers concerned. Neither my Department nor the Manpower Services Commission receives comprehensive details of such payments.

Jobs Start

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what has been the total cost to date of the job start allowance; and what percentage of interviewees on the restart programme obtained a place in a job club.

Mr. Lee: By 30 September 1986 the total cost of the job start allowance was £208,532. By 11 September 1986, 1 per cent. of all interviewees from the restart programme had obtained a place in a job club. The percentage of interviewees obtaining job club places is expected to rise following the recent announcement to increase the number of job clubs to 1,000 by March 1987.

New Workers Scheme

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what is the cost per worker taken off the unemployment register of the new workers scheme.

Mr. Lee: As the new workers scheme is only six months old it is too early to provide an accurate costing. However, there is no reason to believe that the net cost per person removed from the unemployment count will be significantly higher than under the young workers scheme: £1,400 per person in 1985-86.

Wage Levels

Mr. Hicks asked the Paymaster General, for the last year for which figures are available, what was the level of average weekly earnings for males and females, respectively, in work in the United Kingdom, and the corresponding figures for Scotland, Wales, and each of the standard regions in England, and for Devon and Cornwall, separately; and if he will also express these figures as a percentage of the United Kingdom figure.

Mr. Lee: The latest available information on average weekly earnings is that for April 1985 and relates to full-time employees working a full week. The figures requested are as follows:

	Full-time males		Full-time females
	Average gross weekly earnings	Percentage of average gross weekly earnings for United Kingdom	Average gross weekly earnings	Percentage of average gross weekly earnings for United Kingdom

Note: Differences in average earnings will reflect differences in the industrial and occupational structure of employment in different regions and do not necessarily imply differences in rates of pay for comparable jobs.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General what studies have been carried out into the impact of the enterprise allowance scheme on existing patterns of employment; and what were their conclusions.

Mr. Trippier: No studies have been carried out on the overall impact of the enterprise allowance scheme on existing patterns of employment. Information is, however, collected on the industrial classification of the businesses set up, business survival rates and the personal characteristics of the people joining the scheme. This and other survey information is summarised in articles in the August 1984, August 1985, and October 1986 issues of the Employment Gazette. Latest survey information shows that 76 per cent. of participants who completed a year on the scheme were still operating their business six months after the allowance ceased and that for every 100 of these businesses 37 new full-time and 54 part-time jobs had been created.

Stallite Batteries, Barnsley

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General when the Employment Medical Advisory Service terminated the appointment of a Dr. Durie as an appointed factory doctor; and for what reason.

Mr. Trippier: Dr. Durie's appointment at the Stallite Batteries factory was terminated on 11 July 1985. Workers were absorbing high levels of lead and it was decided that their medical supervision should be carried out directly by the Health and Safety Executive's employment medical advisory service.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General on what dates between January 1983 and December 1985 Her Majesty's Factory Inspectorate visited Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, Barnsley, South Yorkshire; and what specific action was taken following each visit.

Mr. Trippier: Her Majesty's Factory Inspectorate carried out an inspection of Stallite Batteries Ltd. on 1 July 1983 and atmospheric sampling of lead in air was carried out by HSE's occupational hygienists on 17 August 1983. These visits resulted in written advice to the firm and the issue of two improvement notices.

Visits to check progress with the requirements of the improvement notices were made on 3 November 1983, 30 November 1983, 21 February 1984, 1 March 1984 and 23 July 1984.

A further inspection was carried out on 19 September 1984 following the installation of a substantial amount of new process machinery. A letter was subsequently sent to the firm and a progress visit was made on 9 January 1985 when atmospheric sampling was also carried out.

Following this a further improvement notice was issued and a letter sent to the firm. Follow-up visits were made on 4 July, 26 September, 23 October and 27 November 1985, to check on progress.

Another atmospheric survey was carried out on 18 December 1985 and the results were discussed with the firm in March 1986.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General (1) on each occasion on which the appointed factory doctor took blood samples at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, South Yorkshire, where male blood lead levels exceed 70 mg/100ml., what action the appointed factory doctor took;

(2) on each occasion on which the appointed factory doctor took blood samples at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, Barnsley, South Yorkshire, where female blood lead levels exceed 40 mg/100ml., what action the appointed factory doctor took;

(3) on which dates during the period January 1983 to December 1985 blood samples were taken by an appointed factory doctor at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, Barnsley, South Yorkshire;

(4) on each occasion when the appointed factory doctor took blood samples at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, South Yorkshire, how many blood levels were found in the following categories: (a) males 0-19 mg/100ml., 20-39 mg/100ml., 40-59 mg/100ml., 60-69 mg/100ml. and 70+ mg/100ml., and (b) females 0-19 mg/100ml., 20-39 mg/100ml., 40-59 mg/100ml., 60-69 mg/100ml., 70-100 mg/100ml. and 100+ mg/100ml.

Mr. Trippier: I regret that the information is not available. Appointed doctors are asked to provide annual statistics of the results of blood tests and workers suspended from work with lead, but not details of individual tests, the results and action taken.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General (1) what action the employment medical service took on each occasion on which it took blood samples at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, Barnsley, South Yorkshire, when male blood lead levels exeeeded 70 mg/100 ml;

(2) what action the employment medical service took on each occasion on which it took blood samples at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, South Yorkshire, when female blood levels exceeded 40 mg/100 ml.

Mr. Trippier: Providing the results were confirmed by a follow-up test, the employment medical adviser generally certified such workers as unfit for further exposure to lead. However, some older men, and some women regarded by the doctor as not of child-bearing capacity, would not be suspended. This is in accordance with the code of practice to the regulations. The numbers and the dates on which they were suspended are given in the table.

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General on which dates during the period January 1983 to December 1985 blood samples were taken by the employment medical advisory service at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, Barnsley, South Yorkshire.

Mr. Trippier: Blood tests were taken on the following dates:

16 January 1985
24 July 1985
15 August 1985
29 August 1985
24 September 1985
17 October 1985

28 November 1985
2 December 1985
19 December 1985

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Paymaster General, on each occasion when the employment medical advisory service took blood samples at Stallite Batteries, Worsborough Bridge, Barnsley, South Yorkshire, how many blood lead levels were found in the following categories (a) males 0-19 mg/100ml., 20-39 mg/100ml., 40-49 mg/100ml., 60-69 mg/100ml., and 70+ mg/100ml., and (b) females 0-19 mg/100ml., 20-39 mg/100ml., 40-59 mg/100ml., 60-69 mg/100ml., 70-100 mg/100ml., and 100+ mg/100ml.

Mr. Trippier: The following tables show the information requested. Workers with high blood lead levels will have blood samples taken more frequently. The numbers of results in the higher end of the range are thus more an indication of the frequency of sampling than of the number of workers with these levels.

Long-term Unemployed Persons

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if he will provide an update of statistics published in July in the Official Report concerning the destination of the long-term unemployed interviewed to date under the new restart programme.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 23 October 1986, c. 939]: The information requested is given in the table.

Numbers interviewed and placed for the period 12 May to 9 October

	Number
Interviewed	336,451
Placed in jobs	2,547
Placed on community programme	9,757
Placed in jobclubs	2,508
Placed on enterprise allowance scheme	1,585
Placed on training schemes	5,488
Placed on restart courses	31,012
Placed on the voluntary projects programme	1,054

The placings reflect only those arising from referrals made at the restart interview.

We know that 76 per cent. of participants agree to pursue the offer made to them at their interview and some of these submissions are still in the process of being followed up. The placings do not include the many people who find jobs, or other solutions to their unemployment, wholly or partly as a result of advice given by counselling staff or restart courses.

A recent survey conducted by the Manpower Services Commission showed that approximately 60 per cent. of people who had received restart interviews during the pilot programme and who subsequently left the unemployment register went into work and a further 8 per cent. into training.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Women Prisoners (Pregnancy)

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women in custody in England experienced complications which necessitated transfer to a general hospital during pregnancy for each month during the current year.

Mr. Mellor: The information for each month of the current year is as follows:

Pregnant women experiencing complications necessitating transfer to a general hospital

	Number
January	6
February	2
March	2
April	4
May	6
June	2
July	2
August	1
September	4

Janice McKinley (Inquiry)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends publishing the report of the hospital inquiry which took place between 16 and 18 April into the death of Janice McKinley in the grounds of Scott clinic, Rainhill hospital, Merseyside.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The inquiry was established by the Mersey regional health authority. The question of publication of the inquiry team's report is a matter for that authority.

Criminal Statistics

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those convicted of criminal offences in (a) magistrates' courts and (b) other courts are employed, unemployed or self-employed.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not collected centrally.

BBC Scotland

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy not to change the British Broadcasting Corporation as it affects BBC Scotland.

Mr. Mellor: There are a number of recommendations contained in the report of the committee on financing the BBC which might affect the BBC's services, including those in Scotland. My right hon. Friend has said that he will reach decisions on these only in the light of public and parliamentary reaction.

Citizenship (South Africa)

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many citizens of the Republic of South Africa have applied to enter Britain with the intention of seeking or re-enstating their British citizenship in the current year and 1985.

Mr. Waddington: No such figures are available since an intention to apply for or establish citizenship are not grounds for seeking entry to this country under the immigration rules.

Mr. John Stalker

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals for changing the procedures for investigating senior police officers, following the reinstatement of Mr. John Stalker as deputy chief constable of Greater Manchester; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have asked for observations from those principally concerned with the investigation of the allegations against Mr. Stalker. When I have received these I shall consider whether there are any lessons to be learnt for the investigation of future allegations against senior police officers and whether any amendment of the relevant regulations is desirable.

Visas

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a person who is a national of India, Pakistan, or Bangladesh, who has permission to remain in the United Kingdom indefinitely, but wishes to obtain a visa exemption stamp, will be charged for such a stamp; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: No fee is charged for the passport endorsement provided to confirm exemption from the visa requirement.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action a person with a visa to visit the United Kingdom is required to take if they wish to extend their visa; if representations from hon. Members will be considered in such a circumstance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: If a visa holder has a valid reason for not travelling to the United Kingdom before the visa expires the validity of the visa may be extended provided that there has been no change of material circumstances.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether children born to a British citizen, who can claim a right to enter the United Kingdom, and if refused entry, may remain in the United Kingdom pending their appeal against refusal, are able to travel to the United Kingdom, and to seek entry to the United Kingdom, notwithstanding the provisions of the "Statement of Change in Immigration Rules"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Citizens of a country who require visas to enter the United Kingdom may apply to a British mission for a British passport or for confirmation of their status if they consider that they are British citizens through birth to a British citizen.

Visitors (Detention)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors to Britain arriving at Heathrow or Gatwick from Bangladesh, India or Pakistan during the period of 1 to 14 October were detained in one of Her Majesty's prisons; what was the duration of detention; what criteria his Department operates to decide which detainees were sent to prison and which went to hotels; how many are still at Erlestoke prison, Wiltshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The information readily available is as follows and relates to all nationals of the countries concerned, refers to those detained solely under powers conferred by the Immigration Act 1971, and excludes persons who may be detained as a result of a prosecution for Customs or other offences.

Seven passengers from the countries concerned who arrived between 1 and 14 October were detained in one of Her Majesty's prisons for between four and five days. Those detained in other prison service establishments at 20 October were as follows:

Blantyre House Detention Centre: 32
Erlestoke House Youth Custody Centre: 43

Thirty-six such nationals were still at Erlestoke House on 27 October.

The detainees who were sent to prison service establishments were those in whose cases the immigration service judged that the risk of absconding was unacceptably high. The action was taken because normal detention accommodation was full.

All those still detained are the subject of an automatic stop from Members of the House, whose representations we now await.

Queensland (Elections)

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 22 October, what information he has about restrictions placed upon the right of British citizens to vote at elections in the state of Queensland and as to whether such restrictions apply in other Australian states.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1 August 1983 British citizens have been able to enrol as voters in Queensland elections only if they had already been on the Queensland, or any other Australian, electoral roll for three months preceding that date. The Australian Commonwealth and the other Australian states now also have similar rules.

TRANSPORT

Dalton-in-Furness Bypass

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to announced the preferred route for the Dalton-in-Furness bypass on the A590.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Details of a preferred route for a bypass north of the town are published today.

Airmiss, Stanmore

Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has to the circumstances in which two airliners were involved in a near miss over Stanmore, Middlesex, on 29 July and as to what action has been taken as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: On 29 July two British Airways aircraft approaching Heathrow were involved in an airmiss whilst under radar control over north London. These were the subject of a routine airmiss report to the Civil Aviation Authority, which investigated the incident.

It has also been investigated by my Department's accidents investigation branch, whose report was published routinely last Friday after the normal detailed investigative and consultative procedures had been completed.

It is the Civil Aviation Authority which is responsible for air safety and, through the National Air Traffic Services, for civil air traffic control. I have spoken to the chairman of the CAA and I know he is concerned to ensure that incidents such as this do not recur. He will be considering urgently whether there is any further remedial action which needs to be taken.

Gatwick Airport

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Transport when the second terminal at Gatwick will be opened: what are the reasons for the delay in opening this terminal; and what steps are being taken to cope with the traffic at Gatwick in summer, 1987, as a result of the delay in bringing terminal 2 into operation.

Mr. Michael Spicer [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986]: Gatwick Airport Ltd. is aiming to bring the new terminal into operation before Easter 1988.

The British Airports Authority's external financing limit of £15 million for 1986-87 was decided in September 1985. It took account of the authority's forecasts of its capital requirements and internal resources, and was thought sufficient to allow the authority to complete Gatwick north terminal in summer 1987, and make good progress on other major projects. The authority subsequently reduced its forecasts of internal resources and as a result decided to delay the opening of the Gatwick north terminal. It is for the authority to order its investment priorities. The BAA informs me that a number of minor changes to the allocation of space and facilities will be made to help deal with the increased traffic expected next year.

ENVIRONMENT

Radioactive Discharges

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish a list showing, for each licensed nuclear power station site (a) the calculated critical group exposures associated with actual radioactive discharges in the last year and (b) the proportion that actual radioactive discharges in the last year bear to maximum authorised limits, where such authorisations contain numerical limits; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish a list showing the estimated critical group exposures associated with 100 per cent. of authorised radioactive discharges at each licensed nuclear power station site, where such authorisations contain numerical limits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Crime Prevention Grants

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to make additional funds available to local authorities where they embark on schemes to make crime prevention grants available to residents in their area; whether expenditure on such grants will be excluded from penalty consideration and rate limits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: The Government are already providing support for a number of such schemes through the urban programme and the community programme. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has asked the working group on residential burglary to review the question of security grants and will be considering its report in due course.

Local authority expenditure on crime prevention grants is subject to normal block grant rules and would be taken into account as appropriate in setting any rate limits.

Mobile Homes

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to amend the Mobile Homes Act 1983 in the light of the representations made to by him by mobile home owners and others.

Mr. Tracey: No. We are satisfied that the Mobile Homes Act 1983 is, in general, working well. We know that problems have arisen for some residents over the practical operation of the Act and the Department's officials are discussing with representatives of residents and site owners how the Act can be made to work more effectively.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proportion of informal planning appeals were decided in favour of the applicant in each of the past five years;

(2) what proportion of full planning appeals were decided in favour of the applicant in each of the past five years;

(3) what proportion of written planning appeals were decided in favour of the applicant in each of the past five years.

Mr. Tracey: The proportion of planning appeals under section 36 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 decided in favour of the appellant in each of the last five years was as follows:

Year	Written Representations Per cent.	Public Inquiries Per cent.	Informal Hearings[1] Per cent.
1981	30·9	39·8	—
1982	29·1	38·2	—
1983	30·8	38·4	41·1
1984	31·0	40·6	35·1
1985	35·7	48·9	42·1

[1] figures available only from July 1983

Development Commission (Budget)

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for the last year for which figures are available, the total budget of the Development Commission, the amount spent in Devon and Cornwall, and the equivalent figures per head of the insured population for these two areas covered by the commission's activities.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Development Commission's approved estimate for 1986-87 is £25·9 million. A county by county breakdown of this figure is not available. As an indication of the extent of the commission's activity in Devon and Cornwall, last year 65 redundant building grants were awarded in the two counties (equivalent to 20 per cent. of the Development Commission's total); and 64,000 square feet of factory space was constructed on the Commission's behalf (equivalent to 14 per cent. of the total).

Merseyside Enterprise Board

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will pay a visit to the Merseyside enterprise board to discuss with its officials its role in providing new jobs on Merseyside;

(2) if he will pay a visit to the Merseyside enterprise board to discuss with its officials its efforts to re-generate inner city areas on Merseyside.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has at present no plans to visit the Merseyside Enterprise Board.

Planning Applications

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions during 1986 his Department has issued directions under article 10 of the General Development Order preventing a local authority from determining a planning application; and in how many of those cases the direction has been followed by a call-in and a subsequent public inquiry.

Mr. Tracey: To date in 1986 the Department has issued 88 directions under article 10 of the General Development Order 1977; 34 applications have subsequently been called in and four have so far been to public inquiry.

Portsmouth (Housing)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the content of the telephone call between his Department and an officer of Portsmouth city council concerning the Portsdown Park housing estate on 3 March;

(2) why the Minister responsible for making the decision with regard to Portsmouth city council's proposal to refurbish the Portsdown Park estate made contact with members of the Conservative group on Portsmouth city council and officers of the council on 3 March with regard to the city's proposed refurbishment of the Portsdown Park estate; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what correspondence passed between the Department and Portsmouth city council about

Portsdown Park other than the decision letter dated 4 March; what telephone conversations took place on 3, 4, and 6 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to the replies, 23 October 1986 and 27 October 1986]: There is no record of contact between my officials and officers of the city council on Monday 3 March. On Tuesday 4 March, as a matter of courtesy I telephoned the leader of the council, and my officials telephoned council officers, to say that the Secretary of State's response to the council's application was to be sent by letter that day, and to indicate what the response would be. On 6 March officials were again in touch about a meeting to discuss the implications of the Department's letter of 4 March.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make available copies of all the correspondence and details of any other contacts between his Department and Portsmouth city council with regard to the city's plan to refurbish the Portsdown Park estate which took place between the original submission of the Barratt's bid and the final decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to the reply, 23 October 1986, c. 925-26]: I am arranging for copies of the main correspondence between my Department and the city council to be sent to the hon. Member. In addition to the correspondence, there have been two meetings between officials, and numerous telephone conversations to discuss the details of the council's application.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice Portsmouth city council was given by his Department on ways to refurbish Portsmouth Park which would not require Government approval.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to the reply, 27 October 1986]: In discussions between officers of the city council and officials of my Department the possibility of alternative approaches was raised, but not with a view to avoiding the need for Government approval.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why the Minister dealing with Portsmouth's application to refurbish the Portsdown Park estate advised that he could be surcharged or challenged in other ways if he approved Portsmouth's application.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to the reply, 27 October 1986]: Any decision by the Secretary of State on an application for consent to disposal which was taken on the basis of inadequate information could be open to challenge in the courts. The Department's letter of 4 March indicated that the city council had not provided all the information needed to enable the Secretary of State to make a full assessment of its plans for the disposal of Portsdown Park. The information has since been supplied.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Lyminge Forest

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria have been considered by the Forestry Commission in reaching a decision on the proposed sale of West wood, Lyminge forest, Kent to a Dutch company represented by Center Parcs Limited; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Forestry Commission decided to make West wood, Lyminge, Kent, available for sale on the open market, subject to outline planning permission for leisure development being granted by the local authority. In reaching this decision, the commission took account of ministerial guidelines for the selection of assets to be sold, which are reproduced in appendix V of its 1981-82 annual report; it also took account of the employment creation potential of such a development. There was no commitment to sell to Center Parcs Limited.

Healthy Foodstuffs

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what actions he has taken to increase and make more available the supply of healthy foodstuffs.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A major element of the Government's food and nutrition policy is maintaining an adequate supply of a wide variety of wholesome food in the United Kingdom at prices people can afford.

There is also comprehensive legislation regulating the safety, quality and labelling of food.

Fishing Fleet (Decommissioning Scheme)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what gross tonnage has left the fishing fleets in England, Wales and Scotland as a result of the decommissioning scheme.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986]: Since the decommissioning grant scheme came into operation in late December 1983, 42,864 GRT has been withdrawn from the fishing fleets of England, Wales and Scotland.

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the owners who received money to decommission fishing vessels have subsequently purchased replacement fishing vessels.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986]: Information in the form requested is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing vessels have been decommissioned in England, Wales and Scotland since the decommissioning scheme was introduced.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986]: Since the decommissioning grant scheme came into operation, 206 vessels have been decommissioned in England, Wales and Scotland.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Overseas Civil Service

4. Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to permit retired members of the Overseas Civil Service to count war service before appointment towards their pension entitlement on the same terms as apply to other retired members of the public service; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I am aware how strongly Colonial Service pensioners feel about this issue. It is kept under careful review. There are, however, many claims on public expenditure resources. So far, we have not been able to accommodate this extra commitment.

Turks and Caicos Islands

17. Mr. Garrett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken over the past three months in relation to the problems in the Turks and Caicos Islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: There is little I can add to the statement that I made to the House on 25 July. The constitutional commission under Sir Roy Marshall is expected to conclude its review by the end of the year.

A separate commission of inquiry under Mr. Louis Blom-Cooper was appointed by the Governor of the Turks and Caicos Islands on 24 September to investigate allegations about irregularities in the transfer of Crown land in 1983. Mr. Louis Blom-Cooper has already begun his investigations.

Contadora Peace Process

19. Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding the implications for the Contadora peace process of the funding of the Contras by the United States Government.

Mr. Eggar: We have received numerous letters from right hon. and hon. Members, individuals and organisations on the subject of US funding of the Contras. In reply, we have made clear that we support the Contadora peace process; that we do not believe that the problems of central America can be resolved by armed force; and that we ensure that the United States Government are aware of our views.

South Africa

20. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of his policies designed to bring about an end to apartheid in South Africa.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Government policy is to promote the total abolition of apartheid. During my presidency mission to Southern Africa I argued the case for fundamental but peaceful change, and for genuine dialogue between the South African Government and freely chosen leaders of the black community. Prime responsibility for instituting change and for creating conditions in which dialogue can take place lies with the South African Government.

24. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many economic measures have been taken against South Africa by the European Economic Community; and what assessment he has made of their effectiveness.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The twelve member states of the European Community have taken a range of economic measures—some positive, some restrictive—designed to impress on the South African Government the urgent need for fundamental but peaceful change. We are disappointed that the South African Government have so far failed to take the steps towards genuine national dialogue which have been urged on them by the Twelve, but they can be in no doubt of the Twelve's determination to see an end to apartheid.

25. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Anglo-South African relations.

36. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about relations with South Africa.

47. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's current relations with South Africa.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Our relations with South Africa are overshadowed by the issue of apartheid. We continue to seek an early end to apartheid in South Africa and its peaceful replacement by a non-racial, representative system of government.

28. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has recently met representatives of the Inkatha Movement from South Africa.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I had talks with Chief Buthelezi when I visited South Africa in July.

30. Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he plans to visit South Africa again during his presidency of the European Economic Community Council.

45. Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit the Republic of South Africa.

74. Mr. Torney asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to visit South Africa again during his term as President of the European Economic Community Council.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have no plans for such a visit.

34. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings he has had with representatives of Commonwealth and European Community countries to discuss South Africa since the beginning of the summer Adjournment.

Mrs. Chalker: There have been a number of such meetings, notably the Commonwealth Heads of Government review meeting on 3 to 5 August and meetings of Foreign Ministers of the Twelve on 15 to 16 September and 27 October.

35. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Council will next consider the effectiveness of its economic measures against South Africa since he became President of the Council.

50. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further discussions he plans with his European Economic Community colleagues about European Economic Community policy towards South Africa.

53. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Council will next discuss collective European Economic Community action against South Africa.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Foreign Ministers of the Twelve discussed South Africa in Political Co-operation on 15 to 16 September and again on 27 October. They will continue to pay close attention to the issue.

37. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent actions Her Majesty's Government have taken on the situation in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: We continue to work for progress towards the establishment in South Africa of a non-racial, representative system of government. We recently underlined our deep concern at the situation in South Africa, including the state of emergency and the large number of detentions without charge by adopting, together with our partners in the Twelve, a further package of measures designed to impress upon the South African Government the urgent need for fundamental change.

38. Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further action is to be taken by the European Economic Community Council following his visit to South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Foreign Ministers agreed in European political co-operation on 15 to 16 September on a number of measures—some positive, some restrictive—designed to impress on the South African Government the urgent need for fundamental but peaceful change through dialogue.

40. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in South Africa.

62. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in South Africa.

69. Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent events in southern Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Against a background of continuing tension and the state of emergency we remain deeply concerned at the situation inside South Africa. We regret that it seems that no significant progress has been made towards the national dialogue that is so urgently needed.

43. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of his latest visit to South Africa in his capacity as President of the European Economic Community Council.

Mrs. Chalker: During his visit my right hon. and learned Friend was able to get across to the many people he met, including members of the South African Government, the grave concern felt by all the Twelve about the situation in South Africa.

54. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what use is he making of his presidency of the European Economic Community Council to work towards the end of apartheid in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: We, together with our partners in the Twelve, have been working actively to promote peaceful change towards a non-racial representative system of government in South Africa. The visits to southern Africa by my right hon. and learned Friend in July were part of that effort.

55. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what impact has been made on South African apartheid by European Economic Community policies implemented during his presidency.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We are disappointed that the South African Government have so far failed to take the steps towards genuine national dialogue called for by the Twelve. The measures which the Twelve themselves have taken can have left the South Africans in no doubt of our collective determination to see an end to apartheid.

57. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measure of agreement exists among European Economic Community members about economic action against South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

58. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what economic measures have so far been taken against South Africa by the European Economic Community during his presidency; what consideration has been given to restrictions on imports of coal from South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Foreign Ministers of the Twelve agreed on 15-16 September to adopt a package of measures—some restrictive, some positive—on the lines envisaged by the European Council in June at the Hague. Most partners would also have been willing to include a ban on the import of coal. The presidency is continuing to seek consensus on this question.

60. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in working with other countries to secure the abolition of apartheid in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: We are deeply disappointed that the South African Government have so far failed to take the necessary steps towards national dialogue which we have urged upon them, together with our European and Commonwealth partners. However, they can be in no doubt of our determination to see an early end to apartheid.

71. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Council will next consider measures to end apartheid in South Africa.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Foreign Ministers of the Twelve discussed South Africa in Political co-operation on 15-16 September and again on 27 October. They will continue to pay close attention to the problem. They announced on 16 September a package of further measures including bans on new investment and on the import of iron, steel and gold coins as well as a strengthening of the Twelve's aid programmes to black South Africans and to neighbouring states.

73. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further steps he will take, as President of the European Economic Community Council, to secure an end to apartheid in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: Foreign Ministers of the Twelve discussed South Africa in political co-operation on 15/16 September and again on 27 October. They announced on 16 September a package of further measures including bans on new investment and on the import of iron, steel and gold coins as well as a strengthening of the Twelve's aid programmes to black South Africans and to neighbouring states. Together with our European partners we shall continue to work actively for an end to apartheid.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has of the practice of apartheid in Bophuthatswana.

Mrs. Chalker: The existence of Bophuthatswana is an expression of the practice of apartheid in South Africa as a whole.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has of the financial dependence of Bophuthatswana on the Government of South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: According to estimated figures published by the South African Institute for Race Relations the South African Government provided grants and loans worth R362 million to Bophuthatswana in 1983-84, which should be compared with budgeted spending by Bophuthatswana of R731 million. The Bophuthatswana economy is dependent on the wider South African economy in other ways too: in particular wages of commuters and migrants working in the rest of South Africa account for a high proportion of the income of residents in Bophuthatswana.

Soviet Union

21. Mr. Temple-Morris asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to seek to visit Moscow to meet his Soviet counterpart.

65. Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects next to visit Moscow.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend has accepted Mr. Shevardnadze's invitation to visit Moscow in 1987. Dates will be agreed later.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

East-West Relations

22. Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on East-West relations.

Mr. Renton: We welcome the substantial progress made at Reykjavik towards agreement on nuclear arms reductions and hope both sides will build on this in the negotiations in Geneva. The Government will continue to play a leading role in the search for balanced and verifiable agreements on nuclear, chemical and conventional arms. At the Vienna CSCE meeting, which starts in November, we will press for greater respect for human rights.

Mr. Nelson Mandela

23. Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further measures he plans to take to achieve the release of Nelson Mandela.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: With our Commonwealth and European partners we have repeatedly called on the South African Government to release unconditionally Nelson Mandela and other political prisoners. We shall continue to do so, for Mr. Mandela's release would be a key step towards creating conditions in which genuine dialogue can begin in South Africa.

Palestinians

26. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken during his presidency of the Council of Ministers to progress the principles outlined in the Venice declaration with regard to the exercise of the right to self-determination of the Palestinian people.

Mr. Renton: We continue to keep in close touch with the parties and to urge negotiation of a settlement of the Arab-Israel dispute in accordance with the principles of the Venice declaration.

Chile

27. Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his European counterparts on the political and military situation in Chile.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend had detailed discussions about Chile with his EC colleagues last month, in the framework of European political co-operation. On 16 September the Foreign Ministers of the Twelve issued a statement calling on the Chilean Government to lift immediately the state of siege and to accelerate the process of restoring democracy.

32. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made regarding the human rights cases on which Her Majesty's Government has made representations to the Government of Chile.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 21 October at column 844. We continue to make representations to the Chilean authorities about other human rights cases, including those of Sr. Fernandez Lembach, Sr. Rojas, Srta. Quintana and Mr. Beausire.

Disarmament

29. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about progress and the current positions at the various disarmament conferences.

Mr. Renton: The Reykjavik meeting between President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev on 11-12 October concentrated mainly on the issues at the Geneva nuclear and space talks. The meeting was of value because both sides came so close to agreement. We warmly welcome this, particularly the extent of agreement that proved possible on the elimination of intermediate-range nuclear weapons, and on nuclear testing. However, we regret the Soviet insistence in Reykjavik, in making agreement on all issues including on INF, dependent on their demands on SDI. The meeting was only one step in the long search towards the goal of balanced and verifiable agreements on arms control.

The proposals remain on the table. We are encouraged by the apparent determination on both sides to build on the progress already made. Together with the United States and our allies we will seek to maintain the momentum that has been generated at Reykjavik.

The Stockholm conference on disarmament in Europe in which the United Kingdom played a leading role, concluded satisfactorily on 22 September with agreement, the first in the arms control field since 1979, on a set of measures designed to build confidence and reduce mistrust through increased openness about military activities in Europe.

The 40th round of the mutual and balanced force reduction talks opened in Vienna on 25 September. The west continues to press for a serious eastern response to the innovative western proposal of December 1985.

On chemical weapons the aim remains a complete ban. we hope the British initiative on verification will enable progress towards this end.

51. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Foreign Secretary of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in relation to possible British involvement in the planned Geneva talks on disarmament.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister and my right hon. and noble Friend, the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, both had meetings on 14 October with Mr. Karpov, the chief Soviet negotiator at the Geneva nuclear and space talks. The question of British involvement in those negotiations does not arise. Mr. Gorbachev stated at his press conference in Reykjavik on 12 October that he had agreed with President Reagan that British and French nuclear forces should be completely left out of their bilateral negotiations. He added that these forces should remain independent and could be further increased and improved.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 412, what plans he has to submit to the committee on disarmament a revised and updated version of Her Majesty's Government's CD 610 Paper of July 1985 on verification.

Mr. Renton: We have no plans to do so at present. The need for a further United Kingdom paper is kept under review in the light of comments made by others at Geneva.

European Community Structures

31. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in the reform of the European Economic Community structures since the summer Adjournment.

Mrs. Chalker: (I) The Council has established a draft budget for 1987 which respects the guideline for agricultural spending.

(II) The co-responsibility levy designed to curb cereals production which we agreed at this year's agricultural price fixing has come into force. My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has put forward proposals for a Community scheme to divert land out of cereals production so helping to eliminate costly surpluses and reducing costs of the regime.

(III) Proposals for reform of the beef regime and for further reform of the milk regime are under discussion in the Agriculture Council.(IV) The Commission has in the meantime announced management measures in the milk sector which are equivalent to an annual price reduction of about 1 per cent.

(V) Ministers of the GATT participating countries agreed that all aspects of agricultural support should be included in the new GATT round negotiations, which were launched in Uruguay on 15-20 September.

(VI) Finance Ministers of the Community, meeting on 13 October under the chairmanship of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, gave support to the principles that CAP support prices should more closely reflect market conditions (especially where there are surpluses) and that intervention should revert to its original role of safety net.

Drugs Liaison Officers

33. Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the drugs liaison officers in New Delhi and Bombay to take up their posts.

Mr. Eggar: We have pressed the Government of India to give the formal authorisation necessary to enable the drugs liaison officers to take up their posts. We expect a final desion from the Indian authorities very shortly.

Nicaragua

39. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning Her Majesty's Government's relations with Nicaragua.

Mr. Eggar: We want to see a genuinely democratic Nicaragua living in peace with her neighbours. Our future relations will depend on Nicaragua ending the arms build-up and subversion which alarms its neighbours, and making progress towards democracy.

46. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to seek to visit Nicaragua.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to visit Nicaragua.

49. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest situation in Nicaragua.

Mr. Eggar: During recent months harassment of the Opposition and other dissenting opinion has increased following the tightening of the state of emergency in June. We regret the closure of the only independent newspaper, La Prensa, and the expulsion of two church leaders from Nicaragua. These actions appear to be in direct conflict with some of the basic objectives of Contadora.

Mr. George Shultz

41. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met Mr. George Shultz, the United States Secretary of State; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I last met Mr. Shultz on 24 September at the United Nations General Assembly. We are in regular contact on a wide range of issues.

Central America

42. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to seek to pay an official visit to any of the Central American states.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend's next visit to the area will be to Mexico in early January 1987.

76. Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place recently in the Council of Ministers on the situation in central America.

Mr. Eggar: Within the framework of European Political Cooperation there is regular discussion at appropriate levels of all important issues, including central America. Foreign Ministers recently discussed details of the next meeting of European Community, central America and Contadora Foreign Ministers due to be held in 1987 in Guatemala.

European Community (Foreign Policy)

44. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards a common European Community foreign policy.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave him on 9 July 1986 at column 208.

Falkland Islands

48. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend has no current plans to visit the Falkland Islands.

Latin America

52. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made to the United Kingdom diplomatic representation in Latin America over the past six months.

Mr. Eggar: Consular relations with Guatemala were resumed on 19 August 1986.

EC (Co-operation)

56. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on political co-operation within the European Community since Spanish accession.

Mrs. Chalker: Since the accession of Spain and Portugal on 1 January 1986, new treaty provisions in European political co-operation (forming title III of the Single European Act) have been concluded, and the Twelve have intensified their co-operation. For example, they have taken a firm stand against Libyan State supported terrorism, have issued major statements and taken measures against South Africa; and we have worked closely together in the Helsinki process including the recently concluded Stockholm CDE talks. Both Spain and Portugal have played a valuable role in the work of European political co-operation.

Middle East

59. Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the peace process in the middle east.

64. Mr. Mikardo asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he estimates the present prospects of the peacemaking process between Israel and her neighbours.

Mr. Renton: We welcome recent meetings between Israeli and Arab leaders in Morocco and Egypt but regret that there has not been more progress towards a comprehensive peace through negotiation.

Test Ban Treaty

61. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent developments there have been regarding the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the negotiation of a comprehensive test ban treaty.

63. Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the latest developments in negotiating a nuclear test ban treaty.

Mr. Renton: We welcome the meetings of United States and Soviet experts to discuss nuclear testing issues. As the hon. Member will be aware one of the principal subjects for discussion at these meetings has been the question of verification associated with the ratification of the threshold test ban and peaceful nuclear explosion treaties. This underlines the importance of verification issues in seeking ways forward on nuclear testing constraints. The search for progress towards a comprehensive test ban treaty remains part of our overall arms control policy.

We also very much welcome the ideas put forward by President Reagan in his speech to the United Nations General Assembly on 22 September. The practical, step by step, approach implicit in President Reagan's statement is fully consistent with the views of the authorised Government. Accordingly we also welcome the apparant agreement at the Reykjavik summit by the Soviet Union to this sort of approach.

Romania

66. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made about human rights in Romania.

Mr. Renton: We lose no opportunity to raise humanitarian issues with the Romanian leadership, who can be in no doubt about British views. My right hon. and learned Friend visited Bucharest in February 1985, and I went to Romania in May of this year when these issues were raised. We are expecting a visit by the Romanian Deputy Foreign Minister later this year.

South Atlantic (Fishing Regime)

67. Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards an agreement on a fishing regime in the south Atlantic.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that my right hon. and learned Friend made earlier today.

Cyprus

68. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the present position in Cyprus.

Mr. Eggar: The United Nations Secretary General is continuing his efforts with the parties to find a peaceful, just and lasting settlement in Cyprus. We strongly support his initiative, which we believe offers by far the best prospect of achieving such a settlement. We continue to urge all the parties to co-operate with him, and to refrain from any action which might make his task more difficult.

72. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to seek to ensure that a solution can be reached to the problem of Cyprus, including the withdrawal of Turkish military forces from that country.

Mr. Eggar: The United Nations Secretary General continues in his efforts to bring the two sides together. We strongly support his initiative and are ready to do whatever we can to help. Withdrawal of foreign troops from the Republic of Cyprus will have to form part of a comprehensive settlement.

State Terrorism

70. Dr. M. S. Miller asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in his discussions with his European Economic Community counterparts towards an effective concerted policy to combat state terrorism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: An unprecedented range of measures to prevent further acts of Libyan state directed terrorism and to defend ourselves against such threats were, as my right hon. and learned Friend told the House on 23 April, agreed on 21 April by the Twelve. We continue to work within European political co-operation and the Trevi group to ensure effective co-operation amongst the Twelve. On 4 October, the Twelve issued a joint statement endorsing the firm action taken by us with regard to Libyan Arab Airlines.

Anglo-Austrian Relations

75. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of Anglo-Austrian relations.

Mr. Eggar: Relations between the United Kingdom and Austria are good. Vice-Chancellor Norbert Steger visited Britain as the guest of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry from 26 February to 1 March this year. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales visited Vienna from 14 to 16 April in connection with the Britain in Vienna Festival. Dr. Peter Jankowitsch, Austrian Foreign Minister, called on my right hon. and learned Friend in London on 30 June.

Hong Kong

77. Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the last meeting of the Sino-British joint liaison group on Hong Kong was held; what matters were discussed; and where and when he next expects the group to meet.

Mr. Renton: The fourth meeting of the Sino-British joint liaison group took place in London from 22 to 25 July. Proceedings of the group are confidential, but further good progress was made. Copies of the communiqué released following the meeting have been placed in the Library of the House. The next meeting of the group will take place in Peking from 25 to 28 November.

US Nuclear Weapons

78. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he was consulted by his United States counterparts about the implications for arms control verification and confidence-building measures of allowing storage of United States air force nuclear weapons in underground vaults in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: Weapons of the type referred to are not the subject of any current arms control negotiations. The question of verification or confidence building measures does not therefore arise. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence, is involved in continuing contacts with the United States Government on all aspects of possible storage facilities.

Guatemala

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress towards re-establishing diplomatic relations with Guatemala.

Mr. Eggar: Consular relations between the United Kingdom and Guatemala were re-established on 19 August 1986. The joint communiqué announcing this step expressed our hope and that of the Guatemalan Government that diplomatic relations would be re-established by the end of the year.

Visas (Soviet Union)

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to raise the cases of individuals in the Soviet Union who have been refused exit visas.

Mr. Renton: Ministers raise human rights issues and individual cases with the Soviet authorities at every suitable opportunity. The cases of a number of prominent "refuseniks" including Ida Nudel, Alexsei Magarik and Yuli Edelstein were raised with Mr. Shevardnadze during his visit here in July when he met both the Prime Minister and my right hon. and learned Friend. We will continue to press the Soviet authorities to fulfil their international obligations in the field of human rights, including at the next CSCE meeting which opens in Vienna on 4 November.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Soviet Union has yet responded to the proposals of the United States of America on verifying the yield of nuclear tests with a view to the United States of America ratifying the threshold test ban treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) earlier today.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the international forums since January 1979 at which Her Majesty's Government have been attempting to achieve progress on the problem of resolving verification issues relative to a comprehensive nuclear test ban; and if he will place in the Library a copy of Her Majesty's Government's proposals to the conference of disarmament for an appropriate mandate for an ad hoc committee to discuss the issue of adequately verifying a comprehensive nuclear test ban.

Mr. Renton: The appropriate forum in which to seek to resolve verification issues relative to a comprehensive nuclear test ban is the conference on disarmament and the bodies which the conference decides to establish. We have participated in the work of the ad hoc group of scientific experts since its inception and we have sought an appropriate mandate for an ad hoc committee to conduct a substantive examination of issues relevant to a comprehensive test ban with a view to the negotiation of a treaty. The United Kingdom's proposals for these mandates are contained in CD521, a copy of which (together with all other CD documents) is available in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals were agreed to by the Soviet Union in Reykjavik in relation to (a) a freeze on short-range INF missiles as part of a zero option agreement on INF in Europe, (b) the deployment of a North Atlantic Treaty Organisation matching force of sort-range INF missiles and (c) an immediate start to negotiations on reductions in short-range INF weapons.

Mr. Renton: The Alliance position is that any agreement on longer range INF should include appropriate constraints on Soviet shorter range intermediate nuclear forces (SRINF).

As the United States Government have made clear, the two sides discussed at Reykjavik a freeze on SRINF in Europe at the level of current Soviet deployments pending the negotiation of reductions. They also agreed that the negotiations on the reduction of SRINF should begin within 6 months of the conclusion of an INF agreement. Precise details were not worked out. The right to equal global ceilings for both the United States and Soviet Union has been a consistent element in the Alliance position in the INF negotiations. This remains the case.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the extent to which any agreement between the United States and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to abolish all nuclear ballistic missiles should be made dependent upon reducing the levels of chemical and conventional arms.

Mr. Renton: We hope to see arms control agreements covering the full range of weapons systems, chemical and conventional as well as nuclear. The deeper the cuts in the ballistic missile forces of the United States and the Soviet Union, the more important it becomes to achieve a more stable balance in conventional forces in Europe and an effective and adequately verified ban on chemical weapons.

Visas

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the maximum period of stay a person applying for a visa to visit the United Kindom may be granted, apart from those applying for a multiple visit visa on the basis they require to visit regularly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: A single entry visit visa is normally made valid for presentation at a United Kingdom port for six months from the date of issue.

DNA Testing

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place between his Deparment and ICI about the commercial development of DNA testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I am following the commercial development of DNA testing with keen interest and have met with representatives of ICI, as have FCO officials. I am confident that DNA testing can help speedily resolve applications to settle in this country which depend mainly on proving a family relationship.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on what date he issued a circular to local offices safeguarding the rights of claimants to the long-term rate of supplementary benefit on moving from Northern Ireland to the mainland.

Mr. Lyell: Circular S22/86, a copy of which is in the Library, was distributed to local offices on 17 September 1986.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each social services authority area the number of people in receipt of benefit under the Supplementary Benefit (Requirments) Regulations 1983, regulation 9 in residential care for the elderly.

Mr. Lyell: Information on the numbers of people in receipt of supplementary benefit is not available by social services authority areas. Information on the number of claimants in residential care homes for the elderly during the period April to July 1985, drawn from special returns by local offices, is available according to social security region in a Department of Health and Social Security document "Supplementary Benefit Board and Lodging Allowances, Results of a Special Statistical Exercise (29 April—29 July 1985)", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the number of people in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow Central currently awaiting an appeal to a supplementary benefits tribunal; and what was the corresponding figure two years previously;

(2) what is the current waiting time for the result of an adjudication from a supplementary benefits tribunal in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow Central.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the number of people in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow and (b) Strathclyde currently awaiting an appeal to a supplementary benefits tribunal; and what was the corresponding figure two years previously;

(2) what is the current waiting time for the result of an adjudication from a supplementary benefits tribunal to (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde region and (c) Scotland as a whole.

Mr. Lyell: I refer the hon. Members to the replies which I gave to the hon. Member for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) on 23 October at column 981.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Greenock and Port Glasgow are currently in receipt of supplementary benefit; and how many are pensioners, heads of one-parent families or unemployed.

Mr. Lyell: Information is not available in precisely the form requested. The numbers of people receiving supplementary benefit from the Department's offices in Greenock and Port Glasgow on 13 August 1986, the latest available figures, were as follows:

	Number
Unemployed	7,116
Over pension age	4,898
Others (including one-parent families)	4,925
Total	16,939

Source: 100 per cent of cases in action.

Appeals Tribunals

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if in the circumstances when claimants win an appeal tribunal and the Secretary of State wishes to overrule it by going to appeal, claimants are automatically notified of his decision in writing.

Mr. Lyell: Yes. Where the Secretary of State or the adjudication officer wishes to appeal against the decision of a social security tribunal or a medical appeal tribunal the claimant is advised in writing that an appeal to the commissioner is to be made or, where appropriate, that leave to appeal to the commissioner is being sought from the tribunal chairman. If the hon. Member has a particular case in mind perhaps he would let me have details.

Health Funding

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any representations concerning underfunding in (a) the South-East Thames region and (b) Bexley health district.

Mr. Newton: Over the past year we have received representation about the funding of the Bexley health authority from my hon. Friend himself, my right hon. Friend the Member for Old Bexley and Sidcup (Mr. Heath), my hon. Friend the Member for Bexleyheath (Mr. Townsend) and the Bexley community health council. Some representations have also been made about funding in other parts of the South East Thames regional health authority.

Cancer (West Cumbria)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received the studies implementing recommendations 2 and 3 of the report of the group chaired by Sir Douglas Black on the incidence of cancer in West Cumbria; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The findings of the studies, proposed in recommendations 2 and 3 of the report of the group chaired by Sir Douglas Black on the incidence of cancer in West Cumbria, have not yet been received.

Local Office (Bloomsbury)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state, on a daily basis for the last 12 months, in relation to the Bloomsbury office of his Department, Tavistock Square (a) the opening hours of the office, (b) the number of persons attending the office, (c) the average waiting time for those persons and (d) the numbers of persons interviewed, at reception or elsewhere in the office.

Mr. Lyell: I regret that the information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Nurse's Cottage, Aylesbury

Mr. Raison asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects the nurse's cottage, Wendore Road, Butler's Cross, in Aylesbury to be sold by the Wycombe health authority.

Mrs. Currie: We have consulted the regional health authority, whose responsibility it is, and I understand that the property will be placed on the market in the immediate future.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what discussions have been held with voluntary organisations representing families of people suffering from mental disorder regarding their involvement in decisions on care and the planning of relevant services.

Mrs. Currie: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my predecessor on 30 June 1986 at column 414. I should only wish to add that in addition to the 19 mental illness organisations that we support, we also fund 23 mental handicap organisations and are in contact with others we do not fund.

Sugars

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to announce the membership of the COMA sub-panel set up to examine the effects of sugars in the diet.

Mrs. Currie: We expect the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food Policy to decide on the chairman and membership of its panel on sugars in the diet at its next meeting on 19 December.

Electoral Statistics

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the 20 English non-metropolitan counties which have shown the greatest percentage of growth in electorate since 1981; and what has been the percentage growth and actual figures in each case.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is given in the following table:

Non-metropolitan county (ranked by percentage growth)	Electorate		1981-86 growth
	1981 register	1986 register	Increase in electorate	Percentage increase
Buckinghamshire	410,448	451,984	41,536	10·1
Cambridgeshire	427,090	464,302	37,212	8·7
Berkshire	499,355	541,110	41,755	8·4

Suffolk	436,564	462,145	25,581	5·9
Bedfordshire	360,513	381,590	21,077	5·8
West Sussex	518,911	547,523	28,612	5·5
Norfolk	531,896	560,512	28,616	5·4
Essex	1,109,513	1,167,926	58,413	5·3
North Yorkshire	509,076	535,410	26,334	5·2

Retirement Pensions

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether a man is entitled to his retirement pension from the date of his 65th birthday; and whether a woman is entitled to his retirement pension from the date of her 60th birthday.

Mr. Lyell: If the retirement and contribution conditions are satisfied, state retirement pension is payable from the first pay day following minimum pension age, which is 65 for a man and 60 for a woman. A married woman can receive a retirement pension based on the national insurance contributions paid by her husband, but it is not payable until the husband claims his own pension.

Community Care

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what direction he has given to regional health authorities regarding the application of funds derived from the sale of assets to the development of community care services.

Mrs. Currie: The instructions to regional health authorities in the National Health Service handbook on land transactions, require that proceeds from the sales of surplus National Health Service land and property should normally accrue to the disposing hospital or the district health authority for re-investment in the service. Proceeds from sales of mental illness or mental handicap hospitals are required to be used specifically for the development of better services for the mentally ill and mentally handicapped including community-based services.

Irradiated Foods

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is in a position to announce his conclusions on the report on the safety and wholesomeness of irradiated foods following the end of the consultation period.

Mrs. Currie: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the right hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Freeson) on 23 October at columns 978-980.

Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received from the chairman of the social services committee of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities concerning his observations on the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act at the Cardiff social services conference; what reply he is sending; if he will be meeting the association to discuss the Act's implementation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The chairman of the social services committee of the Association of Metropolitan Authorities wrote to my right hon. Friend on 9 October, and I hope to reply shortly.

Benefit Claims

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the number of benefit claims in action, live load, in August 1979 and August 1986 in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole.

Mr. Lyell: The table shows the number of supplementary benefit claims in action—live load—in August 1979 and August 1986 in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland.

	August 1979	August 1986
Greenock and Port Glasgow	9,448	16,939
Strathclyde	183,606	317,032
Scotland	316,287	547,995

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of benefit claims awaiting processing, backlog, in August 1979 and August 1986 in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole.

Mr. Lyell: Figures for the number of claims awaiting action in local offices are not available for the period before 1983. The number of claims to supplementary benefit awaiting action on 30 August 1983 and 16 August 1986 is as follows:

	30 August 1983	26 August 1986
Greenock and Port Glasgow	282	585
Strathclyde	3,745	7,473
Scotland as a whole	8,281	15,644

Local Office Staffs

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of staff employed in his Department's local offices in July 1979 and July 1986 in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole.

Mr. Lyell: The number of staff in post on 1 July for the requested years is as follows:

	1979	1986
Greenock and Port Glasgow[1]	211	250·5
Strathclyde	3,933	4,401
Scotland	6,947	7,769

[1] The figures for 1979 and 1986 are not strictly comparable because of minor boundary changes in 1982 affecting Greenock.

Single Payments

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the total amount of moneys paid out in single payments in 1979 and 1985 by his Department's offices in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde region, (c) Scotland and (d) Great Britain as a whole;

(2) what was the average amount paid in single payments to claimants in his Department's offices in 1979 and 1985 in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde, (c) Scotland, (d) England and Wales and (e) Great Britain.

Mr. Lyell: The information requested is shown in the tables for years ending early in April. However, the two sets of figures are not directly comparable; single payments replaced exceptional needs payments in November 1980.

Table 1
Total amount paid

	1979-80	1985-86[1]
Greenock and Port Glasgow	193,631	1,872,494
Strathclyde region	6,585,310	43,802,212
Scotland	10,019,290	71,109,989
Great Britain	40,031,109	334,408,813

[1] 1985-86 figures are provisional.

Table 2
Average payment

	1979-80	1985-86
Greenock and Port Glasgow	39	85
Strathclyde	53	81
Scotland	52	88
England and Wales	34	68
Great Britain	37	76

Figures are rounded to the nearest £. 1985-86 figures are provisional.

Severe Weather Payments

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the total number of severe weather payments paid by his Department to claimants for the month of February 1986 in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde, (c) Scotland, and (d) Great Britain as a whole;

(2) what was the average amount paid in severe weather payments to claimants for the month of February 1986 in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde, (c) Scotland and (d) Great Britain as a whole.

Mr. Lyell: The information requested is not yet available. Local offices have been asked to make a return giving the total number of payments made and the amounts paid, and I shall write to the hon. Member when this exercise has been completed.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list those health authorities which have district-wide computerised cervical cancer call and recall schemes in operation;

(2) if he will list those health authorities which do not have district-wide cervical cancer call and recall schemes in operation but which have plans to do so, giving the estimated date of introduction in each case.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Sevices if he will list those health authorities which have district-wide computerised cervical cancer recall but not call schemes in operation.

Mrs. Currie: Other than the 22 listed in my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdinton (Mr. Corbett) on 24 October, all health authorities were operating a district-wide recall scheme as at 31 March 1986. Comprehensive information on health authorities with computerised recall but not call schemes is not held centrally.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many nurses have been trained exclusively in the private sector in each year since 1979;

(2) how many nurses have received post basic education in the private sector in each year since 1979.

Mr. Newton: I understand from the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting that the numbers of nurses trained exclusively in the private sector were as follows:

	1985	1986
Basic nurse training	41	42
Post basic nurse training	47	48

Information for earlier years is not available.

McColl Report

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action has so far been taken in regard to the recommendations of the McColl report; when he will be taking any further action; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: On publication of the McColl report in January, we asked the National Health Service management board to oversee the programme of action to develop the artificial limb and appliance centre services, and for advice on some of the major issues raised in the report. We also invited interested organisations and individuals to comment. To ensure that action was carried forward quickly, we appointed as an interim measure a general manager to head the Department's new disablement services division.

Under the direction of the National Health Service management board and the general manager, a programme of action to improve standards of service where possible immediately is being vigorously pursued. For example, initiatives are being taken to improve transport and appointment arrangements; to ensure the availability of the full range of limb systems at each centre and to reduce delivery times; to introduce more attractive, coloured wheelchairs and a new basic wheelchair for occasional use; to improve management information and financial control systems, including the wider installation of computers; and to develop closer links with other related services for disabled people.

We have not yet completed our consideration of future organisational arrangements and certain other policy issues raised by the McColl report. I shall inform the House as soon as conclusions are reached.

Under-fives' Initiative

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make a statement about the future of the under-fivess' initiative after April 1987;

(2) if he will consider joint transitional funding with the appropriate local authority for those projects started under the under-fives' initiative which have yet to receive firm commitments of funding after 31 March 1987.

Mrs. Currie: The initiative comes to an end on 31 March 1987. The voluntary agencies participating in the initiative have asked the Department to look into the feasibility of setting up a limited scheme of tapering grants after March 1987. This is being considered. The Department will be analysing the impact of the initiative and the lessons to be learnt from the exercise.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those projects started under the under-fives' initiative, stating which have received firm commitments of funding after 31 March 1987.

Mrs. Currie: At present 32 projects under the under-fives' initiative have secured funding from March 1987 onwards. I shall write to the hon. Member when the complete picture is available.

Radiotherapy Department (Southend)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to announce his decision on the proposal of the North East Thames regional health authority to close the radiotherapy department in Southend; and what criteria he takes into account in making decisions on such proposals.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to the reply, 21 October 1986, c. 870]: North East Thames regional health authority's proposal to close the radiotherapy unit at Southend will be the subject of full public consultation by the district health authority. If the local community health council objects to the proposal and the regional health authority intends to proceed to close the unit, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services will then be asked to make a final decision on the proposed closure, taking account of all relevant factors.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many letters he has received from the general public on the proposal to close Southend's radiotherapy cancer unit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to the reply, 21 October, c. 870]: We have received 10 letters which have been referred by hon. Members, together with about 100 letters direct from members of the general public. All such representations will be taken into account if my right hon. Friend is required to take a final decision on the proposal to close the radiotherapy unit at Southend.

Regional Health Authorities (Gifts)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will issue guidance to regional health authorities on the propriety of their receiving gifts from district health authorities conditional on specialist facilities being located within their districts; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to the reply, 21 October, c. 870]: We are not aware that such guidance may be needed. If my hon. Friend has evidence of a need for guidance of this nature, I would be grateful if he would draw it to my attention. It is for regional health authorities to decide upon the most appropriate location for regional specialist facilities, taking into account all relevant factors.

Southend Health Authority

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to require the North East Thames regional health authority to make good the underfunding of the Southend health authority on the basis of the resource allocation working party formula; and what has been the total of this underfunding over the past five years.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to the reply, 21 October, c. 870]: The resource allocation working party formula, first used in 1977-78, demonstrated that the North East Thames regional health authority was overfunded by 13·7 per cent. in that year. The overfunding has been reduced to 9·7 per cent. in 1985-86, and 5·9 per cent. in 1986-87. For 1986-87 the particular difficulties of the region have been recognised, and additional cash of £52·4 million injected.

The allocation of funds to Southend health authority is a matter for North East Thames regional health authority, but I understand that net revenue expenditure for Southend has increased from £34·6 million in 1982-83 to £42·3 million in 1985-86, an increase of 6 per cent. in real terms, compared to a regional decrease of 1·1 per cent. over the same period.

Recent capital items in Southend health authority include a 20-place day hospital for the elderly at Westcliff hospital. In addition a major development at Rochford hospital costing £5·5 million including a rehabilitation department, four wards for the elderly, and three day hospitals (for the elderly, elderly mentally infirm, and the mentally ill), will be completed by 1988.

SCOTLAND

Community Charge

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, before introducing proposed legislation on the community charge in Scotland he will consult the National Federation of Old Age Pensioners Associations about the consequences for those whose sole income is a retirement pension.

Mr. Ancram: All interested parties had the opportunity to comment on the proposals contained in the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714) during the consultation period. My right hon. and learned Friend will take account of all comments made during that period before introducing his legislative proposals.

Argyll and Clyde Health Board

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if the number of medical and nursing staff in the hospital service will be increased when the Argyll and Clyde health board opens its new general hospital in Paisley;

(2) if any additional medical services will be offered to the Argyll and Clyde health board when it opens its new general hospital in Paisley.

Mr. John MacKay: The new Royal Alexandra hospital will replace the existing acute hospital accommodation in and around Paisley. No additional specialties will be provided but the population will benefit from the replacement of old, unsatisfactory accommodation with a modern hospital complex providing a range of sophisticated and improved facilities. This will lead to higher levels of efficiency and standards of care. No increases in the numbers of medical staff are currently planned but there will be some increase in nurse staffing.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) whether any auxiliary staff have been declared redundant in the Argyll and Clyde health board area in the last three months;

(2) what percentage of auxiliary hospital jobs will be lost when the Royal Alexandra infirmary closes, and facilities are centred at the new general hospital at Meiklebriggs in Paisley.

Mr. John MacKay: No auxiliary staff have been made redundant. There will be a reduction of 18·8 per cent. in the number of jobs in the ancillary services being centralised at the new Royal Alexandra hospital. The reductions will be achieved through natural wastage.

Chairs of Medicine

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if any chairs of medicine will be located in the Argyll and Clyde health board area when the new general hospital in Paisley opens;

(2) what is his policy regarding chairs of medicine in the West of Scotland continuing to be based in Glasgow.

Mr. John MacKay: The location of chairs of medicine is a matter for the relevant university, responsibility for which lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science. I am not aware, however, of any proposal to site a professorial chair at the Royal Alexandra hospital.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is his policy towards the removal by the health authority of patients in the Greater Glasgow health board area, within which specialist facilities are available;

(2) what assessment he makes of the impact of the building of new hospitals in the precincts of the Greater Glasgow health board area on the number of referals in Glasgow; and if he will make the appropriate financial adjustments to lighten the workload.

Mr. John MacKay: The new district general hospital at Paisley has been built to provide general acute services to all the residents of the Paisley and Renfrew districts including those who previously had to look to hospitals in Glasgow because of a lack of facilities in Paisley. Patients requiring treatment of a more specialist nature will, however, continue to be referred to the appropriate specialist hospitals in Glasgow. To the extent that the new hospital results in a reduction in the number of referrals into Glasgow, the financial allocations to each health board will automatically be adjusted to allow for the changes in the number of patients being treated in each board.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many recorded deaths there have been in Scotland in the current year resulting from cervical cancer.

Mr. John MacKay: One hundred and two[1] deaths from cervical cancer[2] were recorded in Scotland during the first six months of 1986.

Leukaemia

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to his replies of 14 July, Official Report, column 666, whether he has received the full study of the incidence of leukaemia in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I expect the report of the full study to be published very shortly. A copy will then be placed in the Library, and the results referred to the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment, for advice on the possible need for further investigative work.

Road Passenger Transport (Jobs)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of (a) the total number of new jobs created and (b) the total number of jobs lost, in the road passenger transport industry in Scotland as a result of the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. Ancram: It is too early to say what the overall effects on employment of the Transport Act 1985 will be. However, the Act gives operators considerable opportunities to develop new services which will mean more jobs, reversing the long term decline of the industry. It will also create other opportunities — for instance, in bus building.

Ferries

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what study he has made of the possibility of establishing a ferry service between Europe and the east coast of Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: None. It is essentially for commercial operators to identify opportunities.

Mr. Allan Adams asked the Secretatry of State for Scotland if he will take steps to insure that there is no increase in ferry fares in Scotland in the current financial year.

Mr. Ancram: Generally speaking, fares and tariffs on ferry services are commercial matters for the operators concerned to determine, taking account as necessary of the announced level of Government subsidy for their services. Revenue support for major sea transport services in the current financial year amounts to £13·6 million, which represents a significant subvention for the farepayer.

Buses

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of existing bus services in Scotland have been registered to operate after 26th October 1986 under the Transport Act 1985; and if he will give the respective figure for each region.

Mr. Ancram: Figures for the whole of Scotland are not available. In the study areas of Strathclyde, Lothian and Dumfries and Galloway, the comparative figures for bus departures on weekday timetables, which provide the best available measure at present of changes in the services operated, are as follows:

	November 1985	October 1986	Percentage increase
Strathclyde	8,570	9,906	16
Lothian	2,607	2,915	9
Dumfries and Galloway	466	494	6

The figures for Dumfries and Galloway include tendered services. The figures for Strathclyde and Lothian are for commercial registrations only.

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of Strathclyde about the problems for traffic control caused by the number of buses operating in Glasgow city centre.

Mr. Ancram: No. Section 7 of the Transport Act 1985 enables a traffic authority, in this case Strathclyde regional council, to ask the traffic commissioner to determine traffic regulation conditions to deal with congestion problems. I understand that Strathclyde regional council is already discussing this question with other interested parties.

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new operators have applied to run bus services in Scotland as a result of the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. Ancram: 83 new operator licences have been granted in the Scottish traffic area to operators who have not previously held road service licences. This figure will almost certainly increase as figures for operators of tendered services become available.

Airports

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what as been the loss of jobs at Scottish airports since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The total number of staff employed at the British Airports Authority's Scottish airports and the Civil Aviation Authority's Highland and Island aerodromes in each year since 1979 is as follows:

	BAA Scottish Airports[1]	CAA Airports[2]
1978-79	6,677	144
1979-80	7,384	166
1980-81	7,358	165
1981-82	7,202	157
1982-83	6,683	137
1983-84	6,997	128
1984-85	7,186	124
1985-86	7,238	122

[1] These figures include staff employed by the BAA, the Government, airlines, concessionaires and contractors based at the airports. (Source BAA annual report.)

[2] These figures exclude Air Traffic Control and Telecommunications staff. (Source CAA.)

Figures for local authority and privately owned airports are not available.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent in the National Health Service in the Greater Glasgow health board in each year since 1980; and if he will express these figures using a gross domestic product deflator for constant prices.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

	Gross NHS expenditure at cash prices[1] £ million	*At 1984/85 prices as measured by GDP*deflator £ million*
1980-81	324·710	416·797
1981-82	364·281	425·572
1982-83	387·187	421·873

[2] Provisional figures.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent in the National Health Service in Argyll and Clyde health board in each year since 1980; and if he will express each of these figures using a gross domestic product deflator for constant prices.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

	Gross NHS expenditure at cash prices[1] £ million	At 1984-85 prices as measured by GDP deflator £ million
1980-81	96·138	123·403
1981-82	113·284	132·358
1982-83	122·350	133·311
1983-84	132·917	138·602
1984-85	136·727	136·727
1985-86[2]	141·364[2]	133·358[2]

[1] Comprising expenditure on hospital and community services, family practitioner services and capital.
[2] Provisional figures.

Financial Assistance

Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, for the last year for which figures are available, the total amounts of financial assistance made available for the Scottish Development Agency and the Highland and Islands Development Board, respectively, both in total and per head of the insured population for the areas covered.

Mr. Lang: The information for 1985-86 is set out in the table:

	SDA	HIDB
Total resources made available £ million	127·9	39·6
Economically active population	2,242,650	146,320
Per Capita Resources made available £	57	271

The economically active population corresponds broadly with the insured population (a term which is now obsolete). Figures have been derived from the 1981 census. Certain functions of the SDA's remit extend to the whole of Scotland but for the purpose of this answer the SDA's area has been defined as that part of Scotland not covered by the HIDB.

Orlit Houses

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report a list of local authorities with Orlit and Orlit-type houses in their area, and, for each local authority and the Scottish Special Housing Association, showing total numbers of houses, numbers demolished, numbers on which remedial work has started and numbers still awaiting attention.

Mr. Ancram: The table lists Scottish local authorities which have publicly owned Orlit or Blackburn-Orlit dwellings in their areas; the numbers reported to be owned by local auhorities and other public bodies excepting the Scottish Special Housing Association; and the numbers now owned by the Scottish Special Housing Association.

Information is not held centrally on the numbers demolished or on which remedial works have been undertaken by the local authorities: but the Scottish Special Housing Association has demolished 144 Orlit dwellings and has carried out remedial works on 582 out of the 964 it now owns.

In addition, the local authorities own approximately 400 single-storey Orlit bungalows which are not included in the above totals.

Labour Statistics

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number and percentage of those unemployed in Greenock and Port Glasgow who have been out of work for (a) up to one year, (b) up to two years and (c) up to three years.

Mr. Lang: At 10 July 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants in the Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency by duration, and the percentage each category represents of the total number of unemployed claimants, is shown below. This information is available in the Library.

Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency

Duration of unemployment	Number of unemployed claimants	Percentage of total number of unemployed claimants
Up to 1 year	4,315	51·9
1 to 2 years	1,590	19·1
2 to 3 years	867	10·4

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will disaggregate the latest available unemployment figures for Greenock and Port Glasgow by age group.

Mr. Lang: At 10 July 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants disaggregated by age group in the Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency is as shown in the table. This information is available in the Library.

Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the average number of people unemployed in Greenock and Port Glasgow in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available in the precise form requested. For the Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency the annual average unemployment from June 1983, the earliest date for which figures are available, to September 1986 is shown in table A. For the Greenock travel-to-work area (which covers a larger area than the constituency but for which the information requested is available) the figures are shown in table B. This information is available in the Library. Due to the various changes which have taken place in the compilation of the unemployment statistics the figures are not directly comparable.

Table A: Greenock and Port Glasgow Parliamentary Constituency

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many young people in Greenock and Port Glasgow have never had a job since leaving school.

Mr. Lang: At 11 September 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the number of people under the age of 18 in the Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency who have never had a job since leaving school totalled 494.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the number of people in Greenock and Port Glasgow unemployed for one year or more in each year since 1979; and what percentage of the total number of the unemployed they make up in each case.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available in the precise form requested. For the Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency the number of unemployed claimants for one year or more in July of each year from 1983 (the earliest date for which figures are available) and the percentage of the total number of unemployed claimants they represent, is shown in table A. For the Greenock travel-to-work area (which covers a larger area than the constituency but for which the information requested is available) the figures are shown in table B. This information is available in the Library. Due to the various changes in the compilation of the unemployment statistics the figures are not directly comparable.

Inverclyde District Council

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will express the housing support grant awarded to Inverclyde district council at constant prices in each year since 1980.

Mr. Ancram: The information is given in the table:

Housing support grant paid (£)

Year	At outturn prices	At 1985-86 average prices[1]
1980-81	6,140,965	8,355,737

1985-86	562,537	562,537

[1] Using GDP deflators.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage level of rate support grant made available to Inverclyde district council and Scotland overall in 1980 and at the latest date.

Mr. Ancram: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Manufacturing Industry

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons were working in manufacturing industry in Greenock and Port Glasgow in 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985; and what is the latest available figure.

Mr. Lang: Comprehensive estimates of the number of people working in manufacturing industry in the Greenock and Port Glasgow area are not available for the period 1979 to 1985. However, the table gives the estimated number of those working in manufacturing plants with over 10 employees in the Greenock travel-to-work area for each year from 1979 to 1985, the latest available year. These estimates are taken from the regional data system. No reliable information is available from this source for plants with less than 10 employees. The estimates for the latest years are provisional.

Year	Estimated employees in employment
1979	20,900
1980	18,700
1981	17,400

DEFENCE

Maralinga (Clean-up Costs)

79. Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Defence what response he has made to the request from the Australian Government for a financial contribution to the cost of studies on means of clearing up the Maralinga nuclear test site; what progress has been made on joint technical studies by British and Australian scientists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Following the report to him by the technical assessment group (TAG), to which the United Kingdom provided two technical experts, Senator Evans requested assistance with a two-year research programme. In London on 3 October 1986 the Minister of State for Defence Procurement agreed, as part of the United Kingdom commitment to provide technical advice, to give support to the research studies which Senator Evans had decided were necessary before practical and cost-effective clean-up options could be fully developed. The two Ministers also recognised that uncertainties about what will be involved in the studies would have to be taken up in a further round of detailed official-level discussions planned to take place in Australia within the next two months.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his policy towards the statement by United States Assistant Secretary of Defence for International Security Policy, Mr. Richard Perle, that fears of a zero option for INF in Europe leading to NATO vulnerability to Soviet conventional superiority are unfounded;

(2) what is his policy towards the statement by United States Assistant Secretary of Defence for International Security Policy, Mr. Richard Perle, that a zero option for INF in Europe will not impair flexible response, nor the United States guarantee to defend Europe.

Mr. Stanley: I indicated the Government's view of the INF zero option in my reply to the right hon. Member for Llanelli (Mr. Davies) on 23 October, at column 1294. An INF agreement on the basis I indicated would not impair NATO's security or invalidate either the strategy of flexible response or the United States' commitment to the defence of the NATO European countries.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards the statement by United States Assistant Secretary of Defence for International Security Policy, Mr. Richard Perle, that Soviet short-range INF missiles are not at significantly higher levels than in 1976.

Mr. Stanley: Since the mid-1970s the Soviet Union has been modernising its shorter-range intermediate and short range nuclear missile forces. There has been some net increase in numbers over this period, and the newly deployed systems such as the SS21 and the SS23 are more capable than their predecessors. In addition the older system Scaleboard (range 900 km) is now deployed forward into East Germany and Czechoslavia which was not the case 10 years ago. These are significant developments.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the likely impact of an agreement to withdraw all INF missiles from Europe on the implementation of the Montebello decision to reduce and redistribute the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's nuclear stockpile;

(2) what assessment has been made of the implications of an agreement to withdraw all INF missiles from Europe for the emphasis on nuclear roles for dual-capable INF aircraft such as the F111;

(3) what assessment has been made of the likely impact of an agreement to withdraw all cruise, Pershing 2 and SS20 missiles from Europe on North Atlantic Treaty Organisation plans to deploy a new generation of chemical and short-range INF weapons.

Mr. Stanley: It is too early to be able to assess what could be the precise implications of a zero option long-range INF agreement for NATO's future tactical nuclear plans and weapons procurement programmes. A significant factor would be the terms and nature of the collateral constraints applying to shorter-range systems which have still to be determined.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards deployment by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation of the W79 nuclear warhead.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield (Mr. Caborn) on 20 January, at columns 90-91, and to the latest communique of the NATO nuclear planning group, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. No decisions have been taken regarding the modernisation of the battlefield nuclear weapons of British forces.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 30 June, column 438, if he will list the reasons given by those other states participating at the Geneva conference on disarmament for their rejection of Her Majesty's Government's proposal for an ad hoc committee to discuss seismological verification of a comprehensive nuclear weapons test ban.

Mr. Renton: I have been asked to reply.

The difference between the draft mandate for an ad hoc committee proposed by the United Kingdom together with a number of Western countries and those proposed by others is that the Western mandate does not envisage the immediate resumption of negotiations, while those other mandates do.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards regular meetings with North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Ministers for the purpose of discussing means of advancing the resolution of the technical difficulties associated with verifying a comprehensive nuclear weapons test ban.

Mr. Renton: I have been asked to reply.

While nuclear testing issues are discussed in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, for example at the recent meeting of the nuclear planning group, NATO is not the appropriate forum to discuss the resolution of the technical difficulties associated with verifying a comprehensive nuclear test ban. As we have made clear to the House on numerous occasions, we hope to see further work on such issues at the conference on disarmament in Geneva.

PRIME MINISTER

Long Lawford

26. Mr. Pawsey asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to make an official visit to Long Lawford near Rugby

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Tropical Forests

72. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will make it the policy of Her Majesty's Government to seek to promote the preservation of tropical forests through the co-ordination of aid policies in the form of incentives to projects for viable agriculture and forestry schemes in rain forest zones, with trade policies for the encouragement of commerce in sustainably produced tropical hardwoods; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government's commitment to the wise use and replenishment of the world's tropical forests was confirmed by my right hon. Friend the Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Raison), then Minister for Overseas Development, on 19 May, at column 18. We already support forest management projects in rain forest zones through the aid programme and are ready to consider further proposals. The Government have also given their support to the Food and Agriculture Organisation's tropical forestry action plan.

The Government ratified the international tropical timber agreement in 1984 and are a member of the related Tropical Timber Organisation, which was established in 1986. One of the principal functions of this organisation is to encourage trade in tropical hardwoods on the basis of sustainable and renewable resources.

World Food Conference

121. Mr. Stanbrook asked the Prime Minister what response she has made to the proposal of Sir Henry Plumb, a member of the European Parliament, for a world food conference to consider the food surpluses of the developed world against the background of famine in the developing world.

The Prime Minister: We very much share the concerns expressed by Sir Henry Plumb and we have already taken initiatives in the appropriate organisations. But famine prevention and agricultural surpluses are separate issues and must therefore be tackled separately.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 30 October.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 30 October.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 30 October.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Eurotunnel plc

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Prime Minister what recent discussions she or her Ministers have had with Eurotunnel plc on the structure of the company; and if it remains the policy of Her Majesty's Government not to invest directly in the consortium.

The Prime Minister: Neither I nor any other Ministers have had discussions with Eurotunnel plc about the structure of the company. As I made clear to the House on Tuesday, no Government money will be involved in the project.

AIDS

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and science what plans he has to educate children as to the possible health hazards of (a) promiscuity and (b) homosexuality, with specific reference to acquired immune deficiency syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The Government have made it clear, in their recent draft circular on sex education at school and in the booklet "Children at School and problems related to AIDS", circulated under cover of "Administrative Memorandum 2/86", that schools should see it as part of their task to warn pupils of the health risks of promiscuous sexual behaviour, whether heterosexual or homosexual, and should provide factual information about the AIDS virus (HIV) and modes of transmission of infection.

Single Sex Education

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on Government policy on single sex school education.

Mr. Dunn: The Government wish to preserve existing opportunities for parents to opt for single sex schools where the demand warrants it and where the schools are educationally effective.

Rothampsted Experimental Research Station

Mr. Torney asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science to what extent cuts in expenditure have affected Rothampsted experimental research station; and whether further cuts are contemplated.

Mr. Walden: Rothampsted experimental station (RES) is a grant-aided institute of the Agricultural and Food Research Council (AFRC). I understand from the AFRC that reductions in funding have resulted in the termination, deferment and curtailment of some work at RES. This includes work on the regulation of plant processes, soil properties and composition, soil fertility and plant nutrition, crops and their environment, yield variation and aerobiology, pests of non-cereal arable crops and soil management and cultivation.

The work programme of the soil survey and land resources centre (SSLRC), located at RES, is being curtailed following reductions in the funds for work commissioned by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Decisions about future financial provision for RES will be taken by AFRC once my right hon. friend, on the advice of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils, has decided the level of the council's grant-in-aid for 1987-88. These decisions will be taken towards the end of this calendar year.

Liverpool

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his recent discussion with a delegation of Liverpool parents about the problems facing the education system in that city.

Mr. Dunn: I met members of the Liverpool Association of Parent Governors and Representatives on 27 October. They expressed concern about aspects of school provision in Liverpool. Following the meeting I undertook to write to the association about a number of the points raised by the members.

Literacy

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give the level of Government funding of the adult basic literacy unit for the current and three previous financial years; and what is the estimated contribution for 1987-88.

Mr. Walden: The adult literacy and basic skills unit (ALBSU) is jointly funded by the DES and the Welsh Office. The information requested is as follows:

Financial year	DES grant £	Welsh Office grant £	Total grant £
1983-84	1,439,267	38,160	1,477,427
1984-85	1,361,937	51,843	1,413,780
1985-86	1,638,000	Nil	1,638,000
[1]1986-87	2,052,000	118,000	2,170,000
[1]1987-88	2,052,000	123,000	2,175,000

[1] Estimated contributions.

Adult Education

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what funding has been given in each of the last three years to the National Institute for Adult and Continuing Education for local development projects for the unemployed.

Mr. Walden: The funding was £119,206 in the financial year 1984-85 (the first year of the REPLAN programme), £528,671 in 1985-86, and (on present plans) up to £583,000 in the current financial year. These figures include contributions from the Welsh Office and the Manpower Services Commission.

Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the future of the Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am of course aware of the views expressed in the third report from the Education, Science and Arts Committee (House of Commons 40-1) and the Government will offer a full response to this report in due course. I do not propose to anticipate that in any detailed way, but I do wish to make plain my confidence in the council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education. The council was established only after the fullest consultation with all the major interest groups and there was similar wide consultation about the basis for its scrutiny of teacher training programmes. I believe that the council is contributing substantially to the improvement of initial teacher training. It is carrying out that important task effectively and with tact and consideration. It has my full confidence. In due course the council will complete its remit. I will then review the position, but meantime I propose no change in its terms of reference or the criteria to which it is working.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Magistrates Courts (London)

Mr. J. Enoch Powell asked the Attorney-General under what powers prosecutions in magistrates courts in London were conducted under the title of the Crown Prosecution Service before 1 October.

The Attorney-General: Commencing in the latter part of 1985, the Director of Public Prosecutions began to establish a network of local offices in the Metropolitan police and Surrey constabulary areas. They were grouped in three areas (inner London, outer London north and outer London South-Surrey) corresponding with the proposed areas for the Crown Prosecution Service. Although such offices may sometimes have been referred to as the Crown Prosecution Service, they in fact constituted part of the Department of the Director of Public Prosecutions and each area was headed by an assistant director of public prosecutions; the discharge of their duties was governed by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1979 and the regulations made thereunder. Section 4 of the Act empowers the director to assume responsibility for any prosecutions irrespective of who may have instituted the proceedings.

Hackney Council Chamber (Firearms Incident)

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Attorney-General if he will call on the Director of Public Prosecutions to investigate the circumstances surrounding the firing of a loaded pistol in the council chamber of the London borough of Hackney on 22 October.

The Attorney-General: No. The director has neither the facilities nor the powers necessary for the investigation of alleged crime. That is the function of the police, and I understand that an inquiry is in progress.

BBC (Libel Action)

Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Attorney-General what action he proposes to take on the representations he has received concerning alleged interference with witnesses in the cases of Hamilton v. BBC and Howarth v. BBC.

The Attorney-General: I have received no representations of the nature mentioned in the question. The position is as stated in my reply to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 29 October 1986.

Newspapers (Prosecutions)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Attorney-General if he will institute proceedings under the Race Relations Act against the Daily Express, Daily Mail, and the Sun in the light of material published by them between 14 and 17 October regarding the introduction of the new visa system for visitors from India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nigeria and Ghana; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Although my consent is required for the institution of proceedings under section 5A of the Public Order Act 1936, the investigation of any such alleged offences is, as with any other alleged criminal offence, a function of the police and not the Director of Public Prosecutions or myself. If the hon. Member considers that an offence may have been committed, the proper course is for him to refer the matter to the police so that if, after proper investigation, it is appropriate, a report may be submitted to the Crown Prosecution Service with a view to obtaining my consent for proceedings.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Mr. William McCrae

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland how many police reports were made on the death of Mr. William McCrae in April 1985; by whom; and on which dates.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: I am unable to provide this information. Reports submitted to the procurator fiscal by the police or any other investigating body or individual are confidential.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the pathologist's report and (b) the police reports into the death of Mr. William McCrae, a solicitor, in April 1985.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: No. Such reports are confidential.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland on whose authority the decision was taken not to hold a fatal accident inquiry into the death of Mr William McCrae in April 1985; and when that decision was taken.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The decision not to hold a fatal accident inquiry was taken on 24 June 1985 on the authority of the Lord Advocate as required in terms of the Fatal Accidents and Sudden Deaths Inquiry (Scotland) Act 1976.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Durham prison

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state (a) how many women on Durham H wing have been diagnosed as suffering from amenorrhoea during the past 24 months and (b) how many women on Durham H wing have undergone hysterectomies within the last 24 months.

Mr. Mellor: I am advised by the Director of Prison Medical Services that he would consider it a breach of medical confidentially to publish sensitive medical information relating to patients in a particular establishment or unit because of the risk of identification of individual patients. If the hon. Member is concerned about a particular case or cases and will write to me I will endeavour to assist her.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the ages of the women who have been detained in Durham H wing during the past 24 months.

Mr. Mellor: The ages on reception of the women who have been detained in Durham H wing during the past 24 months are as follows:

Age on reception	Number

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women have been detained in Durham H wing during the past 24 months.

Mr. Mellor: Including the present population, 72.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners at Durham prison have relatives living within a 50-mile radius of the prison.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not held separately and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many strip searches were carried out in Durham prison H wing within the last 12 months on (a) all prisoners and (b) category A prisoners; and what unlawful materials were found as a result of these searches.

Mr. Mellor: Strip searching is a routine security measure, and establishments are not required to record all such searches. However, Durham has, exceptionally, begun to keep records of strip searches in respect of category A female inmates. These, together with earlier records of cell changes and cell searches (which would normally involve a strip search), indicate that during the 12 months ending 30 September there were 53 strip searches of category A female prisoners in Durham.

I understand that records covering the same period show that a quantity of cannabis was found on one occasion during a strip search of a non-category A prisoner. But the justification for strip searching lies not only in the fact that staff do discover items (such as drugs, syringes, plastic knives sharpened into daggers, and scissors) which they would not otherwise find, but in the deterrent effect which such searching undoubtedly has.

Independent Television

Mr. Peter Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to be able to announce the timetable for tendering for the Independent Television franchises due to end in 1989.

Mr. Mellor: As my right hon. Friend made clear in announcing the Government's initial response to the Peacock committee's report, we are anxious that the option for change in the arrangements for the award of Independent Television contracts should remain open. This would not be the case if the IBA arranges new contracts to take effect from the beginning of 1990 for the maximum of eight years permitted under present law. Accordingly, my right hon. Friend has been considering with the IBA possible alternative arrangements under which contracts would be awarded for a shorter period. He hopes to be able to announce his conclusions before too long.

Mr. Peter Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration his Department has given to separating the Teletext service, and subscription user group facilities, from the Independent Television programme franchises after 1989.

Mr. Mellor: We shall be looking at these matters, amongst others, in our consideration of the report of the Committee on Financing the BBC.

Visitors

Mr. Winnick asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of those who were admitted as visitors in 1985 from India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Nigeria and Ghana; how many of these stayed on without permission; and what was the percentage involved.

Mr. Waddington: In 1985 the number of passengers who were admitted as visitors from these countries was:

	Number
India	169,000
Pakistan	81,100
Bangladesh	11,200
Ghana	27,100
Nigeria	164,000

I regret that the other information requested is not available.

IBA (Deputy Chairman)

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the appointment of the last deputy chairman of the Independent Broadcasting Authority expired; and when he intends to appoint a replacement.

Mr. Mellor: The deputy chairman resigned on 7 October 1985. We hope to appoint a replacement shortly.

Police Interviews (Tape Recording)

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to introduce a national scheme of tape recorded interviews between police and suspects; and if he will give a date for its commencement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Yes. We have circulated to police forces and other interested parties a draft code of practice on tape recording of interviews by police officers in police stations with persons suspected of criminal offences. After considering comments, we intend to lay the code before Parliament early next year for approval, in accordance with section 60 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

Tape recording is already under way on a trial basis in areas of several forces. So far some 34 police forces have been allocated funds for the current financial year to prepare interview rooms for use for tape recording. Further funds will be allocated to extend and complete coverage over a five-year period up to 1991.

Teaching Posts, Brent

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new teaching posts have been agreed for the London borough of Brent under section 11 of the Local Government Act; and if he will give details.

Mr. Hurd: Approval in principle was given on 14 August for grant under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966 to be paid on 177 posts which Brent intended to establish. These included teaching posts in schools, a programme director, two assistants and five tutors for in-service training. Our understanding was that the aim of these posts was to tackle under-achievement among pupils of Commonwealth origin. Since then, allegations have been made that the council intends to use the posts in ways that go beyond this. I have, therefore, sought further information from Brent. No grant will be paid unless I am satisfied that the posts meet our usual criteria.

Ports of Entry (Security)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Securicor staff are retained by the Home Office on security work at ports of entry; what is the nature of their duties; and what has been the total annual cost in each of the past five years.

Mr. Waddington: Securicor Limited is contracted to the Home Office to provide staff who act as orderlies for passengers under examination by an immigration officer and for the purpose of guarding and escorting persons detained under the Immigration Act 1971.

There are 37 Securicor posts at ports of entry. These are covered by shift work, some for 24 hours per day, so the actual number of personnel employed is greater. The cost of the service is a matter of contract, which it would not be right for me to disclose.

EMPLOYMENT

South Africa

Mr. John Hunt asked the Paymaster General what action is being taken to discourage the promotion of tourism to South Africa.

Mr. Trippier: Following the recent Commonwealth review meeting in London, the British Government decided to put a "voluntary ban" on the promotion of tourism to South Africa. I would like to explain the reasons for this and what it means for the travel trade and the public.

Over the years Britain, along with our Commonwealth and EC partners, has adopted a number of restrictive measures against South Africa. These measures have been designed to impress upon the South African Government the compelling need to dismantle the system of apartheid and to erect the structures of democracy and racial justice in South Africa. The Commonwealth review meeting came to the conclusion that, regrettably, there had not been adequate progress towards the abolition of apartheid, and that further measures were necessary.

In Britain we live in a free society and it would not be right for us to take powers to restrict freedom of travel. In introducing what therefore has to be a voluntary measure, the Government are seeking the co-operation of all those involved that they will not promote South Africa in this country as a tourist destination, that is to say as a destination for leisure travel. It is not intended that those who decide to visit South Africa, for whatever reason, should be prevented from doing so.

I am therefore appealing directly to those in Britain involved in the travel business — travel agents, tour operators and carriers—not to promote South Africa as a tourist destination. I also appeal to the media to refrain from carrying advertisements or other material which promotes South Africa as a tourist destination. My right hon. and noble Friend will be asking ABTA and representatives of the advertising industry to bring the Government's policy to the attention of their members.

I very much hope that those involved will refrain from promoting tourism to South Africa, as a demonstration of the strong opposition in Britain to the principles and practice of apartheid. The decision whether to refrain from promoting tourism to South Africa is one for the individuals, companies and organisations concerned to take.

Meanwhile, if the South African Government were to take those steps for which we and our partners have called, in order to establish a process of dialogue across racial lines, we have made clear, in the Commonwealth communiqué, that we stand ready to review the situation and if appropriate to rescind the measures we have adopted.

Hotel and Catering Industry

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what is the average earnings in the hotel and catering industry; and how this compares with the average for all other sectors of the economy.

Mr. Trippier: The latest available information on average weekly earnings is that for April 1985 and relates to full-time adult employees working a full week. Information on the average earnings in the hotel and catering industry and all other sectors of the economy is published in table X2 of the report, "New Earnings Survey 1985", part B, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what proportion of hotel and restaurant employers visited by the Wages Inspectorate were underpaying workers during the past year; what was the average pay for waitresses during the past year; and what was the average pay for female kitchen staff last year.

Mr. Trippier: No estimates of the proportion of employers paying workers less than the wages councils' minimum rates have been made. However, Wages Inspectorate statistics for 1985 show that 37·3 per cent. of establishments covered by the Licensed Residential Establishment and Licensed Restaurant Wages Council which were visited by wages inspectors were found to have underpaid one or more workers. This figure is not representative of all establishments covered by wages councils because the Wages Inspectorate tends to concentrate on the firms more likely to be underpaying.

The latest available information on gross average earnings for waitresses and female kitchen staff is that for April 1985 and is published in table 9 of part A of "New Earnings Survey 1985", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Inner City Pilot Projects

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what progress has been made in the eight inner city pilot projects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The eight inner city task forces have made considerable progress in drawing up, and now starting to implement, plans to achieve the objectives of the inner cities initiative. The task forces are ensuring that existing Government resources are targeted more effectively on their areas, and are also looking for new ways of encouraging employment and enterprise. Already some 34 projects involving about £1·3 million of the inner cities initiative budget have been approved for support. There have also been major projects financed by, for example, the Department of Environment, the Home Office and the Manpower Services Commission under other mainstream programmes in the task force areas as part of our extra attention to those areas.

We are addressing a number of further particular issues:

Plans are advanced for a scheme using local labour on an urban development project in Handsworth. This will ensure that local people benefit from the jobs available. We intend to carry forward this approach in other task force areas.

A number of projects aim to encourage enterprise, particularly among young people and ethnic minorities. These include support for black enterprise agencies, skill training facilities and managed workshops, and the Industrial Society's "Headstart in Business" courses which we are supporting in six task force areas.

We are particularly concerned to encourage sponsorship by private sector firms of projects under the community programme. At least 10 of the 20 pilot community programme projects with improved funding to encourage private sector involvement will be in task force areas.

I have also reached an agreement with the Association of British Insurers to set up contact points to deal locally with problems of the availability of insurance for businesses in our inner cities.

Action for Jobs (Advertising Campaign)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General how much has been spent on the Action for Jobs advertising campaign, nationally and regionally; how he expects to assess its effects; and what effects he expects it to have.

Mr. Lee: So far about £6·5 million has been spent on Action for Jobs advertising. This represents less than 0·01 per cent. of the total expenditure of £3 billion this year on more than 30 employment, enterprise and training measures described in the Action for Jobs booklet. Since this is a national campaign, no regional breakdown is available.

The purpose of the campaign is to increase awareness of the wide range of opportunities on offer and to encourage people to pick up the Action for Jobs booklet. We are monitoring closely the effectiveness of the campaign.

Open College

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Paymaster General on what date he now expects the Open College (College of the Air) to (a) begin enrolling students and (b) start broadcasting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Open College (the agreed name for what was initially known as the College of the Air) will begin operations (including broadcasting) in September 1987. The detailed arrangements for enrolling students, including timing, are still under consideration. These and other aspects of the college's programme will be announced in due course.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Paymaster General what funds have so far been made available to the Open College (College of the Air), either directly from Government funds or through the Manpower Services Commission; what public funds are anticipated to be required for the Open College for the remainder of this financial year; and what funds have so far been made available from private sources.

Mr. Trippier: While its own staff are being recruited, preparations for the launch of the college are being undertaken by staff of the Manpower Services Commission under the guidance of the college chairman. As yet MSC staff costs represent the only significant element of expenditure on this project. The precise level of expenditure on the college this financial year and in succeeding years will depend on the outcome of the detailed planning and discussions which are now in progress. However, I am pleased to say that the indications so far are that there is substantial private sector interest in sponsoring or otherwise supporting the college's activities.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Paymaster General who determined the level of salary proposed for the chief executive of the Open College (College of the Air).

Mr. Trippier: The chairman of the Open College was advised by independent recruitment consultants that this level of remuneration would need to be offered in order to attract applicants of the required calibre and experience.

Manpower Services Commission

Mr. Steel asked the Paymaster General how many jobs have been created by the Manpower Services Commission's voluntary projects programme sponsored Instant Muscle programme; and how much each job created has cost the Government.

Mr. Trippier: In 1985 Instant Muscle helped 220 young people into self-employment, jobs or the community programme at a cost of around £980 per job. In the first half of 1986, 270 people have entered employment at a cost of around £611 per job.

Mr. Steel asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the Manpower Services Commission's voluntary projects programme decision not to increase its funding of Instant Muscle Ltd. of Slough above that of the 1985 level.

Mr. Trippier: The voluntary projects development programme, from which Instant Muscle is funded, has a similar budget in 1986-87 to that for 1985-86. With other approaches to fostering enterprise within the programme proving successful, it is not possible at present to expand one particular approach.

ENVIRONMENT

Land Register (Searches)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the length of time each London borough takes to reply to local searches in the local land charges register and to standard additional inquiries.

Mr. Chope: My Department does not collect such information, but I understand that the Law Society publishes in its Gazette the names of those authorities taking one month or more to respond to such applications.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the present number of personnel employed by the Property Services Agency in north Yorkshire, and their locations.

Mr. Chope: The present number of PSA personnel in north Yorkshire is 748 (including 27 non-industrial staff on site control and 447 industrial staff) employed at the following locations:

Location	Non-industrial	Industrial	Total

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total cost of overheads in the running of the Property Services Agency in (a) north Yorkshire and (b) the Leeds area during the last financial year.

Mr. Chope: Overheads (as per PSA management accounts) for 1985-86 were:

	£ million
(a) North Yorkshire	2·830
(b) Leeds	2·850

Local Authorities (Compulsory Tendering)

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements have been followed in respect of consultation with those concerned in local authorities with the introduction of compulsory tendering in computer services, architectural services, local authority transport, printing and refuse disposal.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) on 22 October, at cols. 877-78.

Departmental Vote

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any further proposals to revise the cash limit for class 10, vote 2.

Mr. Waldegrave: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class X, vote 2 will be increased by £445,000 from £180,646,000 to £181,091,000 to include the extra resources for the UK2000 initiative I announced on 14 July 1986, at cols. 683-89. The increase will be within the Department's existing public expenditure provision and will not add to the planning total of public expenditure.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Couchman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial targets he has set the Ordnance Survey for the four years from 1986-87 to 1989-90; and how these will be achieved.

Mr. Waldegrave: After discussion with the Treasury, I have set the following targets for Ordnance Survey:

1. To recover not less than 40 per cent. of the total cost of core activities by 1989-90.
2. To maximise revenue on commercial activities and to recover not less than 110 per cent. of total costs of that category.
3. To recover 100 per cent. of the total cost of public sector repayment work at home and overseas.

The Ordnance Survey plan for 1987-90 based on these targets has been approved and a copy has been deposited in the Library.

Education Pooling

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to make any changes to the 1986-87 cash limit for rate support grants to local authorities in England in respect of education pooling.

Mr. Ridley: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Education and Science announced in December 1985 the revised contributions of local authorities to the education pools for 1985-86. The Inner London education authority's contribution was reduced by £31·5 million. The sum has now been refunded to ILEA; the balancing amounts will be recovered from other education authorities early in 1987-88.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the 1986-87 cash limit for class X vote 6 will therefore be increased by £31,500,000 from £9,246,000,000 to £9,277,500,000. Expenditure on this Vote is not classified as public expenditure and so there are no implications for the Reserve.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Banqueting and Dining Facilities

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Lord Privy Seal for how long the register of bookings for dining rooms and other banqueting facilities in the House of Commons is kept after the period to which it refers.

Mr. Biffen: The register is retained for one year only.

State Opening of Parliament (Photograph)

Sir Reginald Eyre asked the Lord Privy Seal whether there are plans for marking the occasion of the next Opening of Parliament with a photograph of the House in session; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: Yes. Following a resolution of the Services Committee in June, I understand that arrangements have been made for a photograph of the House in session to be taken between 2.30 and 3 pm on the afternoon of Wednesday 12 November, the day of the State Opening of Parliament. I am informed that the photograph will show the traditional view of the Chamber from a position behind the Serjeant at Arms Chair. It is intended that prints will be offered for sale to Members.

The attention of hon. Members will be drawn to these arrangements by notices in the All Party Whip.

ENERGY

British Gas (Flotation)

Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list all those companies involved in the flotation of British Gas giving, in each case, the level of fees agreed and the arrangements governing the level of such fees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 13 June, at column 408, which listed the firms giving advice to my Department on the sale of British Gas. A number of other firms are involved in the detailed preparations for the sale. It is not the Government's practice to publish the fees paid to individual firms on privatisation exercises, as these are commercially confidential.

Mersey Barrage

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on progress being made towards the construction of a Mersey barrage.

Mr. David Hunt: The Department and the Mersey Barrage Company have combined on an equal sharing basis to fund over £800,000 towards further studies into a Mersey barrage. I exchanged the relevant contract documents with the chairman of the Mersey Barrage Company at a ceremony in Liverpool on Monday 20 October.

The principal objective of the studies will be to assess whether there is any overriding impediment to the construction of the barrage and to select a preferred line. The consulting managers appointed by the company are now in process of inviting tenders and letting contracts for the study of these and related topics affecting the estuary.

Wiltshire (Oil Exploration)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the recent progress of exploration for oil in Wiltshire.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: There have been three recent exploration wells, two drilled in 1985, at Norton Ferris south-west of Warminster and at Netherhampton near Salisbury, and this year at Urchfont near Devizes. The results of the drilling are being evaluated.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South Africa

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action was taken by Her Britannic Majesty's Government's delegation to the recent conference of the International Red Cross at Geneva in connection with the expulsion of the South African Government's delegation.

Mr. Eggar: The United Kingdom delegation emphasised that all states parties to the Geneva conventions had the right to attend the conference. When a vote was forced, the delegation voted against a motion to suspend the South African Government delegation for failing to observe the principles of the Red Cross and humanitarian law by pursuing its apartheid policy.

Visas

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many officers were in post in embassies and consulates in Bangladesh, India and Pakistan to deal with the issuing of visas on 15 October.

Mr. Eggar: The number of officers dealing with long and short term visas in these posts on 15 October is as follows:

Bangladesh
Dhaka
1 First Secretary
3 Second Secretaries
17 Entry Clearance Officers

India
New Delhi
1 First Secretary
5 Entry Clearance Officers
Bombay
1 Second Secretary
7 Entry Clearance Officers
Madras
3 Entry Clearance Officers
Calcutta
1 Entry Clearance Officer

Pakistan
Islamabad
1 First Secretary
2 Second Secretaries
17 Entry Clearance Officers
Karachi
4 Entry Clearance Officers

NORTHERN IRELAND

Unemployed Families

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he can estimate the number of children in unemployed families for the latest date possible in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is not available in the form requested. However, on 12 December 1984 the number of children under 16 years in unemployed families receiving supplementary benefit was 76,500.

Police Complaints Board

Mr. Hayward asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he proposes to publish the triennial review report of the Police Complaints Board for Northern Ireland.

Mr. King: Under article 11(6) of the Police (Northern Ireland) Order 1977, the Police Complaints Board for Northern Ireland is required to keep under review the working of part II of the order—Complaints Against the Police, and to make to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a report thereon at least once every three years after the coming into force of the article. The third review report of the Police Complaints Board for Northern Ireland has been made to me and as has been the practice with the two previous reports I have arranged for it to be published today and copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Overseas Trade Board

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state (i) the gross financial resources in real terms available to the British Overseas Trade Board for each year since 1979 and (ii) the projections for the British Overseas Trade Board budget in real terms for the next five years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The following figures show gross and net expenditure by the British Overseas Trade Board in constant price terms:

£ million (September 1979)

Year	Gross expenditure	Net expenditure
1979-80	25·7	21·2
1980-81	19·8	16·1
1981-82	19·2	15·2
1982-83	20·8	16·3
1983-84	20·5	15·3
1984-85	[1]24·5	[1]18·7
1985-86	24·2	[2]17·1
1986-87	24·7	16·2

[1] Expenditure on publicity and promotion was transferred to the BOTB budget from the COI with effect from 1984-85. On a constant price basis the expenditure amounted to £1·5 million in 1984-85.

[2] Export Intelligence Service revenue was transferred to the BOTB budget from another DTI budget with effect from 1985-86. On a constant price basis this reduced net expenditure by £0·3 million in 1985-86.

The level of the BOTB budget for the years 1987-88 to 1989-90 is being reviewed as part of the 1986 Public Expenditure Survey which will be completed shortly.

Ault and Wiborg (Paint Factory)

Mr. Bidwell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the efforts of Berger to take over the Ault and Wiborg paint factory at Perivale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and others about this proposed acquisition. They have been drawn to the attention of the Director General of Fair Trading, who is currently examining the proposal.

Independent Television Companies

Mr. Peter Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department has received suggesting technical, commercial and industrial advantage which would arise from a separation of the teletext service and subscription users group facilities from the Independent Television programme companies.

Mr. Butcher: My Department has not received any formal representations on this issue but is aware of the various suggestions which have been put forward concerning the use of teletext and subscription user group facilities.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade made in Punta del Este.

Mr. Alan Clark: Contracting parties to the GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) met at ministerial level in Punta del Este, Uruguay, on 15 to 20 September. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry presided over meetings of European Community Ministers during the conference and I represented the United Kingdom.

The contracting parties agreed unanimously to launch the eighth round of multilateral trade negotiations in GATT, to be known as the "Uruguay round". This launch is the result of three years' hard preparatory work. The success of the negotiations is vital to the preservation and strengthening of the world trading system.

The negotiations are scheduled to be completed within four years. The agenda will cover trade not only in goods but also in agricultural products and services.

The Ministerial declaration, a copy of which has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses, provides for discussion of all matters to which the Government attach importance.

South Africa

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on the voluntary ban on new investment in South Africa to which Her Majesty's Government agreed at the Commonwealth Heads of Government review meeting in August; and if he is taking any further action in this regard.

Mr. Channon: The member states of the EC have agreed that the measure will cover new direct investment in the RSA by natural or legal persons resident in any member state. In accordance with this and our undertaking at the Commonwealth Heads of Government review meeting, the British Government are taking action to dissuade United Kingdom firms from making new, direct investments and to ask all the companies concerned to comply fully with this measure.

Under the terms of the intergovernmental decision agreed by the member states of the EC, new direct investment includes new acquisitions of share and loan capital of South African companies, and also includes loans and capital injections through inter-company and branch/head office accounts.

Financial transactions and bank lending in support of normal trading activity are not included. Also excluded are investments in training, health and social sectors in line with the positive measures agreed in the EC last year and this.

I believe that British industry, which has repeatedly supported calls for fundamental social and political reform in South Africa, is ready to play its part in helping to bring this about by non-violent means. Given the extent of existing United Kingdom investment in South Africa, wholehearted co-operation by British companies with the voluntary ban on new investment should have considerable impact.

Meanwhile, if the South African Government were to take those steps for which we and our partners have called, in order to establish a process of dialogue across racial lines, we have made clear in the Commonwealth communiqué that we stand ready to review and, if appropriate, to rescind the measures we have adopted.

Diplomatic Documents (Sale)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to take action to prohibit the sale of diplomatic passports, visas and honourary consulships by British-based companies.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986, c. 34]: If the hon. Member will write to me, I shall consider the matter further.

SCOTLAND

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to spend more money on advertising the availability of cervical cancer screening in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: A Scottish Health Service planning council working group has been reviewing the cervical cytology service in Scotland and will shortly be submitting its report. We shall consider its recomendations very carefully including any views it may express on the need to advertise this service.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of cervical cancer screening in Scotland in the last financial year.

Mr. John MacKay: Figures on the total cost of cervical cancer screening in Scotland are not available centrally.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women have been screened for cervical cancer in Scotland in 1986.

Mr. John MacKay: 356,746 cervical smears were examined in Scotland in 1985, the latest year for which details are available. This figure includes repeat smears and does not represent the total number of women screened, for which figures are not available.

Strathclyde Island Population

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the island population in Strathclyde were born on the island on which they now live.

Mr. John MacKay: I regret that the information is not available in the detail requested. The 1981 census of population asked for country of birth: the results showed that approximately 86 per cent. of the residents of islands in Strathclyde were born in Scotland.

Mental Illness

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients were accommodated in mental illness hospitals in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is as follows:

Number of patients resident in mental illness hospitals in Scotland

	Numbers
1980	15,766
1981	16,103
1982	15,678

The figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent by each local authority in providing community care for those suffering from mental illness in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not held centrally.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women were admitted to mental illness hospitals in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is as follows:

Number of women admitted to mental illness hospitals in Scotland

	1st admission	Re-admission	All admissions
1980	5,456	8,804	14,348
1981	5,576	9,072	14,709
1982	5,212	8,182	13,475
1983	5,545	9,239	14,823
1984	5,411	9,402	15,000

The figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received concerning the extent and quality of community care for those patients discharged from mental illness hospitals.

Mr. John MacKay: Representations and inquiries are received from time to time on the general subject of community care, but there have been no recent representations relating specifically to the care of persons discharged from hospital following treatment for mental illness.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was made available by the Government for local authorities to provide for those suffering from mental illness in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: Rate support grant is not hypothecated to individual services; it is for local authorities to determine priorities within the resources available to them.

Mental Health Hospitals

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent on mental health hospitals in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is published annually in "Scottish Health Service Costs", copies of which are available in the Library.

Community Psychiatric Nursing Service

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received regarding the community psychiatric nursing service.

Mr. John MacKay: None.

Geriatric Care Beds

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many beds were available for geriatric care in (a) public and (b) private sector hospitals in Scotland in each of the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: The number of beds available for geriatric care in NHS hospitals as at 30 September in each of the years in question was as follows:

Year	Number of Available Beds
1980	9,767
1982	10,146

Year	Number of Available Beds
1983	10,401
1984	10,700
1985	10,690

Comparable information for private sector hospitals is not centrally available.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about the number of beds available for geriatric care in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Only one representation about the number of beds available for geriatric care in Scotland has been received in the last six months.

Scottish Institute for Adult and Continuing Education

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what funding his Department has provided for the Scottish Institute for Adult and Continuing Education for local development projects for the unemployed in each of the last three years.

Mr. Rifkind: None.

Adult Basic Education

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of funding by his Department for the Scottish adult basic education unit over each of the last three financial years; and what funds his Department is making available for adult basic education in the current year.

Mr. Rifkind: Grants offered to the Scottish adult basic education unit for each of the last three years were as follows:

Year	Recurrent Grant	Supplementary Grant
1983-84	£152,000	£7,000
1984-85	£160,650	—
1985-86	£165,500	—

From 1 April 1986 the work of the unit was integrated with that of the Scottish Community Education Council. The aggregate grant to the council for 1986-87 is £542,000, an overall increase of almost 4 per cent.

Physical Education

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the unit costs at Jordanhill Scottish school of physical education as compared with Dunfermline college; what further costs to public funds will arise following the integration of physical education students at the Cramond site; and what financial appraisals were carried out before he announced his decision on 17 July.

Mr. John MacKay: Centrally held unit cost figures for colleges of education are only available for complete institutions; for the 1985-86 financial year the net costs are £3,781 at Jordanhill college of education and £4,796 at Dunfermline college of physical education. I do not expect additional costs to the Exchequer to arise as a direct consequence of the integration of PE students at the Cramond site. The Scottish Education Department examined the financial consequences of various options for the future arrangements for PE training before my right hon. and learned Friend announced his decision on 17 July, in reaching which he had regard also to educational and accommodation factors.

Rate Support Grant

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage level of rate support grant made available to Inverclyde district council and Scotland overall in 1980 and at the latest date.

Mr. Ancram [pursuant to his reply, 29 October 1986]: Rate support grant for Inverclyde was 47·1 per cent. of relevant expenditure, including loan charges in 1980-81 and 27·4 per cent. of budgeted relevant expenditure in 1986-87. The corresponding figures for Scotland are 57·6 per cent. for 1980-81 and 47 per cent. for 1986-87. These figures do not include specific grants which are included in the calculation of aggregate Exchequer grants. The grant figures used for 1986-87 are based on the Rate Support Grant (Scotland) (No. 4) Order 1985. No adjustment has been made for grant penalties, since they will be restored if authorities bring their expenditure down to guideline on outturn.

TRANSPORT

Safety Barriers (Motorways)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied with the types of safety fencing currently used on motorways and other trunk roads, particularly in central reservations; if he has any plans to introduce concrete barriers on motorways on an experimental basis in the next 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I am generally satisfied with the types of safety fences used in the central reserves and verges of motorways and trunk roads and have no plans to introduce concrete barriers on an experimental basis. The Department has a programme of research and development of safety fences and barriers of different types, including concrete barriers. Satisfactory results may lead to changes in the future.

Aircraft (Disabled People)

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the rules govening the proportion and seating position and seating positions of disabled passengers carried on scheduled flights.

Mr. Michael Spicer: It is the Civil Aviation Authority which is responsible for air safety. There are no rules about the proportion of disabled passengers carried on scheduled flights. However, the CAA issues notices and other guidance to holders of air operators certificates on such matters as cabin crew training and the seating of handicappped and able-bodied passengers in relation to emergencies.

Aircraft (Engines)

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has given any instructions to the Civil Aviation Authority with regard to extended twin-engined aircraft operations, about the guarantees required by the Authority to ensure that data on precautionary and enforced shutdowns is accurate and includes all such shutdowns as required under CAP 513.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority is statutorily responsible for aviation safety and I do not give it instructions about it. The CAA's civil aviation publication 513 contains guidelines for the approval of extended range operations by United Kingdom-registered twin engined aircraft. Under article 85 of the Air Navigaton Order 1985 all precautionary and enforced shut-downs of engines on such aircraft must be reported to the authority. Civil Aviation publication 382 gives details of this procedure.

M1 (Contraflow Systems)

Mr. Walter Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many contraflow systems are working between London and Wakefield northbound and southbound; what are their locations; how long they will be operating; and on what estimated dates thay will be terminated.

Mr. Moore: The information requested is as follows:

Site	Location of contraflow	Start date	Programmed completion date
J14-15	Northbound carriageway	1 October 1986	Mid November 1986
J22-23	Northbound carriageway	6 October 1986	25 November 1986
J27-28	Southbound carriageway	7 September 1986	16 November 1986
J31-33	Both carriageways	Mid October 1986	End of January 1987

Motorways (Maintenance)

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue guidelines to motorway contractors asking them to ensure that all motorways keep open at least two lanes during maintenance work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department's standards for traffic management at motorway maintenance sites already ensure that on three-lane motorways at least two lanes in each direction are kept open wherever possible. Reductions to one lane are permitted only as a last resort, and then we try to keep them in off-peak periods. Reductions to one lane are sometimes necessary on two-lane motorways in order to provide a safety zone between the traffic stream and the work site.

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the contracts and the number of personnel working on the M5 between junctions 21 and 23 on Saturday 25 October;

(2) if he or one of his Ministerial colleagues will visit the M5 between junctions 21 and 23; and if he will take urgent action to open the M5 to two lanes between these two junctions;

(3) if he will review the progress of maintenance work on the M5 between junctions 21 and 23; and who are the consulting engineers for this maintenance contract;

(4) on what basis his Department gave permission for the reduction of the M5 to one lane between junctions 21 and 22, and 22 and 23, on Saturday 25 October.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are three separate maintenance operations currently in progress on the M5 between junctions 21 and 23. The larger works are the replacement of a 2 km length of the wearing surface of the inside lane between junctions 21 and 22. In addition two smaller works are in progress, similarly replacing the wearing course at the approaches to the bridges over the rivers Brue and Huntspill.

In the interests of safety to both workmen and road users it is essential in each situation to close two lanes, leaving only one for traffic during working hours. The contractors are instructed, however, to open two lanes to traffic on ceasing work for the day. I am satisfied that the work, which is being supervised for my Department by Somerset county council, is being properly carried out. It is inevitable that there will be some delays to traffic. The contractors, Messrs Asfare and Roberts and Son, had 12 operatives including drivers working on the site on Saturday 25 October. This work is scheduled for completion by 5 November.

Westminster Bridge

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what criteria he used in determining that the present pedestrian crossing on Westminster bridge road opposite Belvedere road requires special approval for its retention;

(2) to whom the responsibility for switching on lights at the cycle facility on Westminster bridge road has been transferred following the abolition of the Greater London council;

(3) what criteria he used in deciding to instruct the London borough of Lambeth to close the space in the centre island of Westminster bridge road opposite Belvedere road;

(4) why he has instructed the traffic control systems unit to remove the cycle signals on Westminster bridge road at its junction with Belvedere road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: All signalled pedestrian crossings in London and elsewhere that are not pelican crossings require my right hon. Friend's approval under the provisions of the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1981. My right hon. Friend is also responsible for all traffic light signals in London. There is a difficult design problem still to be resolved about the appropriate pedestrian and cycle crossing facilities at the southern end of Westminster bridge, where Lambeth borough council became the highway authority last April. This has to be worked out between my Department, the traffic control systems unit and Lambeth council. The sole consideration in the Department's actions since the original authorisation was given has been to ensure that lives are not put at risk by the present incomplete state of the facility.

A49 (Callow Hill)

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will indicate, in respect of the A49 trunk road rebuilding contract currently being executed at Callow hill, Herefordshire, whether there have been any alterations to the specification to that set out in the tender documents against which the contract was let; and whether he anticipates the contract will be completed on the schedule called for in the contract.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There have been no major specification changes. There have been two minor changes to the method of working as set out in the tender documents:

(i) The rolled asphalt roadbase is being laid in three layers instead of two as originally specified. This enables earlier protection of the road sub-base to be provided.

(ii) The sequence of stockpiling excavated material has been modified to better suit the contractor's programme.

Both these variations have been agreed with the contractor with no increase in contractual cost. We cannot at this stage preclude the possibility of delay. No formal extension of contract has been granted so far.

Uttoxeter Bypass

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport why he will not earmark specific funds for the construction of a bypass of Uttoxeter in the near future.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: It is for Staffordshire county council, as the local highway authority, to make a bid for capital funding of a bypass of Uttoxeter when it is ready to proceed with a scheme. At that stage it would be considered for support along with other schemes as part of the annual transportation policies and programme process. As I indicated in my reply on 24 October, Staffordshire county council is not yet in a position to make such a bid.

Syrian Arab Airlines

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will ban flights to the United Kingdom by Syrian Arab Airlines.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Flights of Syrian Arab Airlines have currently been discontinued. The Government are considering whether any further formal steps should be taken.

Airport Rail Link, Manchester

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what further information he has received about the prospects for a rail link to Manchester international airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I understand that the parties concerned with the proposed rail link have recently made considerable progress on a possible cost-sharing arrangement, but I have yet to see exactly what is proposed.

Public Transport, London

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his practice to place a copy of the current working timetable of London Underground Ltd. and London Buses Ltd. in the Library.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. A wide range of current timetables for particular travel needs are issued by London Underground Ltd. and London Buses Ltd. and are readily available from bus and Underground stations. It is a matter for the Library to decide which of these it should acquire.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Banking Industry

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the consultative papers he sent out to interested parties in the course of his discussions with the banking industry on the Leigh-Pemberton Committee's report, together with a list of the persons and institutions to which each of those papers was sent;

(2) what consultations he had with interested parties before he published in his White Paper on Banking Supervision, Cmnd. 9695, the proposal that only institutions with £5 million paid up equity be allowed to use the word bank as part of their name; and if he will list the persons and institutions to whom he addressed requests for comment on this point.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the hon. Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) on 19 July 1985, col. 289. The consultative papers in question were sent to all institutions at that time authorised to take deposits under the Banking Act 1979; to major United Kingdom accounting firms; to a number of United Kingdom Government Departments and supervisory authorities in other countries; and to the following bodies:

The British Bankers Association
The Committee of London Clearing Bankers
The Committee of Scottish Clearing Bankers
The Finance Houses Association
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in Scotland
The National Association of Security Dealers and Investment Managers
The Registry of Friendly Societies
The Securities and Investments Board
The Stock Exchange

The Bank of England also invited representations from any other interested individuals, institutions or representative bodies. All institutions were invited to comment on all matters in the consultative papers. Copies of the consultative papers were placed in the House Library at the time they were issued. The proposal that only institutions with £5 million paid-up equity capital be allowed to use the word "bank" as part of their name was made in the light of representations received following the issue of the consultative papers.

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list of the currently authorised deposit factors that fall outside the £5 million limit in paid-up equity which he now proposes to apply before allowing the use of the word "bank" as part of their name.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Government intend to bring forward as soon as practicable legislation to implement the proposals in the White Paper "Banking Supervision" (Cmnd. 9695), but I will write to my hon. Friend after the Bill is published.

Unemployment

Mrs. Clywd asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to include a forecast of the level of unemployment in 1987-88 in his next Budget.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to include a forecast of future levels of unemployment in his next Budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: No. It has not been the practice of this or previous Governments to publish forecasts of unemployment.

Chargeable Gains (Taxation)

Sir David Price asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the change in revenue in a full year if capital gains tax and corporation tax on chargeable gains were repealed and replaced by a charge to income tax and corporation tax, respectively, on gains computed in a like manner, on assets disposed of within one year of acquisition.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Revenue from capital gains tax and from corporation tax on chargeable gains would be reduced by more than 90 per cent.

Trustee Savings Bank

Mr. Blair asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the number and size of shareholdings in the Trustee Savings Bank immediately following flotation.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Information is given in a press release, issued on 29 September by Lazard Brothers and Co. Ltd. on behalf of the Trustee Savings Bank central board, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Privatisation

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost of pre-flotation publicity for each of the concerns privatised by the Government since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Benefits

Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the latest take-up estimates for supplementary benefit and one-parent benefit.

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people eligible for supplementary benefit do not claim it.

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the estimated take-up of supplementary benefit derived from the 1983 family expenditure survey on the same basis as his reply of 30 November 1983, Official Report, column 532, to the hon. Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold.)

Mr. Lyell: The figures for supplementary benefit are shown in the tables. These are derived from the 1983 family expenditure survey and are compared with the 1981 figures. Figures for one-parent benefit will be provided shortly.

Estimates of take-up of supplementary benefit for 1983

Notes

1. Estimates of those with an unclaimed entitlement are based on DHSS analysis of income and other information recorded by respondents to the family expenditure survey (FES). The estimates of those in receipt are derived from the supplementary benefit annual and quarterly statistical enquiries.

2. The estimates relate only to people living in private households; people in institutions are not sampled by the FES.

3. Estimates are subject to sampling error, particularly those based on the FES.

4. Calculation of entitlement to supplementary benefit is based on the appropriate scale rates plus age-related heating additions and also in 1983 other heating additions which can be identified from FES information.

5. For 1981 calculation of entitlement included housing costs, except where the family would have been better off claiming housing rebates. For 1983 rent and rates are excluded to take account of the introduction of housing benefit which began in November 1982.

6. In 1981 FES participants were not asked about the amount of capital they had, only about income received from capital, and assumptions had to be made from this information about such capital holdings. In 1983 additional questions were asked about some forms of capital from which no income was received e.g. National Savings Certificates.

7. The estimates for 1983 exclude housing benefit supplement recipients and entitled non-recipients, for which no reliable estimates can be made because of the transitional arrangements which operated in several parts of the country following the introduction of housing benefit.

Comparisons between 1981 and 1983

In 1981 supplementary benefit requirements included rent and domestic rates, but ceased to do so with the introduction of housing benefit, partially from November 1982 and fully from April 1983. Supplementary benefit householders then received housing benefit to cover such housing costs. For this reason no direct comparison can be made between the 1981 and 1983 take-up estimates (see notes 5 and 7 to the tables).

Amounts of benefit unclaimed

Take up increases as the amount of entitlement increases. In 1983 the estimated proportion of benefit taken up was 89 per cent., and thus higher than the proportion of those entitled at any one time who actually claimed—76 per cent. The estimated proportion of benefit taken-up by the different groups was as follows:

Estimated proportion of benefit taken up

		per cent.
(i)	Pensioners	79
(ii)	Non-pensioners—total	90
(iii)	Sick and disabled	89
(iv)	Unemployed	89
(v)	One-parent families not included in (iii) and (iv)	97

Pensioners

The 1983 take-up estimate for pensioners is uncertain because of apparent deficiencies in the information obtained by FES from pensioner respondents. Comparison between figures based on FES data and the supplementary benefit annual and quarterly statistics indicate that a substantial number of FES pensioner respondents failed to report that they were receiving supplementary benefit. The FES figures have therefore been adjusted to make an allowance for this, but the adjustment must to some extent be speculative. The indications are that the FES figures fail to identify receipt of supplementary benefit by some 350,000 pensioners. For technical reasons, partly to do with lack of precision in such a complex survey as FES, the estimate of entitled non-recipients could not just be reduced by 350,000. Statisticians have adjusted the figures by reducing the estimated number of entitled non-recipients by 160,000. A technical note explaining this adjustment is being placed in the Library. There must be some doubt whether the estimate that 67 per cent. of pensioners were claiming 79 per cent. of their entitlement to supplementary benefit is correct. The indications are, however, that the average entitlement of non-claiming pensioners is small, £3·40 a week, including some 60 per cent. entitled to less than £3.

Non-pensioners

In 1983 it is estimated that at one time 83 per cent. of non-pensioners claimed 90 per cent. of their supplementary benefit entitlement. It is notable that 91 per cent. of one-parent families claimed 97 per cent. of their entitlement. It must be doubtful to what extent take-up by this group could be improved. The reasons for non take-up are complex. Analysis of the characteristics of unemployed people who had not taken up their entitlement to supplementary benefit shows that a high proportion, about 60 per cent., were living in other people's households, and in the majority the income of the household as a whole was well above supplementary benefit levels. Take-up increased to 90 per cent. for those unemployed more than three months. The information on which the take-up figures is based is given by FES respondents at one point of time. Those who have not taken up their entitlement at that point of time may do so at another time.

Measures to Promote Take-up

We continue to promote take-up by issuing a claim form to all retirement pensioners and widows, all unemployed claimants and all sickness benefit, invalidity benefit and severe disablement allowance claimants. We co-operate at local level with well organised take-up campaigns mounted by local authorities. A postal claim form procedure has been introduced for all claimants to make it easier and more convenient for them to claim if they prefer not to be interviewed about their claim in a social security office or at home.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the latest figures for the take up of benefits by people aged 16 to 25 years.

Mr. Lyell [pursuant to the reply, 21 October 1986, c. 859]: Estimates of the take-up of housing benefit and family income supplement for 16 to 25 year olds are not practicable because of the limited number of sample cases available in the family expenditure survey. However, take-up of supplementary benefit for this age group was 80 per cent. in 1983.

Supplementary Benefit

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the percentage change in the amount paid out under regulation 9, Supplementary Benefit Regulations to people in private residential care, from (a) 1979 to (b) the latest estimated figures that are available.

Mr. Lyell: Information is not available in the form requested. Annual supplementary benfit expenditure on residents in private and voluntary residential care homes and nursing homes who are not sponsored by a local authority has increased from £10 million in 1979 to £200 million in 1984, the last year for which information is available.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the number and percentage of households and persons in Scotland below, at, or up to 40 per cent. above supplementary benefit level in 1979, 1981 and 1983.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 73]: Estimates are provided in the tables. All of these estimates are subject to sampling error, but the Scottish estimates of low income assessment units that are not receiving supplementary benefit are particularly prone to this statistical problem. This is because of the small number of sample cases available in the Family Expenditure Survey.

Notes:

(i) The Scottish samples have been translated into population estimates using factors based on data for Great Britain as a whole. Since the Family Expenditure Survey response rate may differ from that for Great Britain as a whole and since the extent of the difference may vary from one year to another, it follows that Scottish estimates may be more vulnerable to grossing error than data for Great Britain as a whole. Taken together, these two sources of statistical error make both trends and levels in the Scottish estimates peculiarly difficult to interpret. These statistical problems will be considered as a part of the Low Income Technical Review.

(ii) The assumptions on which these estimates are based are the same as those contained in the "Low Income Families—1983" tables lodged in the Library of the House.

(iii) RNR = Relative net resources. For a full definition of this term see paragraphs 4 and 5 of "Low Income Families—1983".

(iv) HBS = housing benefit supplement.

(v) A supplementary benefit assessment unit is usually either a single person or a couple with their dependent children if they have any. Dependent children are those aged less than 16 or 19 if still in full-time non-advanced education.

(vi) "Other" is composed of single-parents, full-time students, full-time workers away from work on part or no pay, those of non-pension age not working and not seeking work and the sick and disabled.

(vii) Classifications by employment status and assessment type are mutually exclusive and non-additive.

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were living in families below supplementary benefit level, on supplementary benefit, with incomes up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit, classified by both employment status and family type in 1983 on the latest basis and on a basis comparable with 1981 and 1979; and, in each case, what proportion of the total population in each category they represent.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Industrial Diseases

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the Government were last advised on the prescription of industrial diseases by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: We last received advice from the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council earlier this year when it submitted its report on occupational lung cancer. Arrangements are being made to publish this report before the end of the year.

AIDS

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether a decision has yet been reached about future stages of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome information campaign; and whether a television advertising campaign and a leaflet for households will be included.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Stockport (Mr. Favell) on 28 October.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he has made of the impact of the latest publicity campaign about acquired immune deficiency syndrome (a) generally and (b) on school-children.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South (Mr. Sumberg) on 21 October at column 858.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will reduce the recommended interval for screening of women for cervical cancer from five years to three years; what would be the additional cost involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The recommended interval for cervical cancer screening is currently under review. We will announce the outcome of that review in due course.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will reduce the period within which health authorities must instal computerised call and recall systems for cervical cancer screening from two years to one year; what would be the additional cost involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: All health authorities in England have reported that they plan to implement computerised call and recall systems for cervical cancer screening within the next seventeen months, that is no later than March 1988. This is an ambitious but realistic timetable. There would be severe practical difficulties, for example in staff recruitment and training, in any attempt at further acceleration of the timetable.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will issue guidance to procure the issue of the Lerner spatula within the National Health Service for cervical smear tests in place of the present Ayre spatula.

Mrs. Currie: We are aware of suggestions that various spatulas, one of which is the Lerner spatula, may be more effective than the Ayre spatula for taking cervical smears. We shall be asking the independent expert committee on gynaecological cytology for their advice.

Skoal Bandits

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to conclude an agreement with the manufacturers of Skoal bandits enabling a health warning to be printed on the containers of this product; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: We hope to make an announcement shortly.

General Practice (Ancillary Staff)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what information he has concerning the number of ancillary staff who are employed by doctors in general practice and who are the spouse or other relation of the doctor concerned;

(2) what information he has concerning the average reimbursement to doctors in general practice for ancillary staff to whom they are related; and how that average reimbursement compares to that which is paid on average for unrelated staff;

(3) if he will introduce legislation to ensure that equal payments are made for the ancillary staff of doctors in general practice regardless of whether they are relations of the doctor or not; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what recent discussions and correspondence have been entered into by his Department with interested parties concerning payments for ancillary workers who are related to doctors in general practice.

Mr. Newton: In 1984-85, the latest year for which figures are available, 282 related ancillary staff were employed at some stage during that year. The allowance currently payable to practitioners for employing related staff is £2,005 per annum, provided such staff work not less than 19 hours a week.

We have no centrally held information about hours worked by related ancillary staff, so it is difficult to make valid comparisons between the allowances paid to doctors in respect of their related and unrelated staff. However the fact that a "pay differential" exists is acknowledged. Indeed my predecessor met representatives of the General Medical Services Committee of the BMA and of the Doctors' Wives Association to discuss the matter on 19 February 1986. It was agreed that the Department, in conjunction with the GMSC, should draw up detailed proposals for reimbursing doctors for their related ancillary staff in the same way as unrelated staff, provided this could be done with reasonable safeguards against abuse and at no extra cost to the National Health Service. The GMSC and the Doctors' Wives Association accepted that proposals would be drawn up subject to these constraints. On 25 June 1986 officials wrote to the GMSC with proposals and we await their response.

Benefits and Allowances

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update to July 1986, at assumed July 1986 prices, the information on the value of benefits and allowances provided in the reply of 23 December 1982, Official Report, column 690, to the hon. Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley).

Mr. Major: The information is as follows:

	(a) Value in April 1955 money terms	(b) Column (a) expressed at July 1986 prices[1]	(c) Value in July 1986 money terms	(d) Column (c) as Index Column (b) = 100

[6] Child tax allowance for the family illustrated would have been £200 per annum in 1955. It has been assumed that the family's income subject to tax is more than £200 below the top of the standard rate tax band.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will be introducing legislation to allow recipients of the mobility allowance to retain it beyond the age of 75 years.

Mr. Major: We have no present plans to do so.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many applications for mobility allowance were made in Scotland in 1985; of these how many were (i) granted and (ii) refused; of the claimants whose applications were refused how many subsequently appealed to the medical boards; in how many of these cases the original refusal was overturned; and in how many cases a refusal by a medical board was subsequently overturned by the Medical Appeals Tribunal.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many married women have now claimed invalid care allowance following his decision to extend it to them; what steps he is taking to ensure that all married women entitled to this benefit will have entered their claim before the end of the year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: A total of around 75,000 married and cohabiting women have claimed invalid care allowance, 60,000 of these claims have been made since my right hon. Friend's announcement on 23 June at column 21. We have sent individual letters to some 400,000 attendance allowance beneficiaries, asking them to pass on details of the extension to their carer. In addition there has been a national press campaign in newspapers and journals, including women's magazines. All the publicity has explained the ability to claim back to 22 December 1984 if the claim is received in the Department by 31 December 1986.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the level of the earnings limit for the invalid care allowance at April 1987 had it risen in line with changes to the retail price index since it was last increased in November 1982.

Mr. Major: £14·27.

British Council of Organisations of Disabled People

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assistance his Department gives to the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People; what his plans are for any future assistance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The British Council of Organisations of Disabled People is currently in receipt of a two year grant from the Department for the years 1985-86 and 1986-87 of £9,000 and £10,000 respectively towards their central costs in establishing a development worker post. We have received an application from BCODP for a grant towards their international activities and towards a proposed meeting of the World Council of the Disabled People's International in the United Kingdom in 1987. These applications are currently being considered.

Local Authorities (Ministerial Meetings)

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will reconsider his practice of agreeing to meet only one representative of local authority social services committees in those local authorities where there is no overall majority; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Our practice is to hold informal meetings about three times a year with Chairmen of Social Services Committees and Directors of Social Services with the aim of meeting representatives of every local authority over a period of two years. The invitations are addressed to chairmen and it is for them to decide if they wish to send a substitute. We value this opportunity to exchange views on personal social services issues with a wide range of authorities and we would not wish to make changes which would reduce their informality or prolong the rotation period beyond two years.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish from the 1983 family expenditure survey (a) the number and percentage of those eligible claiming certificated, and standard housing benefit and housing benefit supplement, (b) the total amount of benefit unclaimed and (c) the average weekly amount of benefit unclaimed broken down according to the different groups of beneficiaries.

Mr. Major: The 1983 family expenditure survey data are not regarded as reliable in respect of estimates of the take-up of housing benefit, as the survey was carried out in the same year as the changeover to the new scheme. The first take-up estimates of housing benefit are expected shortly, however, based on analysis of data from the 1984 family expenditure survey.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the rent and rate increase each year since 1982; by how much the housing benefits needs allowance has been increased in each of these years, taking account of his statement of 22nd October; how many persons have lost each year that the the former has exceeded the latter; what was the total saving; what was the average individual loss and how many lost more than: (a) £1, (b) £2, and (c) £3 per week.

Mr. Major: I think there may be a misunderstanding underlying the hon. Member's question. Increases in rent and rate levels are reflected in standard housing benefit entitlement in two ways. 60 per cent. of the claimant's actual rent and rates are reflected automatically in the benefit calculation, and this has never been altered. In addition, 40 per cent. of the national average rents and rates were reflected in the needs allowances under the traditional uprating formula which was used each year from November 1982 to November 1985 inclusive. For last July's interim uprating it was not possible to use the traditional formula, as was explained at the time, because the measurement period for the uprating did not include the month of April when rents and rates normally increase. The approach used for next April's uprating, together with details of the effects, were explained fully in my right hon. Friend's statement to the House, and subsequent exchanges, on 22 October.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish from the 1983 family expenditure survey (a) the number of those eligible claiming family income supplement, (b) the total amount of benefit unclaimed and (c) the average weekly amount of benefit unclaimed broken down into one and two parent families.

Mr. Major: An analysis of the data derived from the 1983 and 1984 family expenditure surveys in relation to take-up of family income supplement is almost complete. I hope to announce the results very shortly.

Heart Pacemakers

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will ask for a report from Leeds western health authority on the provision of heart pacemakers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will ask for a report from the Yorkshire regional health authority on the provision of heart pacemakers in Leeds Western district health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: This is a matter for the Yorkshire regional health authority. May I suggest therefore that the hon. Member writes to the regional health authority chairman for the information he requires.

NHS (Beds)

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the number of beds available in the National Health Service at the present time; and how this compares with 1979.

Mrs. Currie: In 1985, the latest year for which information is available centrally, the average daily number of available beds in National Health Service hospitals in England was 325,487. The corresponding figure for 1979 was 361,670. The number of in-patient cases treated per available bed per year increased from 14·9 to 19·5 between 1979 and 1985. The number of in-patient cases treated in 1979 was 5,400,120 compared with 6,353,812 in 1985.

J. E. Hanger and Co. (Dispute)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list and give the dates of approaches made by Ministers and officials respectively, to J. E. Hanger and Co. since 16 September about the current lock-out, together with the company's response in each case.

Mr. Major: Under my direction officials in the Department's headquarters and in the Department's artificial limb and appliance centres have been in daily contact with J. E. Hanger and Co. Ltd. centrally and locally since the dispute at the Roehampton works began. Oral and written requests have been put to the management of the company from the first week enquiring what action the company were taking to maintain supply. Hanger management has not been prepared to go further than to make general assurances that they were making strenuous efforts to maintain the service.

As far as patients are concerned, however, co-operation between the Department's artificial limb and appliance centre staff and local Hanger branch management is very good. All urgent cases drawn to the attention of the company have been and are being dealt with expeditiously.

Low Income Families

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will update in the Official Report the information on the income level of poorer households provided in his reply of 24 October 1983 to the hon. Member for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) Official Report column 51, as soon as the 1983 low income families tables are placed in the Library;

(2) how many people in Scotland in 1983 were (i) below, (ii) at and (iii) up to 140 per cent. of the supplementary benefit level on the latest basis and on a basis comparable with 1979 and 1981; what percentage of the total population they represent in each case; what his estimate is of the number of children living in such households in each case; and what percentage of total children they represent in each case;

(3) how many children in Scotland were living in families below supplementary benefit level, on supplementary benefit, and with incomes up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit level, classified by employment status; whether they were in one or two parent families in 1983 on the latest basis and on a basis comparable with 1981 and 1979; and what proportion these children made up of the total number of children.

Mr. Major: [pursuant to his replies, 17 March 1986 c 65, and 21 July 1986 c 79-80 and c 89]: Estimates are provided in the tables. All of these estimates are subject to sampling error, but the Scottish estimates of low income assessment units that are not receiving supplementary benefit are particularly prone to this statistical problem. This is because of the small number of sample cases available in the family expenditure survey.

Notes:

(i) The Scottish samples have been translated into population estimates using factors based on data for Great Britain as a whole. Since the Family Expenditure Survey response rate may differ from that for Great Britain as a whole and since the extent of the difference may vary from one year to another, it follows that Scottish estimates may be more vulnerable to grossing error than data for Great Britain as a whole. Taken together, these two sources of statistical error make both trends and levels in the Scottish estimates peculiarly difficult to interpret. These statistical problems will be considered as a part of the Low Income Technical Review.

(ii) The assumptions on which these estimates are based are the same as those contained in the "Low Income Families—1983" tables lodged in the Library of the House.

(iii) RNR = relative net resources. For a full definition of this term see paragraphs 4 and 5 of "Low Income Families—1983".
(iv) HBS = housing benefit supplement.
(v) A supplementary benefit assessment unit is usually either a single person or a couple with their dependent children if they have any. Dependent children are those aged less than 16 or 16 to 19 if still in full-time non-advanced education.
(vi) "Other" is composed of single-parents, full-time students, full-time workers away from work on part or no sick pay, those of non-pension age not working and not seeking work and the sick and disabled.
(vii) Classifications by employment status and assessment type are mutually exclusive and non-additive.
(viii) "—" denotes a figure of less than 10,000.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish a table showing for 1983 (a) the numbers of families with one, two, three, four or more children living below, at, and up to 140 per cent. of the supplementary benefit level on the latest basis and a basis comparable with 1981 and 1979, (b) how many of these families were in work or out of work and (c) the total number of families with one, two, three, four or more children, on the same basis as his reply of 16 May 1985 to the hon. Member for Thurrock, Official Report, column 224;

(2) if he will provide a breakdown from the low income families 1983 table of the main reasons for people falling below the supplementary benefit level on the same basis as his reply of 14 December 1983 to the hon. Member for Kensington (Sir B. Rhys Williams) Official Report, column 517;

(3) how many children were living in families below supplementary benefit level, on supplementary benefit, with incomes up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit level, classified by employment status, and whether they were in one or two-parent families in 1983 on the latest basis and on a basis comparable with 1981 and 1979; and what proportion these children make up of the total number of children.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 18 July 1986, c. 665-66]: Estimates are provided in the tables. Amongst those supplementary benefit assessment units that are not in receipt of supplementary benefit with incomes below supplementary benefit level, the majority of those that are entitled to supplementary benefit or housing benefit supplement are pensioners failing to claim small amounts. Of the non pensioner minority within this group a significant number are living in wider relatively well-off households. Of those that are in full time work or self employed, 140,000 are single adults, 40,000 are couples without children and 110,000 are couples with children. Of these couples with children, some 60,000 would not have incomes below supplementary benefit level if they had claimed their entitlement to family income supplement. Those with capital in excess of the prescribed supplementary benefit limit have at least £3,000 available to them and thus have the means of support for day to day living. About 80 per cent. of those unoccupied for no apparent reason and who are required to be available for work are single persons without children.

Notes:

(i) The assumptions on which these estimates are based are the same as those contained in the "Low Income Families—1983" tables lodged in the Library of the House. Due to rounding the sum of the components may not equal the total.

(ii) RNR = relative net resources. For a full definition of this term see paragraphs 4 and 5 of the notes of "Low Income Families—1983".

(iii) FTW = full-time work.

(iv) A supplementary benefit assessment unit is usually either a single person or a couple with their dependent children if they have any. Dependent children are those aged less than 16 or 16 to 19 if still in full-time non-advanced education.

(v) Classification by employment status and assessment unit are mutually exclusive and non-additive.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he can estimate, following the publication of the low income family tables for 1983, to what level (a) family income supplement and (b) child benefit would need to be raised to ensure that all working families with children have an income above the supplementary benefit entitlement, on the same basis as his reply of 30 July 1984 to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) Official Report, column 109.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1986, c. 79-80]: In 1983, around 110,000 full time working assessment units with children has net resources below supplementary benefit level. Some 60,000 of these had an unclaimed entitlement to family income supplement or standard housing benefit. In most cases claim to these entitlements would have raised their net resources above supplementary benefit level. If all entitlements to family income supplement and housing benefit were claimed, then it would be possible to raise the net resources of almost 90 per cent. of the total number of assessment units to above the supplementary benefit level by (a) increasing child benefit by 40 per cent. or (b) increasing the family income supplement prescribed amounts by 30 per cent. If however claimed entitlements to family income supplement and housing benefit remained at present proportions then raising the family income supplement prescribed amounts would have only a negligible effect on the numbers below supplementary benefit level. Raising child benefit by 200 per cent. would raise the net resources of 90 per cent. of assessment units above supplementary benefit levels.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the numbers of people receiving supplementary benefit in each of the 36 metropolitan districts for each year from 1979 to 1986;

(2) if he will give the numbers receiving supplementary benefits per thousand head of population in each of the 36 metropolitan districts for each year from 1979 to 1986;

(3) if he will list the numbers of children in each of the 36 metropolitan districts who are dependent upon supplementary benefit claimants for each year from 1979 to 1986;

(4) if he will list the numbers of children dependent upon people receiving supplementary benefit per thousand head of population in each of the metropolitan districts for each year from 1979 to 1986.

Mr. Lyell [pursuant to the reply, 22 October 1986, c. 903-4]: Information to enable a breakdown of supplementary benefit cases by metropolitan district area began to be collected only in 1981. The available information is given in the four tables:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farmers (Radiation Compensation)

33. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on compensation to hill farmers in Cumbria for losses arising from the Chernobyl incident.

35. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received regarding compensation of farmers for losses incurred as a result of restrictions on the movement, sale and slaughter of sheep; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: Folllowing discussions with industry representatives, we have introduced three schemes of compensation for sheep producers in the areas in which movement and slaughter restrictions have been imposed. The first scheme helps producers of those finished lambs which, through being held back, were subsequently rejected for variable premium on the ground of over-fatness when the areas were released from restrictions. The second scheme compensates producers for their market price losses on marked sheep released from the designated areas which were presented at store markets and sales, as well as liveweight certification centres. The third scheme provides assistance towards the direct costs incurred by producers of finished lambs and cast ewes. The Government consider that these compensation arrangements represent a fair and balanced response to the needs of sheep producers whose marketing, prices and costs have been affected by the restrictions.

Butter

2. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much butter is currently stored in intervention in the United Kingdom; and what percentage change this represents over 1985.

Mr. Gummer: There were 267,675 tonnes of butter in intervention in the United Kingdom on 29 October, representing a 32 per cent. increase over the same week in 1985.

Agricultural Surpluses

3. Mr. Strang asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has submitted any proposals to the European Commission to reduce the cost to the European community of surplus agricultural production.

Mr. Jopling: I have consistently argued for policies which would restrain the production and budgetary cost of surpluses within the European Community.

23. Mr. Marlow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the cost of European Economic Community agricultural surpluses for 1986-87; and what was the comparable cost for 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Jopling: The 1986 Community budget and the 1987 draft budget provide 14,048 mecu and 14,488 mecu respectively for expenditure on public storage and disposal of those products which are in structural surplus (cereals, sugar, wine, beef and milk products). The comparable figures for 1984 and 1985 were 11,432 mecu and 12,464 mecu respectively.

Chernobyl Disaster

12. Mr. Neil Thorne asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received any information on the implications for agriculture of the Chernobyl disaster from his opposite number in the Soviet Union and on any lessons to be learnt, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: No.

Cereals

13. Miss Maynard asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the likely cereal harvest in 1986.

41. Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the 1986 cereal harvest.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo).

16. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the implementation of the cereal co-responsibility levy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Dorset, North (Mr. Baker) and the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers).

21. Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to the percentage change in the cereal prices received by farmers in Germany, France and United Kingdom, respectively in the current year as compared with 1985.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is as follows:

Percentage change in market prices between July—September 1985 and July—September 1986.

	United Kingdom	France	Germany
Breadmaking Wheat	−7·0	+5·9	−3·0
Feed Wheat	+3·4	N/A	−2·8
Feed Barley	+3·5	+4·5	−4·0
Malting Barley	+13·1	N/A	+8·2
Oats	+21·0	N/A	−1·0

Ex-farm price data are not available. The percentage above are based on average market prices derived from prices supplied by member states to the European Commission. The 1986 -87 market prices used are inclusive of co-responsibility levy.

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the implications of the cereals co-responsibility levy for the economic viability of (a) farms and (b) grain merchants.

Mr. Jopling: As the levy has been in force for only four months I am reluctant to attempt generalisations about its effect. Farmers themselves are not normally liable to pay the levy, which is collected at the stage of processing, export, or sale into intervention. But it was designed to reduce the incentive to cereals production for all but the smallest farmers. The distortions and complications which it threatens in other areas — especially for grain merchants and users—is one reason why I have always favoured achieving this objective through direct action on prices.

Council of Agriculture Ministers

14. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress on his priorities as President of the Council of Ministers.

27. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress on his priorities as President of the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

Mr. Jopling: My priority as president is the expeditious handling of the Commission's proposals for CAP reform, particularly of the beef and dairy regimes, and of measures which contribute to the completion of the internal market.

25. Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the decisions taken by the Council of Agriculture Ministers since he assumed the Presidency.

Mr. Jopling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Coastal (Mr. Gummer) on 16 July, at column 555, and to press notices issued by my Department on 17 September and 16 October, recording the outcome of the September and October Agriculture Councils respectively, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

British Food (Marketing)

15. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the marketing of British food.

Mr. Gummer: The Government established Food From Britain in 1983 to improve the marketing of British food. We are providing some £14 million to FFB during the five years to 1987-88 and financial commitments have now been made by the food and agricultural industries. Provided their contributions reach at least £3 million in 1988-89, further Government funds will be available until 1990-91. FFB has made an encouraging start, and I believe that it will continue to build on its initial successes.

Advisory Services

17. Dr. Marek asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what revenue he now expects to be yielded by charging for advisory services.

Mr. Jopling: As stated in my reply to the hon. Member for Wentworth (Mr. Hardy) on 12 June 1986, at column 284, new charges for ADAS advisory and promotional work are expected to raise at least £5 million in 1987-88. I have every confidence that this target can be achieved.

Cocoa, Chocolate and Confectionery Alliance

18. Dr. Twinn asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the Cocoa, Chocolate and Confectionery Alliance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend the Minister last met the president of the Cocoa, Chocolate and Confectionery Alliance on 25 October 1985. I was present at this year's joint annual luncheon on 24 October and will be meeting the president on 13 November.

Radiation Levels

19. Mr. Evennett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether any arrangements have been introduced for the monitoring of radiation in soft fruits since the Chernobyl incident.

Mr. Gummer: Soft fruits have been included in this Department's intensive testing programme carried out since the Chernobyl incident. The results have been published regularly and are available in the Library of the House. These show levels of radioactivity to be very low and of no cause for concern.

28. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what radiation detection equipment is held by his Department for the measurement of levels of radiation in a Chernobyl-type disaster.

Mr. Gummer: The Ministry's laboratories at Lowestoft and Weybridge are equipped to the highest international standards for radiological analysis. Most measurements made following the Chernobyl accident have employed high resolution solid state gamma spectrometry. Radiochemical separation followed by low-level alpha or beta counting is undertaken for radionuclides which are not gamma emitters.

The Ministry is undertaking monitoring of live animals and agricultural materials in field conditions using portable single channel scintillation rate meters supplied to Ministry specifications.

31. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he proposes to simplify the terms used for the measurement of radiation levels in food and livestock; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: No. My Department uses the international system of units (SI units) in common with other United Kingdom and international organisations. This system of units is unambiguously understood throughout the world and introduction of new units would create confusion. The amount of radioactivity present is measured in bequerels (Bq). One bequerel is equivalent to one radioactive disintegration per second. Concentrations of radioactivity in food and livestock are expressed in units of bequerels per kilogram (abbreviated to Bq/kg) in solids or bequerels per litre (abbreviated Bq/l) in liquids.

Food Additives

20. Mr. Pike asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with food manufacturers about the inclusion of additives in food.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I and my officials regularly receive representations from a wide range of persons and organisations interested in the use of food additives. My right hon. Friend the Minister spoke at the annual luncheon of the Food and Drink Federation on 18 September. I have had no discussions with food manufacturers on this subject.

Land (Set Aside Schemes)

22. Mr. Latham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on progress regarding set aside schemes for land, designed to curtail agricultural surpluses.

Mr. Gummer: I put forward a paper on the diversion of land from cereals for discussion at the recent informal meeting of Community Agriculture Ministers. I was encouraged by the constructive and thoughtful reception that it received. I hope that discussion of the issues which it raises will now be continued within the Community.

Confectionery

24. Mr. Gregory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated value of United Kingdom produced confectionery for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department does not collect this information. However, the Cocoa, Chocolate and Confectionery Alliance publishes estimates of the value of United Kingdom manufacturers' home sales and exports. The sum of these will overstate the value of production, which is not published, to the extent that United Kingdom manufacturers merchant imported confectionery.

	Home Sales £1 million	Exports £ million
1979	1,082	177
1980	1,182	176
1981	1,249	–
1982	1,346	175
1983	1,412	201
1984	1,543	224
1985	1,702	234

Fisheries Policy

26. Mr. Wallace asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on the outcome of EEC Council of Fisheries Ministers meetings held during the summer recess.

Mr. Jopling: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) earlier today.

38. Mr. Beith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in reconsidering the effect of the proposed 90mm mesh size on inshore fisheries.

Mr. Gummer: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) earlier today.

Agricultural Land

29. Mr. Chapman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the annual loss of all grades of agricultural land to any non-agricultural or non-forestry development.

Mr. Donald Thompson: For England, the average annual loss of agricultural land to non-agricultural or non-forestry development for the five-year period ending June 1985 is estimated to be 14,600 hectares (36,000 acres).

Farm Wardens

30. Mr. Aspinwall asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what role farm wardens would play in the case of an incident in the United Kingdom similar to that which occurred at Chernobyl; and what training they are given.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Farm wardens are part of my Department's wartime organisation and there are no plans at present to appoint them for other purposes.

32. Sir Nicholas Bonsor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, in the light of the lessons of the Chernobyl disaster, he proposes to increase the number of farm wardens and to enhance their training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Farm wardens are part of my Department's wartime organisation. There are no plans at present to appoint them for other purposes or to increases the numbers already estimated to be required in time of war.

Beef Variable Premium Scheme

34. Mr. Fatchett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of the beef variable premium scheme.

Mr. Gummer: As part of this year's price fixing decisions, the Council of Ministers agreed that the European Commission's proposals for reforming the beef regime should be studied further with a view to decisions being taken by 31 December 1986. The regulations governing the beef variable premium scheme were accordingly extended to that date. The Commission's proposal for changes to the beef regime include a Community-wide premium scheme which is intended to replace the variable premium. The Commission has, however, undertaken to propose a continuation of the variable premium scheme, taking account of the budgetary situation, if changes to the regime are not agreed in time be brought into effect by the end of the year. Discussions on the proposals are continuing and we are pressing the merits of a slaughter premium scheme in that context.

Milk Quotas

36. Mr. Knox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the operation of milk quotas.

Mr. Gummer: Dairy farmers in the United Kingdom have generally adapted well to the milk quota system. The rising trend in milk production in the European Community has been checked, but there is still a substantial excess of supply over demand. Reductions in the level of quota were agreed earlier this year, and the Council of Ministers is now considering ways to tighten up the operation of the quota system to make it more effective.

Straw Burning

37. Mr. Proctor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is satisfied with current measures to reduce the adverse impact of straw burning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Yes. Although there have been isolated exceptions, the indications are that there has been less careless or inconsiderate burning of straw during this year's harvest season. I believe that a combination of strengthened byelaws, the publicity campaign mounted by my Department, and the code of practice issued by the National Farmers Union have contributed greatly to this improvement in the situation. Moreover, as the results of our continuing research and development work on alternative methods of disposal have been made known to the industry, an increasing number of farmers have been able to avoid straw and stubble burning altogether. These are encouraging trends, but we shall keep the matter under review.

Intervention Costs

39. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount spent on intervention in 1985-86; and what proportion of this was recovered from European funds.

Mr. Jopling: United Kingdom expenditure on all aspects of intervention was £823 million net of recovery of VAT and of sales receipts, some of which will have related to produce purchased in earlier years, of £163 million. The Community does not meet the cost of purchases, but does contribute towards the financing cost of the stocks held, losses on sale, devaluation of stocks and storage and related costs. These contributions amounted to £310 million of which £75 million was for financing.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to propose changes in the common agricultural policy following the recent agreement reached by the member countries of the general agreement on tariffs and trade at Punta del Este; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the latest estimate of the amount of the EEC budget for 1986 to be spent on the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Jopling: The EC budget for 1986 provides 23,104 mecu for expenditure under the common agricultural policy. This is about 66 per cent. of the total budget.

Forestry Commission

40. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much land the Forestry Commission owns in England; and how much has been sold since May 1979.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Forestry Commission does not own any land. Ownership is vested in England, in the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and the land is formally placed at the disposal of the forestry commissioners to manage in accordance with their statutory duties.

As at 31 March 1986, the Forestry Commission managed 285,685 hectares of land in England. Some 20,300 hectares were sold between 1 May 1979 and 21 September 1986.

Animals (Export)

Mr. Craigen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps his Department is taking in conjunction with British and French customs authorities, to ensure that animals are not illegally being transported to Spain, or any other country where the slaughterhouses do not come up to British standards;

(2) to which countries, apart from Spain, the ban on the export of live animals applies for welfare reasons.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is my Department's policy to license exports of farm livestock for immediate slaughter or for further fattening only to member states of the European Community where they will have the protection of Community safeguards on welfare in transit and at the place of slaughter. Since Spain and Portugal have not yet implemented the relevant directives, we have not licensed any exports to them.

In view of the recent reports that live sheep exported to France have in fact been sent on from that country to an abbatoir in Spain, we have told exporters of sheep to France that before any further licence is granted they will have to provide documentary proof from the French importer that the consignment is going to a destination in France and will not be sent on to any other country.

Export Licences

Mr. Craigen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what penalties have been imposed for false declaration of country of destination when applying for an export licence; and how many prosecutions there have been for such false declarations.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department is not aware that any prosecutions have been taken under the Export of Animals (Protection) Order 1981 for false declarations of country of destination. Recent allegations are currently being investigated.

Nuclear Radiation

Mr. Marland asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he proposes to publish a report on the lessons learnt from the Chernobyl disaster so far as his responsibilities for agriculture are concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department is playing its full part in the Government's review of contingency arrangements following the Chernobyl accident and will make any necessary changes to its emergency plans. Any revision of the Department's emergency arrangements would be notified to those required to implement them, as well as other Departments and emergency services.

DEFENCE

Nimrod Programme

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the calibre of the scientific and technical staff of his Department overseeing the development of the Nimrod system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have every confidence in the scientific and technical staff employed by the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence to what he attributes the cost overspends and the overruns on the Nimrod programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: These can be largely attributed to what was with hindsight a significant underestimation at the outset of the project in 1977 of the technical difficulty and hence the timescale and cost of completing the work. The absence of contractual incentives was also a contributory factor.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent the Nimrod programme required technological innovations; and what account was taken of this when assessing the extent and level of scientific and technical supervision from his Department.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: When it was authorised in 1977, the Nimrod AEW project was considered to be technologically ambitious, but nonetheless achievable within the state of the art at that time. In recognition of the degree of technological innovation required, considerable scientific and technical resources were made available both from the Department's research and development establishments and from headquarters staff.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent poor performance by contractors and failure to follow Ministry of Defence supervision has contributed to delays in the Nimrod programme; and what action was taken by his Department in response to each such incident.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The performance by GEC Avionics Ltd. on the Nimrod programme has to be viewed against the background of an initial underestimate of the technical difficulties involved. However, it is because we were dissatisfied with the action being taken to resolve these difficulties that we initiated the current competition and negotiated the interim risk-sharing contractual arrangements under which development work is currently proceeding.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the application of the outcome of research programmes for Nimrod in areas other than to defence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The research work undertaken in support of the Nimrod AEW project has led to significant advances in a number of technical areas, including antennae, high power transmitters and radar signal processing. These are expected to be of value in both civil and military applications. The general aim of encouraging exploitation of defence research for civil benefit has been further enhanced recently by the creation of Defence Technology Enterprises Ltd. which was set up as a joint initiative between MOD and industry.

Aircraft Crashes

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement about the Tornado aircraft crash which occurred on the Otterburn range on 21 October, and resulted in two deaths; and whether, in the light of the nine fatalities which have occurred in military aircraft crashes in north-east England in the last nine years, he will institute a full review of the safety regulations applied to such low flying.

Mr. Freeman: The Tornado aircraft involved was from the German Air Force which, according to established practice, has convened an inquiry, which will be assisted by the RAF, to establish the cause of the accident. It would not be appropriate for me to comment further on the circumstances of the accident until the inquiry is completed, other than to express my regret at the tragic loss of life. Safety regulations for military flying, both over designated range areas and more generally, are a matter to which I attach great importance and are kept under close and continual review.

Russian Speakers

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the present number of fluent Russian language speakers in each of the armed services compared to the number approximately three years ago.

Mr. Freeman: There are a total of 148 fluent Russian speakers currently in the regular armed forces. This compares with a total of 143 in 1983. A breakdown by Service and year is:

	Royal Navy	Royal Marines	Army	Royal Air Force	Total
1986	24	2	106	16	148
1983	26	2	99	16	143

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of seagoing Her Majesty's ships whose complement includes a qualified Russian linguist.

Mr. Freeman: It is not our practice to disclose information of this nature.

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of full-time instructors of the Russian language in each of the armed services for each of the last three years.

Mr. Freeman: Details of the number of full-time instructors of the Russian language in each of the armed services for each of the last three years are as follows. Considerable use is also made of Ministry of Defence employed civilian instructional staff for language tuition for the Armed Services. Details of the number of such civilian staff engaged in full-time Russian language tuition are as follows:

Army	11	11	8
Royal Air Force	1	1	0
MOD Civilian	24	20	18

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of qulaified Russian language speakers at present actively serving in the Royal Naval Reserve, and the numbers who have completed training commitments for each of the last three years.

Mr. Freeman: There are at present 10 Russian language speakers qualified to interpreter standard serving in the Royal Naval Reserve, all of whom have completed their training commitments for each of the past three years.

RAF Upwood

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to convert all or part of RAF Upwood base in Cambridgeshire into a United States wartime contingency hospital.

Mr. Freeman: RAF Upwood is used by the United States air force for a variety of support functions, including use as a peacetime storage facility and as a hospital which would be activated in an emergency.

RAF Cosford

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if there are any plans to convert all or part of RAF Cosford base in Shropshire into a United States wartime contingency hospital.

Mr. Freeman: The future of RAF Cosford is still being considered.

Nuclear Missiles

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by variant the number of (a) short range nuclear weapons with a range of up to 200 km and (b) medium range nuclear missiles with a range of between 200 km and 1,000 km that have been removed from Europe as a result of the 27 October 1983 Montebello decision of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation nuclear planning group.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name and describe the procedures of financial appraisal and checking of commercial reliability applied to a company wishing to supply goods or services under contract to his Department, specifying when each procedure is applied; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Companies wishing to supply goods or services to the Ministry of Defence and to be registered on the defence contractors list are required to complete application forms (standardised across all Government departments) providing details of their financial standing, technical capabilities and quality systems. Bank and trade references are taken up and the audited accounts provided are appraised by the Ministry's professional accountants.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list showing, for each of the last three years (a) the number of his Department's contracts made for the supply of goods or services, (b) the total number of companies receiving such contracts and (c) the number of companies receiving contracts totalling £5 million or more in value.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information is as follows:

(a) The number of MOD headquarters contracts and financial amendments placed for the supply of goods and services for financial years 1983-84 and 1984-85 are as shown in table 2.10 of the statement on the Defence Estimates 1986. For financial year 1985-86 the number is 116,552.

(b) The total numbers of companies receiving individual contracts worth more than £5,000 in value were approximately 4,120 in 1983-84, 4,215 in 1984-85 and 4,410 in 1985-86. Information is not readily available for lower value contracts.

(c) The numbers of companies receiving contracts totalling £5 million or more in value were some, 115 in 1983-84; 75 in 1984-85 and 140 in 1985-86.

The figures given in (a) exclude local purchase orders, which totalled 495,413 in 1983-84, 505,880 in 1984-85 and 435,395 in 1985-86. The number of companies receiving such orders is not available.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will describe what statistical information is available about the work load and results of the procedures of financial appraisal and checking of commercial viability applied to companies in relation to the supply of goods or services to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1985-86 the Ministry's professional accountants undertook some 700 financial appraisals of accounts (including where necessary those of parent and holding companies) of companies wishing to become suppliers of goods or services to the Ministry of Defence. As a result of these appraisals the Ministry declined applications from some 40 companies. In the same year the Ministry's accountants appraised some 240 accounts of contractors who are regularly employed by the Ministry on larger value non-competitive contracts.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will describe what information is available about contracts for the supply of goods or services that have been broken in recent years, including contracts that have been broken by a company becoming insolvent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information could not be provided without disproportionate time and effort.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will name and describe the procedures of financial appraisal and checking of commercial viability applied to a company engaged to supply goods or services to his Department when the ownership or control of the company changes; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will identify the procedures of financial appraisal and checking of commercial viability applied to a company wishing to supply goods or services under contract to his Department which include some examination of ownership or control of the company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: When the Ministry is made aware of a change in the ownership of a defence contractor, copies of audited accounts provided by the new owner are appraised by the Ministry's professional accountants in the same manner as for a new applicant for registration.

When a change of ownership takes place during the currency of a contract, any legal action necessary is taken to transfer formally the relevant contract after the financial and technical competence of the new company has been established. Changes in the control of a company, but not its ownership, do not require re-registration procedures since any existing contractual obligations would be unaffected.

Companies seeking registration are required to provide details of all associated companies, directors and major shareholders. Amendments to this information are sought if there is a change in the ownership of a company already registered on the defence contractor's list.

Cray Computers

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list showing for each year since 1979, the numbers and types of Cray computers (a) on order for his Department and (b) operational within his Department specifying the location of each such computer operational in the period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Ordered	Location	Total in operation
1979	1xCray1A	AWRE Aldermaston	1xCray1A
1980	—	—	1xCray1A
1981	—	—	1xCray1A
1982	—	—	1xCray1A
1983	1xCray1S	FAE Farnborough	1xCray1A, 1xCray1S
1983	1xCray1S	RARDE Fort Halstead	2xCray1S, 1xCray1A
1984	1xCrayXMP	AWRE Aldermaston	2xCray1S, 1xCray1A, 1xCrayXMP
1985	—	—	2xCray1S, 1xCray1A, 1xCrayXMP

Northern Ireland

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his written answer of 11 July, Official Report, columns 303-4, whether he has anything to add concerning the figures for the strength of the armed forces of the Crown in Northern Ireland in each of the months in the period September 1985 to May 1986.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 11 July 1986, c. 303-4]: I regret that the figures quoted in my answer have been found to contain errors. The correct figures are as follows:

The numbers of armed forces personnel in Northern Ireland (as at end of each month) are as follows:

	RN/RM	Army	RAF	UDR	Total
1985
September	191	8,873	1,000	6,451	16,515
October	189	9,044	988	6,503	16,724
November	185	9,014	989	6,478	16,666
December	184	8,912	994	6,508	16,598
1986
January	184	9,470	1,054	6,542	17,250
February	188	9,918	998	6,547	17,651
March	188	9,906	984	6,562	17,640

ENERGY

Sellafield (Schoolchildren's Visit)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether the party of children from Matthew Humberston school, Humberside detained by United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority police at Sellafield was detained by armed constables; and on what authority film and tape was confiscated.

Mr. Goodlad: As in the case of many industrial establishments, the free use of photography is not allowed and the attention of visitors is drawn to this fact. It appears that film and video tape were in this case nevertheless taken on to the site. Acting under site security instructions, the security police questioned the teacher in charge. Film and video tape were, on request, handed over to unarmed members of the UKAEA constabulary. They will be returned once they have been checked.

British Gas

Mr. McLoughlin asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement about the British Gas offer for sale.

Mr. Peter Walker: A pathfinder prospectus—that is, a prospectus subject to revision and without a price for the shares—is being published today. Copies are available in the Library of the House and in the Vote Office. Preliminary registration statements will also be filed in the United States, Canada and Japan. I intend to offer the shares for sale on Friday 21 November with the prospectus being widely distributed on Tuesday 25 November and the last date for receipt of applications being Wednesday 3 December.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mortgage Interest Relief

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the estimated costs at current and at constant prices of mortgage interest tax relief in 1960, 1970, 1980, 1985 and 1990, showing the cost as a proportion of income tax revenue, and the effect of the concession on the amount of the income tax base in each year.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The estimated costs of mortgage interest tax relief are as follows:

	Mortgage interest relief
	Current prices	1985-86 prices[1]	as a percentage of income tax and surtax receipts
	£ million	£ million	per cent.
1960-61	70	540	2·7
1970-71	285	1,440	4·8
1980-81	1,960	2,720	8·1

[1] Expressed in 1985-86 prices using the retail prices index.

Details of the amount of mortgage interest on which the tax relief in 1960-61 and 1970-71 was based are not readily available. Mortgage interest eligible for tax relief is estimated to have been £6 billion in 1980-81 and about £15 billion in 1985-86. The cost of relief in 1985-86 includes the cost of relief in respect of mortgages previously under the option mortgage scheme. The cost of mortgage interest relief in 1990-91 will depend on factors such as the level of borrowing, mortgage interest rates and the tax regime in that year.

Personal Income

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will detail the total of personal income going to the top 1 per cent., 2 per cent., 3 per cent., 4 per cent. and 5 per cent., respectively, before and after tax of each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

WALES

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to change the cash limit for the current year in respect of rate support grants to Welsh local authorities.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Yes. Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the following amendment is proposed. The cash limit for rate support grant, class XVII, vote 10, will be increased by £5,000,000, from £875,807,000 to £880,807,000, mainly to reflect adjustments to holdback in respect of 1984-85 and 1985-86 in the light of outturn expenditure information. Payments from this vote are not classified as public expenditure, so there is no effect on the reserve. The adjustment of block grant will, of course, be subject to the approval of the requisite supplementary rate support grant reports by the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Dairy Products

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if a date has yet been agreed for ceasing the intervention buying of butter and skimmed milk.

Mr. Gummer: No. There are currently no plans to cease the intervention buying of butter. A Commission proposal to end the intervention buying of skimmed milk powder between October and March and to make other changes in the intervention system is still under consideration by the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

Departmental Cash Limits

Sir Paul Hawkins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether it is proposed to change the cash limit on any departmental Vote for which he has responsibility and his running costs limit.

Mr. Jopling: Yes. Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the cash limits on Votes for which I and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland are responsible will be increased in order to make provision for the costs of settlement of the legal action in the case of Bourgoin SA and others and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, as announced on 23 July 1986 at column 116, to cover redundancy payments arising from decisions announced on 22 January 1985 at column 401 to reduce expenditure on advisory services, research and development and to purchase milk quota in England, Wales and Scotland for redistribution to producers in Northern Ireland.

Class	Vote	Original cash limit	Increase due to redundancy costs	Increase due to purchase of milk quota	Other changes affecting cash limit	Revised cash limit
IV	4	139,393	—	[1]477	—	139,870
IV	5	211,366	900	—	[2]+3,617 [3]−129	215,754
XVI	2	75,166	2,630	[1]47	—	77,843

[1] Offset by corresponding reductions in the Northern Ireland cash block, NID1.
[2] Increase required to repay an advance from the Contingencies Fund for settlement of legal action for damages in the case of Bourgoin SA and others and the Ministry of Agriculture.
[3] Additional receipts sought as appropriations in aid and other offsetting savings.

As a result of the redundancy costs there will be a £0.871 million increase in the running costs limit for my Department from £208·949 million to £209·820 million.

There is a corresponding charge to the reserve of £7·018 million and therefore these changes will not add to the planning total of public expenditure.

General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to propose changes in the common agricultural policy following the recent agreement reached by the member countries of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade at Punta del Este; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 30 October 1986]: Within the European Economic Community, we have consistently advocated changes to the Common Agricultural Policy to make it more responsive to the market place, and to reduce the production and the budgetary costs of surpluses. Such policies would undoubtedly make a positive contribution towards the successful negotiation of a new GATT round.

PRIME MINISTER

Value Added Tax

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether she will publish in the Official Report the undertakings given on value added tax when the terms of our membership of the EEC were negotiated and re-negotiated.

The Prime Minister: The rates and coverage of VAT in the United Kingdom were not part of the accession negotiations or "renegotiations".

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister whether Her Majesty's Government intend to accede to the proposal made by the European Economic Community Commission that the United Kingdom should impose value added tax on new housing; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government completely and utterly reject the Commission's proposal and will defend the issue before the European Court. I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Treasury in the House on 4 March 1986 at column 94, and my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment in reply to the Summer Adjournment debate on this subject in the House on 25 July at columns 923-26.

Visas

Mr. Janner asked the Prime Minister what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the relative cost of sending entry clearance officers to India as opposed to stationing extra staff at Heathrow.

The Prime Minister: The decision to impose a visa requirement on the citizens of Bangladesh, Ghana, India, Pakistan and Nigeria took account of the relative staff costs in this country and abroad. Account was also taken of the fact that modern airports are not the place for making detailed examination of large numbers of difficult cases. The need to strengthen pre-entry control meant, therefore, that more immigration officers at the ports would not have been a sensible response to the problems which had arisen.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Benefits

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation to place a limit on the amount of supplementary benefit that can be paid to foreigners, compatible with the respective levels available in their own countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: No. Entitlement to supplementary benefit depends upon immigration status and there is no nationality test. In those circumstances where benefit is payable to a person from abroad, it is at the rate appropriate to the person's requirements and resources in this country and has no regard to levels of social assistance available in other countries where different costs of living apply.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Women Prisoners

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women were admitted to special hospitals on transfer from prisons, remand centres and youth custody centres under sections 47 and 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983; and if he will list for each year since 1980 the age of the prisoner, the diagnosis and the length of stay in the special hospital or prison establishment from which the transfer has taken place.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information for years 1980 to 1985 by length of custody prior to admission to a special hospital is shown in the table.

Women admitted to special hospitals on transfer from prisons, remand centres and youth custody centres under sections 47, 48 of the Mental Health Act 1983[1] by age, type of mental disorder and length of stay in custody prior to admission 1980-85

Prisoners (Escape from Custody)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review procedures for giving prisoners medical attention in the light of the recent escape of Mark Cooper in Portsmouth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Statutory responsibility for the health care of inmates of any prison service establishment rests with the medical officer of the establishment, who has complete clinical freedom to determine the treatment needs of his patients and to make such arrangements as he considers appropriate for meeting them. The decision whether a particular type of treatment required by a patient can best be provided in situ, or at another establishment within the prison system, or at an outside hospital or clinic, will depend on the circumstances of the individual case and the options available. Security considerations will be among those taken into account, but the medical officer's primary concern must be to meet his statutory and professional obligations to his patient. When a full report on Mr. Cooper's case is available the Director of Prison Medical Services will consider whether there are any lessons to be drawn from it which could usefully be brought to the attention of medical officers.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prison officers were accompanying Mark Cooper at the time of his escape from St. Mary's hospital, Portsmouth on 23 October;

(2) if Mark Cooper was left alone for any period of time prior to his recent abscondment in Portsmouth.

Mr. Mellor: On 22 October Mr. Cooper, an inmate at Kingston prison, escaped from an outside hospital to which he had been taken, escorted by two officers, for a session of physiotherapy. Inquiries into the circumstances of the escape are continuing. However, preliminary reports indicate that, at the end of the session, one officer remained in the gymnasium where the session had taken place while the prisoner changed in an adjoining alcove and the other officer went to arrange transport for the return journey to the prison. It appears that the prisoner escaped through a fire escape door from the alcove. He was apprehended by police at Northwich in Cheshire the following morning.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have escaped from custody while on hospital visits in the past four years.

Mr. Mellor: The number of adult prisoners reported as having escaped from outside hospitals to which they had been sent for treatment, either as in-patients or as out-patients, were as follows:

Year	Number
1982	20
1983	19
1985	17

Eight such cases were reported in the first nine months of this year.

Ethnic Minorities (Bail)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the refusal of bail to persons from the ethnic minorities.

Mr. Mellor: A few of the letters received by the Home Office have included such representations by individuals in relation to individual cases, but precise figures are not available.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to magistrates on policy towards the circumstances in which bail should be given or refused; if this has included any specific guidance relating to persons from the ethnic minorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: None; the decision whether or not to grant bail is one which a magistrates court takes, in exercise of its judicial discretion, in accordance with the powers conferred by the Bail Act 1976.

Firearms (Public Places)

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans to seek to increase police powers to deal with the firing of blanks from loaded guns in public places; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

Hamilton and Howarth v. British Broadcasting Corporation

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate discussions with the British Broadcasting Corporation under section 18(2) of the British Broadcasting Corporation's royal charter with a view to the inclusion by the Corporation in its next annual report of details of the memorandum submitted to the board of management of the British Broadcasting Corporation by James Hogan, Panorama producer on 13 October, listing those potential witnesses in Hamilton and Howarth v. the British Broadcasting Corporation who changed their positions regarding their evidence following the beginning of legal proceedings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Visitors (Entry Criteria)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the criteria used by entry clearance officers in Pakistan to determine whether an intending visitor to Britain will leave at the end of the visit are the same as those used by immigration officers at United Kingdom ports of entry.

Mr. Waddington: Yes.

Sports Grounds (Safety)

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to publish a revised edition of the guide to safety at sports grounds (the Green Guide).

Mr. Hurd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have today published a revised edition of the Guide to Safety at Sports Grounds, for improving spectator safety at existing sports grounds. The new edition, prepared in the light of recommendations of the Popplewell inquiry, remains a voluntary guide. I have arranged for copies of the guide to be placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Nimrod Programme

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek the establishment of an independent board of experts to review the relative merits of Nimrod and the competing systems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. I am satisfied that we have available to us all the expertise necessary to assess the relative merits of the two systems remaining in the United Kingdom AEW competition, the Boeing E3A and the Nimrod AEW.

Nuclear Missiles

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many W-79 nuclear shells Britain has agreed to take for issuing to the British Army of the Rhine;

(2) when he intends to make a statement concerning the modernisation of the British Army of the Rhine's nuclear artillery shells.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 29 October.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards deployment by North Atlantic Treaty Organisation of the W79 nuclear warhead.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn) on 20 January 1986 at columns 90-91 and to the latest communiqué of the NATO Nuclear Planning Group, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. No decisions have been taken regarding the modernisation of the battlefield nuclear weapons of British forces.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence which artillery systems currently in service with the British Army of the Rhine are capable of firing the W-79 nuclear shell.

Mr. Stanley: The M110.

NATO (Ministerial Meeting)

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of Defence when is the next North Atlantic Treaty Organisation ministerial meeting.

Mr. Stanley: The next scheduled NATO ministerial meeting is that of the Defence Planning Committee in Brussels early in December.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorism

Mr. Maginnis asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by Protestants of Martin Love in Fermanagh on 8 April 1985; and if he will give details;

(2) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of John McVitty in Fermanagh on 8 July; and if he will give details;

(3) if anyone has been made amenable for the murder claimed to have been committed by the Irish Republican Army of Martin Blaney in South Tyrone on 6 October; and if he will give details.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986, columns 17-18]: Two people have been convicted of the murder of Martin Love. There have been no convictions in respect of the murders of John McVitty or Martin Blaney.

ENVIRONMENT

Property Services Agency

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the cost of the Property Services Agency's proposed reorganisation of its United Kingdom territorial organisation in each of the years 1987 to 1991, respectively; and how additional public expenditure will be incurred.

Mr. Chope: The present estimated net costs and savings arising from reorganisation of the United Kingdom territorial organisation are as follows:

Year	£ million
1987-88 Cost	1·65
1988-89 Saving	1·09
1989-90 Saving	7·86
1990-91 Saving	5·91

There are further substantial savings in later years and an investment appraisal shows that pay-back is expected to occur in 1989-90. Apart from these savings the reorganisation will produce substantial benefits, which cannot be quantified, through better service to clients and better value for money. It fulfils the recommendation of the PAC made in its 30th report 1983-84 and its 19th report 1984-85 that the chain of command should be shortened.

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the additional costs and prospective savings to be realised in the eastern region of the Property Services Agency in the course of its proposed reorganisation.

Mr. Chope: In my reply to my hon. Friend today I have given him the net costs and savings arising from the reorganisation of the UKTO throughout the country. These figures include savings from increased managerial efficiency through the organisation as a whole. Specific figures for individual areas are therefore not available.

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what will be the total cost to carry out the proposed re-organisation of the Property Services Agency;

(2) what are the estimated annual savings that will result from the re-organisation of the Property Services Agency; and, in particular, what are the estimated annual savings which may result from the proposed closure of the Cheltenham area office.

Mr. Chope: The present estimated net costs and savings arising from reorganisation of the United Kingdom territorial organisation are as follows:

1987-88	1·65 cost
1988-89	1·09 saving
1989-90	7·86 saving
1990-91	5·91 saving

There are further substantial savings in later years and an investment appraisal shows that pay-back is expected to occur in 1989-90. Apart from these savings the organisation will produce substantial benefits, which cannot be quantified, through better service to clients and better value for money. It fulfils the recommendation of the PAC made in its 30th report 1983-84 and its 19th Report 1984-85 that the chain of command should be shortened.

The net costs and savings include savings through from managerial efficiency through the organisation as a whole. Specific figures for the Cheltenham area office are not available.

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the present number of personnel employed by the Property Services Agency in the Leeds area at each of the buildings occupied, the square footage of space provided at each address with the annual cost per square foot where rentals apply.

Mr. Chope: Buildings occupied by the PSA in Leeds are:

Building	Staff	Area Occupied Sq ft	Cost Where rentals Apply
Government Building Lawnswood	223	46,200	Freehold
Liverpool Victoria House Headingly	59	8,900	£4·1 per sq ft rent
District Works Office Kirkstall Road	[1]41	[2]21,000	Freehold

[1] Including 15 industrial
[2] Including workshops

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what alternative office accommodation is being considered for the staff currently employed at the PSA area works office in York; and at what cost per square foot by comparison with existing accommodation.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, 28 October 1986, c. 116]: The intention is to base all staff transferred to Leeds at the regional headquarters at Lawnswood, Leads, but because of other changes on the Government estates it will be necessary to base some staff in accommodation elsewhere in Leeds which has not yet been identified and costed.

The cost per square foot for accommodation at Lawnswood is £4.35 as against £3·65 for the present accommodation in York.

Orlit Houses

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a list of local authorities with Orlit or Orlit-type houses in their area, showing total numbers of houses, numbers demolished, numbers on which remedial work has started, and numbers still awaiting attention, for each local authority.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the information deposited in the Library in July, in reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, (Mr. Meadowcroft) on 7 July 1986 at columns 35-36; this gives, for each local authority in England, the reported number of dwellings of each type designated under the housing defects legislation. It shows that some 87 authorities reported having Orlit houses in their area, amounting in total to some 8,000 dwellings. Information is not held centrally on the number of Orlit dwellings demolished, awaiting demolition or on which remedial work has started.

Thamesmead

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what valuation has been placed on the lands and buildings at Thamesmead by the London residuary body; on what basis the valuation was carried out; and what arrangements are to be made for the payments from Thamesmead Town Ltd.

Mr. Chope: The parties are negotiating the terms of transfer, including the arrangements for payments, informed by a valuation produced by the district valuer. It will not be helpful to release details at this stage.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects responsibility for Thamesmead to be transferred from the London residuary body to Thamesmead Town Ltd.

Mr. Chope: I understand that the chairmen of the London residuary body and Thamesmead Town expect responsibility to transfer on 1 January 1987.

Highways Act 1980

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list, for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 and for each regional office of his Department, the applications received for the making by him of public path creation, diversion and extinguishment orders under the powers in sections 26(2) and 120(3) of the Highways Act 1980 stating in each case (a) the parish concerned and the number of the footpath or bridleway, (b) whether the application was for a creation, diversion or extinguishment order, (c) whether he agreed to prepare a draft order and (d) where a draft order was prepared, whether or not it subsequently was made;

(2) whether persons who apply to him to exercise his powers under section 120(3) of the Highways Act 1980 to make a public path diversion or extinguishment order are required by him to enter into an agreement to defray the costs incurred by him in preparing and giving notice of the draft order, in arranging and holding any public inquiry or hearing into objections to the draft order, including the cost of employing an inspector, and in giving notice of his subsequent decision.

Mr. Waldegrave: I would refer the hon. Member to the answers given by my hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs. Rumbold) on 28 January to his previous questions on these two subjects (Official Report, column 468).

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what material changes were made in proposals for the 1987-88 rate support grant settlement between the consultation paper sent to local authorities immediately after the submission of 22 July and the most recent consultation paper published on 3 October.

Mr. Chope: The consultation paper issued on 22 July set out the Secretary of State's proposals on expenditure provision an aggregate Exchequer grant for the 1987-88 rate support grant settlement. The further consultation paper issued on 3 October set out his proposals on the distribution of block grant and gave details of authorities' block grant entitlements. There were no material changes in the Secretary of State's proposals on expenditure provision and aggregate Exchequer grant in the further consultation paper.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his statement of 22 July, Official Report, column 182, if he will list the 40 local authorities whose rate it was intended, as of that date, to limit for 1987-88.

Mr. Chope: The 20 authorities which have been selected for rate limitation in 1987-88 are Basildon, Brent, Brighton, Camden, Gateshead, Greenwich, Hackney, Haringey, Hounslow, Islington, Lambeth, Lewisham, Middlesbrough, Newcastle, Newham, North Tyneside, Sheffield, Southwark, Thamesdown and Tower Hamlets.

In addition, 19 joint authorities, set up on the abolition of the GLC and metropolitan counties, and the Inner London Education Authority (ILEA) are automatically precept-limited for three years from 1986-87 under section 68 of the Local Government Act 1985. Those authorities are as follows:

London Preceptors
ILEA
London Fire and Civil Defence Authority

Police Joint Authorities for:
Greater Manchester
Merseyside
South Yorkshire
Northumbria
West Midlands
West Yorkshire

Fire and Civil Defence Joint Authorities for:
Greater Manchester
Merseyside
South Yorkshire
Tyne and Wear
West Midlands
West Yorkshire

Transport Joint Authorities for:
Greater Manchester
Merseyside
South Yorkshire
Tyne and Wear
West Midlands
West Yorkshire

Water Authorities

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the water authorities which have satisfied his Department that they are meeting their obligations under the Water Resources Act 1963 to set standards for minimum acceptable flows in the rivers in their area.

Mr. Ridley: Under the 1963 Act water authorities are required to consider for which inland waters minimun acceptable flows ought to be determined, but the setting of these is not mandatory and none has in fact been set. Repeal of the formal requirement has been proposed by the Government in their consultation paper on water and sewerage law, which was published last March and deposited in the Library of the House, but final decisions on implementation have yet to be taken.

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the occasions within the last three years on which his Department has been asked by a water authority to approve the lowering of its own discharge consent conditions.

Mr. Ridley: Following the implementation of the main provisions of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 in January 1985 there has been a major review of water authority sewage treatment works discharge consents. Of the some 6,000 discharges in England, around 1,800 have been granted relaxed conditions, generally where there was expected to be no appreciable effect on the receiving water. In a small number of cases, which are subject to early review, the relaxed consents have been allowed pending already programmed capital investment. It is not readily possible to list the specific cases, but water authorities maintain public registers giving the details.

Councillors (Firearms Offences)

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to disbar from public office councillors convicted of firearms offences; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No new legislation is needed. Under section 80 of the Local Government Act 1972, a person is disqualified from being a councillor if within the previous five years he has been convicted of any offence and has had passed on him a sentence of imprisonment (whether suspended or not) for a period of not less than three months without the option of a fine. There is a wide range of firearm offences and maximum sentences range from three months to life imprisonment. The disqualification of any individual councillor convicted of a firearms offence depends upon the sentence actually passed.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bophuthatswana

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 23 October, if he will state by what manner of contact or information Her Majesty's Government will satisfy itself as to whether or not Bophuthatswana fulfils the normal criteria for recognition.

Mr. Eggar: We take our decisions in the light of all the information available to us, including information as to territory, population, administration and capacity for independent action.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his answer to hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 23 October, if he will state by what degree Bophuthatswana has satisfied or failed to satisfy the normal criteria for recognition.

Mr. Eggar: We take decisions on the recognition of states on the basis of criteria referred to by my hon. Friend the Minister of State in her answer of 23 October. There is no particular degree or scale relevant to such decisions.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his answer to hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 23 October, if he will list those occasional visits by officials to Bophuthatswana, their date and purpose, which are known to him.

Mr. Eggar: Detailed records of visits are not kept; but, for example, officials have visited Bophuthatswana at approximately three-monthly intervals to see British subjects imprisoned there.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mrs. Chalker: The usual forecast was deposited in the House earlier today. At present 12 meetings of the Council of Ministers are planned for November.

The Internal Market Council will meet on 3 November and will consider a number of items from the Presidency Action Programme.

The Transport Council will meet on 10 and 11 November. As the Presidency, the United Kingdom will aim to build on the progress made at the informal meeting of European Community Transport Ministers in London on October 3 and try to secure adoption of a package of practical measures to liberalise European air transport. The meeting will also consider the Commission proposals on a Community transport infrastructure policy and arrangements for liberalising road haulage.

The Development Council will meet on 11 December and is expected to consider a Commission proposal for a new Council regulation on food aid policy, a draft resolution on population policy in community aid programmes, a Commission report on EDF programming and a report on famine rehabilitation. The Council may also consider a draft regulation establishing a system of compensation ("Compex") for losses in export earnings to least developed countries which are not signatory to the Lomé convention.

The Cultural Affairs Council will meet on 13 November and will consider resolutions on architectural heritage, translation, business sponsorship and conservation. The Council is expected to discuss a number of subjects under "any other business", including the Presidency report on the British Film Institute symposium and "Glasgow, City of Culture".

The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 17 November to discuss the Commission's annual report on the economic situation in the Community; the draft directive on liberalisation of capital movements; the Commission proposal for a further new Community instrument (NCI IV) for project lending in the Community; and the proposed new Framework programme for Community research and development, in the context of the budget discipline conclusions. The Council may also discuss a revision to an existing mandate on tied aid financing. In line with the remit from its meeting in June, as endorsed by the European Council, the Council has continued work on proposals for harmonising the structure of VAT and excise duties, and may review the progress made to date.

The Agriculture Council is expected to meet on 17 and 18 November. Among the subjects likely to be discussed are the reform of the Community's beef regime; emergency measures in the milk sector; the social butter scheme; socio-structural measures; extraction solvents; medicated feedingstuffs; and eradication directives for live animals of the bovine and porcine species. It may also consider four food law directives and other items concerned with the completion of the internal market.

The Industry Council will meet on 18 November. The Council will continue its discussion of the Commission's proposal for a sixth Council directive on aid to shipbuilding to replace the existing directive which expires on 31 December 1986. The Council will also resume discussion of the Commission's proposals to free certain steel products from the production quota system from the beginning of 1987. Ministers are, in addition, expected to consider a draft Council recommendation on the integrated services digital network designed to harmonise the progressive introduction of advanced telecommunications within the Community.

The Environment Council will meet on 24 November. Among items for discussion are large combustion plants, vehicle emissions, the Fourth Environment Action Programme, chlorofluorcarbons, the sulphur content of gas oil and motorcycle noise.

The Foreign Affairs Council will meet on 24 and 25 November. The Council is likely to consider Commission proposals for the Community's generalised scheme of preferences for 1987. It will also discuss Mediterranean financial protocols, to decide a mandate for the negotiation of the new generation of Maghreb and Mashraq financial protocols; and EC/Turkey, to agree a Community position for discussions with Turkey on the provisions of the EC/Turkey Association Agreement relating to the free circulation of labour. The council may also review EC/US trade relations, including specific current bilateral problems; and discuss the Commission's proposals for a review of arrangements for trade in steel between the Community and third country producers.

The Energy Council will meet on 26 November. The council is expected to discuss a number of subjects, including the oil market, oil stocks, energy efficieny, new and renewable sources of energy, national use of energy in transport, oil refinery capacity and petroleum products, energy labelling and Euratom chapter III.

The Budget Council is due to meet on 26 and 27 November to discuss the European Parliament's amendments and modifications to the 1987 draft budget, which was established by the council on 9 September.

The Education Council is expected to meet on 28 November to consider a proposal for a European Community action scheme for the mobility of university students (ERASMUS).

SCOTLAND

Matrimonial Homes Act

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now publish the findings of the research commissioned by his Department into the workings of the Matrimonial Homes Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I hope to publish the report of this research as soon as the final text is available, which is likely to be next spring.

Railways (Grants)

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of section 20 payments paid by Strathclyde regional council to Scotrail came out of central Government rate grant; what is the value of this percentage; and if he has any plans to alter it.

Mr. Ancram: Rate support grant is payable in support of local authorities' revenues generally and not in relation to individual items of expenditure. Rate support grant for Strathclyde region for 1986-87 is 53·1 per cent. of budgeted relevant expenditure. (No adjustment has been made for grant penalties since they will be restored if authorities reduce their expediture to guideline on outturn.)

Labour Statistics

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number and percentage of those unemployed in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow, Central who have been out of work for (i) up to one year, (ii) up to two years and (iii) up to three years.

Mr. Lang: At 10 July 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the number of unemployed claimants in (a) City of Glasgow local authority district and (b) Glasgow Central parliamentary constituency, by duration and the percentage that each category represents of the total number of unemployed claimants, are shown in the table. This information is available in the Library.

	Number of unemployed claimants	Percentage of total unemployed claimants	Number of unemployed claimants	Percentage of total unemployed claimants
Up to one year	38,526	49·9	3,653	49·5

Two to three years	7,182	9·3	687	9·3

Saughton Prison, Edinburgh

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about conditions at Saughton prison, Edinburgh.

Mr. Lang: Like other Scottish prisons, Edinburgh prison at present holds more inmates than it was originally designed to accommodate. This has had adverse effects on the regime, but the governor and his staff make every effort to maintain acceptable conditions.

EMPLOYMENT

TVEI

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General what percentage of TVEI students stay on for the full course after 16 years of age; how this compares with the overall rate of 16-year-olds staying on for full-time education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: About 40 per cent. of students from the first cohort, from the first group of 14 TVEI projects stayed in full-time education, after 16, of whom about 60 per cent. were designated TVEI courses. This compares with a figure of about 38 per cent. for non-TVEI students at the schools taking part in the project and of 46 per cent. for the year-group across the country as a whole. In both cases there were significant variations between individual local education authorities and between individual schools within local education authorities.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if, for each month of the 100 per cent. YTS leavers survey, he will publish the destinations of leavers in each of the Manpower Services Commission regions.

Mr. Trippier: The table up-dates the information provided in my previous reply to the hon. Member on 25 July 1986 at columns 583-594. It reports the results of the 100 per cent. follow-up survey of YTS leavers conducted by the Manpower Services Commission, and represents the response to the question "What are you doing now?" Questionnaires are sent to young people some three months after they have left YTS.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report the information available from the 100 per cent. YTS leavers surveys about (a) the range and average wages earned, (b) the hours worked and (c) the types of jobs done by those leavers (i) in full-time work with the same employer, (ii) in full-time work with a different employer and (iii) in part-time work.

Mr. Trippier: The tables update the information provided in my previous reply to the hon. Member on 25 July 1986 at column 593. The information relates to young people who left YTS schemes between April 1985 and March 1986. Information is not available on the hours worked. The earnings data are provided by young people themselves and may be subject to some error.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will place in the Library the full results of all the 100 per cent. YTS leavers surveys which have been conducted.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to my previous reply on 25 July 1986 at columns 593-94. The report referred to in that reply has now been lodged in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if, for each survey of leavers conducted since YTS began, he will publish in the Official Report the number and percentage of leavers in each who were (a) in full-time work with the same employer, (b) in full-time work with a different employer, (c) in part-time work, (d) on a full-time course at a college or training centre, (e) back at school, (f) on another YTS, (g) doing something else and (h) unemployed, showing for each survey the total number of usable questionnaires returned, the percentage response rate and the number of those who responded who were early leavers.

It reports the results of surveys of YTS leavers conducted by the Manpower Services Commission and represents the response to the question "What are you doing now?" Young Persons

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General what meetings have been held between officials or Ministers in his Department and voluntary sector representatives to discuss (a) the proposals put forward by Youthcall and (b) any similar initiative; when they took place; and who was present.

Mr. Trippier: The Paymaster General met representatives of Youthcall last November to discuss their ideas for a voluntary community service scheme for young people. There have been subsequent meetings between Youthcall and officials of the Department to explore their ideas further.

Community Programme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to the answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 364, regarding the 2,500 respondents to the second community programe follow-up survey, and for each given long-term unemployed category, number and percentage in employment at the time of the survey, if he will now show the absolute number and the approximate percentage or proportion who were unemployed less than a year at their time of joining the community programme; and if he will set out the information in tabular form.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each constituency in Great Britain the number of unemployed claimants at May 1986 who were aged under 25 years and the proportion of total unemployment they represented.

Mr. Trippier: The following information is in the Library. The table shows the number of unemployed claimants aged under 25 years and the proportion of total unemployment they represent in each constituency of Great Britain at April 1986. TRANSPORT

Air Traffic Control Centres (Public Access)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport if the Civil Aviation Authority plans to introduce greater control over the access of outsiders to air traffic control centres.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority exercises its responsibility for air traffic control through the National Air Traffic Services. Instructions already existed banning the presence of unauthorised visitors to NATS air traffic control units. However, in the light of the Accidents Investigation Branch report on the recent incident, I am informed by the CAA that NATS has, in addition, issued an instruction to all its air traffic control units, banning the presence of visitors in close proximity to controllers at their work positions.

Air Traffic (Safety)

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has plans to improve safety measures at Heathrow airport following the Accident Investigation Board's report of a dangerous incident involving two British Airways jets on 29 July; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport what action he proposes to take following the publication by the accident investigation bureau's report into the airliner near-miss incident over Stanmore on 29 July last.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible, through the National Air Traffic Services, for all traffic control.

The incident reported upon by the Accident Investigation Branch resulted from human error on the part of an individual controller with a previously impeccable record. This individual was withdrawn from duty to be subjected to a period of retraining followed by re-examination and has, as a result, been passed fit to resume normal duties.

The CAA has informed me that the control procedures relating to the flight paths of aircraft approaching Heathrow have been thoroughly reviewed and confirmed to be satisfactory.

In the light of the report, NATS instructions which already forbade the admission of unauthorised visitors have been strengthened by a further instruction banning the close proximity of visitors to air traffic controllers at their working positions. In addition, the chairman of the CAA is urgently considering whether there is any further remedial action that needs to be taken.

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements the Civil Aviation Authority makes for the control of air traffic over Greater London; what resources are devoted to this task; what steps the Civil Aviation Authority takes to ensure that the system is safe and efficient; when the system was last reviewed and updated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer The Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) fulfills its responsibilities for air traffic control through the National Air Traffic Services. In the London area, air traffic control is exercised by the NATS from the London air traffic control centre at West Drayton and the control tower at Heathrow.

I am informed by the CAA that the services are provided by highly trained and licensed air traffic controllers, whose equipment is provided and maintained by professional engineering staff. This equipment includes modern radar facilities, extensive navigation aids for the routing of aircraft and instrument landing systems to guide aircraft on to the runway under the direction of air traffic control.

All the CAA's air traffic controllers undergo some four years of training before being qualified to operate in all control positions. They have to pass written, practical and oral examinations in basic air traffic control and in the special procedures of the unit in which they are employed. After qualifying, they continue to be subject to a process of continuous checking by a local competency examiner. If at any time the local competency examiner is not fully satisfied with a controller's work that controller may be withdrawn and subjected to retraining and re-examination. Such retraining and re-examination invariable occurs in the event of any incident that has called the controller's competence seriously into question.

Mandatory reporting procedures ensure that any shortcomings in personnel, operations or equipment are brought to the attention of the CAA for remedial action. In particular, the mandatory reporting procedures for airmisses include full investigation by the joint airmiss working group. This group includes independent representatives of pilots and aircraft operators, and they assess the risk and make recommendations. The accidents investigation branch has the right whenever it thinks appropriate to undertake its own investigation.

BR (Financial Targets)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Transport, what effect the new financial targets for British Rail will have on (a) passenger rail fares in Scotland, (b) freight tariffs in Scotland, (c) the track mileage operated by British Rail in Scotland and (d) the number of personnel employed by British Rail in Scotland.

Mr. David Mitchell These are all detailed matters for the British Railways Board. However, as we have already made clear to the House, suggestions that our new objectives for the board will result in swingeing average fares increases or sweeping service cuts are alarmist nonsense. Our objectives will secure improved quality services from a secure network at better value for money.

M40 (Birmingham-Oxford)

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects construction work to begin on the M40 Birmingham to Oxford extension.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Work on the first section between M42 and Warwick should begin in the summer of 1987.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give a timetable for construction of the M40 extension from Birmingham to Oxford.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Work should begin in the summer of 1987 with the whole route open to traffic by the end of 1990.

Buses (PSV Test)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport on what date his Department will be in a position to provide statistics on the percentage of privately owned buses that failed their annual public service vehicle test in the year 1985-86.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: If the hon. Member lets me know exactly what statistics he requires, I will let him have them within a few days.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress that has been made on providing the finance for the Channel tunnel project; and what discussions his Department has had with institutions and pension funds on this financing operation.

Mr. David Mitchell: Eurotunnel has announced that its private placing of shares has been satisfactorily completed. The Government naturally followed Eurotunnel's progress in raising these funds, and there were regular contacts with Eurotunnel's advisers. But my Department has had no contact with any of the institutions or pension funds which took part in the private placing.

Blind People

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends to take orange badges away from registered blind people.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have no such plan. The current review of the orange badge scheme is looking at a variety of suggestions made to us about the best way to balance the interests of all concerned.

Road Traffic Offences

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that records are kept, and subsequently made available to the public, which will show the type and make of the vehicles involved in road traffic offences.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested could be provided only at disproportinate cost. Statistical information on road traffic offences is collected centrally from records of court proceedings which do not always include details of the vehicles involved.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Wright Memoirs

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General what representations Her Majesty's Government have made, directly or through its agenices, to (a) the Australian Government and (b) the Australian security intelligency organisation concerning the publication of the Wright memoirs in Australia.

The Attorney-General: Her Majesty's Government have asked the Australian Government it they would consider participating in the proceedings before the Supreme Court of New South Wales which I have brought against Heinemann Australia Pty Limited and Peter Wright for an order restraining the publication of Peter Wright's manuscript.

RUC Report

Mr. Holt asked the Attorney-General if he will ask the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland to make available to hon. and right hon. Members an abridged version of the report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary by Mr. Colin Sampson, with appropriate deletions on security grounds; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: No. I affirm the answer to this House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on 23 October 1986 at column 948 when he said that, as is the usual practice with police reports covering criminal investigations, the report on the Royal Ulster Constabulary by Mr. Colin Sampson will not be published.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Brent Education Authority

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list all the official communications he or his officials have had with Brent education authority over the last three months.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department is in frequent contact with local education authorities on a range of educational matters. Recent correspondence with Brent education authority has included two requests for it to state the reasons for the continuing suspension from her headship of Miss Maureen McGoldrick. In the light of its replies, my right hon. Friend has asked the authority to give urgent consideration to Miss McGoldrick's reinstatement.

Teachers (Pensions)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will set out the relationship between the United Kingdom steering committee on local government superannuation and the teachers superannuation working party;

(2) how his Department is represented on the United Kingdom steering committee on local government superannuation; and how often his Department consults the steering committee on issues affecting teachers' pensions.

Mrs. Rumbold: The United Kingdom steering committee on local government superannuation is an ad hoc body established by the Association of County Councils, the Association of District Councils, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities and the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to advise those associations on matters related to the superannuation of local authority employees. A representative of the steering committee attends meetings of the teachers superannuation working party. My Department is not represented on UKSC but consults the appropriate parent organisations ACC and AMA as a matter of course on proposed changes to the teachers' superannuation regulations.

Colleges of Advanced Education

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what criteria are proposed for colleges of advanced education to gain access to the polytechnic central admission system.

Mr. Walden: In proposing the admission of certain colleges of higher education to the polytechnics central admission system, the Department's criteria are as follows:

Eligible colleges would have no access to a clearing house and would be offering

(a) more than one degree course to be covered by PCAS;

(b) degree courses of a non-specialist nature;

(c) degree courses which could not reasonably be expected to recruit through the central registration and clearing house, pending a merger of the latter with PCAS.

Institutions already using CRCH were excluded except where their non-initial teacher training courses fell under category (c).

I understand that the PCAS board is to decide in January whether extension to those colleges meeting these criteria can take place, following a review of experiences obtained during its first full cycle of admissions in 1985-86.

Notices of Complaint

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) for each school which has complied with a notice of complaint issued in 1985, section 71, Education Act 1944, what steps that school took in order to comply with the notice;

(2) out of those schools which were served with a notice of complaint in 1985 under section 71 of the Education Act 1944, which have (a) closed, (b) had the period for compliance with the notice extended and (c) complied with the terms of the notice;

(3) if he will list those schools which were served with a notice of complaint in 1985 under section 71 of the Education Act 1944.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is as follows:

School	Subject of complaint	Outcome
St. Nicholas Preparatory School, Birmingham	Accommodation and instruction	Following an appeal to the Independent Schools Tribunal, period for complaince still current
Faith Christian Academy, Suffolk	Accommodation and instruction	Complaints met
Life Christian School, London	Premises, accommodation and instruction	School closed
Shekinah Christian School, London	Premises, accommodation and instruction	Complaints met
Newcourt Christian School, London	Premises, accommodation and instruction	Period extended for full compliance

Foreign Languages

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many universities or polytechnics offer degrees in French; and if any steps are being taken to reduce this number.

Mr. Walden: Information from the educational counselling and credit transfer information service showed that in 1986-87 37 universities in Great Britain and six polytechnics in England offered degrees in French and French studies. My right hon. Friend is not aware of any steps to reduce this number.

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students, of British birth, graduated from a British university with a degree showing fluency in (a) Chinese, (b) Japanese and (c) Arabic in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Walden: In 1985, there were 48 and 93 students with United Kingdom domicile, who obtained a first degree from universities in Great Britain in Chinese languages and studies and in Oriental, Asian and African languages and/or studies, respectively. Separate information for Japanese and Arabic are not available.

Polytechnics

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence is available to him of the number of students who, in the current academic year, accepted polytechnic places and subsequently chose to go to university when offered lower entry qualifications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I understand that this information — which is the property of the Universities Central Council for Admissions and of the Polytechnics Central Admissions System—is not currently available.

WALES

Mentally Ill Patients

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects secure facilities for the treatment of mentally ill patients to become available in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: A site option appraisal to determine the most suitable locations for medium secure therapeutic units in Wales has been undertaken, and the necessary public consultation will take place as soon as possible.

Radiation

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what information he has concerning radiation readings for food and livestock in south Wales following the Chernobyl nuclear power plant accident;

(2) what readings are taken as a matter of course for radiation in food and livestock in the south Wales area.

Mr. Mark Robinson: There has been an ongoing monitoring programme covering agricultural produce throughout the Principality since the Chernobyl accident. Produce tested in south Wales includes milk and milk products, cereals, fruit, vegetables and meat. The results of these tests have been published regularly and copies placed in the Library of the House. In addition, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food undertakes on behalf of the Department an aquatic environment monitoring programme and its report, issued in early October, includes results obtained following the Chernobyl accident. A copy of this report has also been placed in the Library of the House. We have also commenced a more comprehensive terrestrial radioactivity monitoring programme around nuclear establishments throughout England and Wales and the first report of this programme will be issued in due course.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

World Bank

58. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the president of the World Bank; and what was discussed.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether representatives of his Department have met the new president of the World Bank.

Mr. Chris Patten: I had the pleasure of meeting the new president of the World Bank on 20 October, when he made his first official visit to London. Mr. Conable also called on my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Among the subjects discussed were the possibility of a new general capital increase for the bank, the current negotiations about the eighth replenishment of the International Development Association, and the environmental aspects of the bank's development projects and programmes.

Transportation Systems (Aid)

59. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of aid to African nations is designated for development of transportation systems.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1985, 19 per cent. - some £18·7 million - of our project aid for Africa was spent on the transport and communications sector. In addition we financed 87 man-years of expert and volunteer work in the same sector.

Surplus Foods

60. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had as to the potential future use for aid purposes of surplus foods now in storage in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government are working for agreement on a substantial reform of the European Community food aid programme; if possible at the Development Council on 11 November. Reforms of the common agricultural policy are under active discussion in the Agriculture Council. We have been prominent in ensuring that the worldwide problem of surplus production is discussed in the new GATT round.

Sub-Saharan Africa

62. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of overseas aid is allocated to sub-Saharan African nations.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1985 an estimated total of £510 million was spent in sub-Saharan Africa through both multilateral and bilateral channels. This represented 40 per cent. of total aid expenditure.

64. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on co-ordination with other countries to help sub-Saharan African countries with their agricultural development programmes.

Mr. Chris Patten: We fully support the efforts being made by multilateral development organisations, by other bilateral donors, and by sub-Saharan African countries themselves to co-ordinate more effectively the assistance provided for agricultural development programmes.

United Nations Children Fund

63. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met officials of the United Nations' Children's Fund; what subjects were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend the then Minister for Overseas Development met the executive director of UNICEF last March and discussed emergency programmes in Africa and the global immunisation campaign. I shall be meeting the deputy executive director, Dr. Richard Jolly, this Wednesday. I agreed on 8 October to contribute £1 million to support programmes in Mozambique and the immunisation programme in Botswana and Lesotho.

Front-line States

65. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he plans to increase aid to the front-line states adjoining South Africa.

Mr. Chris Patten: We maintain substantial programmes of assistance to Botswana, Mozambique and Zimbabwe, the front-line states adjoining South Africa. British aid to all the countries in the region is kept under review.

Aid Statistics

66. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how United Kingdom official aid as a share of gross national product compares with that provided by other member states of the Council of Europe; and if he will specifically list those member states which provide a lower level of aid.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1985, in terms of aid as a percentage of GNP, Britain ranked ninth out of the 14 donor countries of the Council of Europe. In absolute terms, we had the third largest programme. Donors providing less aid than Britain as a percentage of GNP were Italy, Switzerland, Ireland, Luxembourg and Spain.

Sudan

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to help relieve the famine in the Sudan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have given substantial help to relieve famine in Sudan worth almost £35 million since late 1984. There is enough food in northern Sudan and harvest prospects are encouraging, but many are at risk in the south and we hope food airlifts by the International Committee of the Red Cross, to which we have pledged £250,000, will be resumed. We are ready to do more when conditions permit.

Liverpool Freeport (Falkland Islands Vehicles)

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Overseas Development Administration will seek to obtain the vehicles and equipment from the Falkland Islands at present stored at Liverpool freeport and make them available for construction projects in the Third world.

Mr. Chris Patten: No. We, and recipient Governments, prefer to use competitively procured and fully guaranteed new equipment, because of the rist of incurring extra cost if equipment fails abroad.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Flags and Emblems Act

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances he would consider repealing the Flags and Emblems Act; and if he will detail the representations he has received against and in favour of such action.

Mr. Tom King: I am considering, in the context of a review of Public Order Law in Northern Ireland, whether the Act should be repealed.

Repeal has been advocated by nationalist spokesmen in Northern Ireland, and by the Irish Government, for a number of years on the basis that the Act is discriminatory and offensive to some sections of the community in Northern Ireland, and has also been recommended in the past by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights, on the grounds that the Act is unnecessary for public order purposes.

Following speculation in the press over recent months, I have received a small number of letters some from people who apparently believe that the flying of the Irish tricolour is illegal and that repeal would legalise it and others from people who believe that repeal would make the display of the Union flag illegal; both groups are mistaken.

US (Financial Grant)

Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to modify the provision contained in the Northern Ireland Estimates for 1986-87 as a consequence of moneys granted by the United States Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to do so. The International Fund for Ireland, through which contributions from the United States of America and other donor nations will be channelled, has yet to be legally constituted. It would then be for the board of the fund once established to decide on the disbursement of fund monies. Implications for Northern Ireland Estimates cannot be determined in the absence of decisions by the board on allocations.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the manpower and running costs of the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office in 1986-87.

Mr. Tom King: I have reviewed the manpower and running cost requirements for Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office for 1986-87 and I have decided that the manpower target for the NI Departments should be increased from 24,900 to 25,510. The increase reflects, inter alia, needs in the social securtiy field; developments in information technology in NI Departments; the employment measures announced at the time of the Budget; and increased work loads in land registry, vehicle licensing and water leakage control. Taking account of these changes to manpower targets, I have also decided to increase the departmental running cost limit for Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office from £446 million to £446·9 million. The additional running costs will be offset by savings elsewhere in the Northern Ireland block and thus will not lead to any increase in public expenditure.

US Aid

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the money given to Her Majesty's Government by the United States Congress for expenditure in Northern Ireland has been spent, and on what purpose.

Mr. Scott: None. Under an agreement (Cmnd 9910) between the United Kingdom, Republic of Ireland and United States Governments the money is being held in trust until the international fund is legally established. This will only take place once the agreement establishing the fund (Cmnd 9908) has undergone the necessary parliamentary procedures in London and Dublin and the two Governments have exchanged notifications of its acceptance.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Falkland Islands

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government has any plans to declare a new fishing zone around the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Renton: I refer the right hon. Member to the statement my right hon. and learned Friend made to the House on 29 October at columns 323-333.

International Year of Peace

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures have been taken or are proposed by Her Majesty's Government to support the United Nations International Year of Peace.

Mr. Eggar: To mark the United Nations International Year of Peace, we have arranged for Sir Brian Urquhart, former Under Secretary-General at the United Nations, to deliver a lecture entitled "Whatever Happened to International Order?" at Chatham house on 12 November.

Restitution of Monetary Gold

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any meetings of the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold have taken place since his reply of 12 March, Official Report, column 515.

Mr. Renton: No.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the gold held by the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold has so far been used to meet the expenses of the commission.

Mr. Renton: The information requested by the hon. Member is not at present available. I will write him as soon as I am in a position to do so.

Nuclear Missiles

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the statement of 23 October, Official Report, column 1299, if there are any proposals to revise the twin track communiqué of 12 December 1979 to incorporate a declaration coupling any agreement between the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and the Warsaw Pact on long-range INF systems with constraints on short-range systems.

Mr. Renton: The Alliance has always insisted that an agreement on longer-range INF missiles should include appropriate constraints on Soviet shorter-range INF missiles. That remains the objective of the United States in the Geneva negotiations.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice he has received from outside Her Majesty's Government concerning Her Majesty's Government's general ability to monitor the maintenance of the ABM treaty in the light of the statement of 23 October, Official Report, column 1295, that detailed matters of ABM treaty interpretation are not matters for Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Renton: None.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards a negotiated removal of ground-launched cruise missiles without reference to Soviet Srink missiles.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara).

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been received against the removal of ground-launched cruise missiles in any arms control deal along the lines proposed at the Reykjavik summit.

Mr. Renton: None. We remain in very close contact with our allies about these issues and fully support the United States' efforts at Geneva to pursue the outline agreement on INF reached at Reykjavik.

Falkland Islands (Fishing Limits)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications of the common fisheries policy on the new Falkland Islands fishing limits.

Mr. Renton: The common fisheries policy does not apply to the Falkland Islands. It has no implications for the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone other than by virtue of the Community's competence for external fisheries matters.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with representatives of the Soviet Government on the question of fisheries limits around the Falkland Islands, and when.

Mr. Renton: As my right hon. and learned Friend said in the House on 29 October, the question of south Atlantic fisheries has been raised several times with the Soviet Union in the course of the last six months. He sent a message to the Soviet Foreign Minister explaining our decision to establish the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone. This was delivered in Moscow on 29 October.

Visas

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state, for each country whose nationals require visas to visit the United Kingdom, and for each year since 1980 (i) how many applications were made for visas, (ii) how many applicants were called for interview, (iii) what is the mean waiting time between receipt of an application and approval or rejection, (iv) how many applications were rejected and (v) what criteria are used in deciding to reject an application.

Mr. Waddington: I have been asked to reply.

Information on applications for a visa to visit the United Kingdom for nationals of countries who were required before 15 October 1986 to have such a visa is not available centrally, except in respect of Sri Lankan citizens. Information in Sri Lankan citizens in Sri Lanka granted and refused such a visa is given in the following table for the period since 30 May 1985, when the visa requirement took effect. Information on applications received, applicants called for interview and waiting times is not available centrally. Applications for visas are decided in accordance with the criteria for admission given in the immigration rules (HC 169 as amended).

Applications by Sri Lankan citizens in Sri Lanka for a visa to visit the United Kingdom.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Intellectual Property

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what organisations have made representations in support of the introduction of legislation pursuant to the White Paper on intellectual property and innovation.

Mr. Pattie: About 90 organisations have made representations in support of such legislation.

Post Office

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of profits made in excess of those implied by the financial target have been paid by the Post Office to Her Majesty's Government in each year since 1980.

Mr. Pattie: All post-tax profits earned by the Post Office's postal business in the years since 1980 have been retained within the business but cash surpluses required by the external financing limits set by the Government, although retained within the business's balance sheet, have been loaned to other parts of the public sector. In the years from 1980-81 to 1985-86, cash surpluses totalled £316·5 million compared with aggregate negative external financing limits of £256·8 million.

Solvent Abuse

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to publicise to retailers the information that certain solvents can be abused in a manner similar to glue.

Mr. Howard: The Department of Health and Social Security has issued guidelines for shop managers listing the type of product liable to be abused by sniffing, in a manner similar to glue. In addition, Re-Solv, the charity set up by the industry, has issued guidelines to retailers which also list these products. Finally, the Department of Trade and Industry is co-sponsoring a video training film for retailers and their staff which covers the types of product likely to be sniffed. Copies of the two sets of guidelines have been placed in the Library.

South Africa

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any restrictions will be placed on the export to South Africa of vehicles and equipment at present in Liverpool freeport sold at the forthcoming auction.

Mr. Alan Clark: Restrictions would only apply in this case in respect of any goods subject to the provisions of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1985 as amended.

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any restrictions will be placed on the export to Argentina of vehicles and equipment at present in Liverpool freeport and to be sold at the forthcoming auction.

Mr. Alan Clark: No restrictions are placed on exports to Argentina other than for those goods subject to the provisions of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1985 as amended.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) where the Government stockpiles of manganese ore, ferromanganese, ferrochrome, vanadium pentoxide and ferrovanadium are located; and what is their present content in metric tonnes by metal content;

(2) from whom the materials in Her Majesty's Government's stockpiles of manganese ore, ferromanganese, ferrochrome, vanadium pentoxide and ferrovanadium were purchased; to whom they have been sold; in what quantities; and for how much;

(3) what purchases and sales have been made for and from Her Majesty's Government's stockpiles of manganese ore, ferromanganese, ferrochrome, vanadium pentoxide, and ferrovanadium since the establishment of these stockpiles in 1983;

(4) whether Her Majesty's Government entered into consultation with (a) the British Steel Corporation and (b) any private steel producer regarding the formulation of contingency plans to deal with the possible interruption of supplies of manganese ore, ferromanganese, ferrochrome, vanadium pentoxide and ferrovanadium from the Republic of South Africa.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 7 July 1986 at columns 11 and 12 concerning the Government's policy on the maintenance of supplies of strategic minerals. The situation continues to be closely monitored, in consultation with the companies in those sectors of industry concerned, including the steel industry.

The materials included in the stockpile reflect industry's requirements, and were purchased from commercial sources. The Government's intention to dispose of one quarter of the contents of the stockpile, announced on 25 July 1986, has been realised through sale by open tender. It is the Government's policy not to confirm details of the location, content or value of the stockpile given the need to protect its physical security and the commercially sensitive nature of the information concerned.

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what import quotas and duties are imposed by Britain on imports of iron ore, manganese ore, ferromanganese, ferrochrome and vanadium pentoxide from (a) Canada, (b) Australia, (c) Sweden, (d) Zimbabwe, (e) the Republic of South Africa, (f) Finland and (g) China.

Mr. Alan Clark: There are no quantitative restrictions or duties on the import of the named products from Sweden or Finland as members of EFTA. As for imports from the other named countries there are no quantitative restrictions on any of these; there are no duties on imports of iron ore or manganese ore; and there are duties of 4 per cent. on ferro manganese, 8 per cent. on ferrochromium and 5·5 per cent. on vanadium pentoxide, with duty-free quotas applying to imports of ferrochromium and duty-free entry applying to imports of vanadium pentoxide from Zimbabwe and China under the generalised system of preference.

Lawn Mowers

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the additional costs which will be required to be borne by the lawn mower manufacturing industry in consequence of the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Hereford Bye Street Gate Sculptures

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the present position in respect of the consideration by the reviewing committee on the export of works of art on the Hereford Bye Street Gate sculptures.

Mr. Alan Clark: The reviewing committee on the export of works of art has determined that the statues meet the "Waverley" criteria of national importance. The application for an export licence is under consideration and a decision will be taken as soon as possible.

Northern Region

Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will pay an official visit to the northern region to assess the effects of Government regional policies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend visited the north-east region two weeks ago and intends to do so again early next year.

Albania

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of United Kingdom trade with Albania; and what information he has as to how this compares with trade between other member states of the European Economic Community and Albania.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1985, United Kingdom exports to Albania totalled £5·3 million, and imports £0·2 million.

Comparison with European Community countries is in the following table.

United Kingdom Trade with Albania

ENERGY

Plutonium

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) whether any of the plutonium separated during the reprocessing of spent nuclear fuel in the United Kingdom has at any stage since May 1979 been exported under ownership different from that under which it was produced or imported into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

(2) if he will detail each occasion since May 1979, on which changes of ownership of plutonium have occurred whilst in storage in any form in the United Kingdom, indicating (i) the date, (ii) the quantity involved, (iii) the original ownership, (iv) any subsequent ownership, (v) the quantity exported, (vi) the date on which exported, (vii) the ownership under which exported, (viii) the country and organisation to which exported and (ix) the chemical and physical form in which exported;

(3) if he will publish an inventory of plutonium stock held by the United Kingdom, dealing with countries and organisations which own any plutonium here, and the quantities each own.

Mr. Goodlad: Plutonium derived from the reprocessing of civil spent nuclear fuel is allocated between owners by British Nuclear Fuels plc pro rata to the estimated quantities of plutonium in incoming fuel. Since May 1979, all such separated plutonium has been stored or exported under safeguards by BNFL in accordance with the company's contractual agreements with the owners.

Details of BNFL's contractual arrangements with individual organisations are commercially confidential.

Coal and Oil Industries

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the statistics for the number of deaths that have occurred each year for the preceding five years in coal mining and oil drilling operations in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Figures for fatalities in the coal industry are contained in the National Coal Board's report and accounts 1985-86, and for oil drilling operations in the "Brown Book" (Development of the oil and gas resources of the United Kingdom 1986), copies of both of which have been placed in the Library of the House. Since those documents were published, there have been a further three fatalities in the oil industry and eight in the coal industry.

Nuclear Power Industry

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many people are presently employed in the nuclear power industry; how much is invested in the industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: As I said in my reply to the hon. Member for Walthamstow (Mr. Deakins) on 13 June 1986 at column. 343, about 44,000 are employed directly by BNFL, UKAEA, NNC and in the nuclear-specific work of the generating boards. Well over 100,000 jobs depend directly or indirectly on the industry. During the financial year 1985-86 about £1,100 million was invested in our commercial nuclear installations, most of which was spent with United Kingdom industry. In terms of current orders, BNFL alone has overseas contracts worth in excess of £2·5 billion.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Rowlands asked the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the answer of 27 October, Official Report, column 8, whether he will publish the companies and communities in which the 2,796 new jobs have been created; and how many of these jobs have been taken by men, women and former employees of British Coal.

Mr. Hunt: This is a matter for British Coal. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Gentleman.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Strang asked the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her reply of 9 May, Official Report, column 266, he will make a statement on the outcome of Her Majesty's Government's review of emergency plans and procedures for implementation in the event of threat from nuclear fallout in the light of the Chernobyl incident; and whether she will publish details of the findings.

The Prime Minister: The review is not yet complete.

Security Commissions

Mr. Madden asked the Prime Minister who appoints persons to the Security Commission; for how long they are appointed; how many members consider any individual case; how many persons are now available to serve in any individual case; if any part of the consideration of any individual case is conducted in public; if any part of a Security Commission report or recommendations are made public; what is the Government's policy towards accepting any recommendations made by the Security Commission; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Appointments to the Security Commission are made by the Prime Minister. Members are normally appointed for terms of three years and may be reappointed for a further term or terms. The commission comprises seven members from which a panel of three or four, including the chairman, are chosen to serve on each inquiry. The commission conducts its inquiries in private. Its findings are published as far as this is consistent with the requirements of national security. All recommendations made by the commission in recent years have been accepted by the Government.

SCOTLAND

Trunk Road Programme

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the criteria he employs in order to establish priorities in the trunk road programme.

Mr. Ancram: Available resources are concentrated on those schemes which promise the greatest benefits taking into account strategic, economic, environmental, engineering and safety factors. The timing of trunk road schemes may also, of course, be dependent on other considerations such as the acquisition of land or the need to tie in works with associated local authority road schemes.

Service Personnel (Housing)

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those local authorities which currently do not make special provisions for the housing of former service personnel in accordance with the guidance given in Circular 107/1975.

Mr. Ancram: I understand that the majority of local authorities in Scotland have responded favourably to the circular by according some measure of housing priority to service personnel, but the information held by the Scottish Development Department on individual local authority allocation policies is not complete. District councils are responsible for allocation policies for their areas and I refer my hon. Friend directly to the local authorities in which he is interested.

Ayr Road Route

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current timetable for the construction of the Ayr road route (A77).

Mr. Ancram: Subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures and the availability of finance, work is expected to start on the trunk road section towards the end of 1989. However, this depends on Strathclyde regional council starting work on its section of the route in 1988-89 as stated in its transport policies and programmes.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to establish city technology colleges in Scotland; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many city technology centres he proposes to establish in Scotland;

(3) whether he is considering any locations within the area of Eastwood, Renfrew and Glasgow district councils for the establishment of city technology colleges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I believe that provision of broad but soundly based technological and vocational education for young people can be effectively pursued in Scotland through the technical and vocational education initiative. There are no plans at present to supplement the initiative by establishing centres specialising in technology, but we shall keep under review the need for and opportunities of doing so.

Nazi War Criminals

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the presence of alleged Nazi war criminals in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no such representations.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the hourly rate of overtime for the various ranks of the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under the Police Regulations 1979, police officers of ranks up to and including chief inspector are eligible for overtime. Officers may elect to be paid for the overtime which they work or to take time off in lieu. Pay for duty performed on a rostered rest day cancelled at less than 29 days' notice is at a rate of basic pay plus a half; pay for duty performed on a public holiday is at twice basic pay; and paid overtime worked at any other time is reimbursed at basic pay plus a third. The current hourly rates of police overtime are set out in the table.

Table of overtime rates with effect from 1 September 1986

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of hours overtime worked in the Metropolitan police in each year since 1979; and what is the average annual income of Metropolitan police officers from overtime.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information about the number of hours of paid overtime worked each year since 1978-79 is set out in the table. The average income of Metropolitan police officers of ranks eligible for overtime from overtime payments in the financial year 1985-86 was £1,913.

Hours of overtime worked by officers of the Metropolitan Police, 1979-80 to 1985-86

Financial year	Hours
1979-80	8,696,026
1980-81	6,939,249

1985-86	6,509,242

[1] The figure in parenthesis excludes the mutual aid provided to other forces as a result of the NUM dispute.

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what study he has made of possible financial savings which could be obtained by civilianising police posts; what results he expects from extra police officers being recruited; and how will they be monitored.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend's announcement on 20 May of decisions on police manpower followed a review of the needs for additional police officers which took into account the scope for civilianisation. That review showed that additional civilian staff should enable at least 650 police officers in provincial forces to be released for operational duties through civilianisation over the next few years, together with 400 in the Metropolitan police.

The recruitment of additional civilian staff to replace police officers carrying out duties which do not require the powers and training of a police officer is a cost-effective way of increasing the number of officers available for operational duty.

It does not normally lead to financial savings.

The results expected from the recruitment of additional police officers will depend on the specific purposes for which they are used. We expect to see an increase in the number of officers on patrol, in crime prevention initiatives such as neighbourhood watch, and on other priority demands. The Department will be keeping in touch with provincial forces, through Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary, and with the Metropolitan police to monitor the results achieved.

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his Department's objections to having Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary scrutinise the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Hurd: As explained in the Government's response (Cmnd. 9917) to the 45th report of the Public Accounts Committee on the financial control and accountability of the Metropolitan police, we regard it as essential to maintain the direct relationship between the Home Secretary and the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. We have accepted the recommendation of the Committee that the present arrangements for inspecting the Metropolitan police should be reviewed, and have set up a working party to report on this.

Crime Statistics

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the level of crime in Brixton; and if he will ask the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to revise upwards his allocation of police in Brixton.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This year my right hon. Friend has received letters from the community police consultative group for Lambeth and from four members of the public about crime in Brixton.

The deployment of manpower is a matter for the Commissioner. He has given Brixton and the surrounding areas a high priority in recent years in recognition of the special problems there. I understand that the strength of the former 'L' district, which included Brixton division, rose from 835 to 1,056 between June 1981 and September 1986.

Prisons (Detention)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) with respect to prisoners serving life sentences for offences other than murder, if he will explain in greater detail than in the statement of 30 November 1983 by his predecessor, the significance he attaches to the demands of retribution and deterrence, and the procedure for consulting the Lord Chief Justice and the trial judge as to the minimum period of detention necessary to satisfy those demands;

(2) what is the form of the question that he poses to the Lord Chief Justice and the trial judge when he initially consults them as to the period of detention that is necessary to satisfy the requirements of retribution an deterrence in the case of a discretionary life sentence prisoner, and, in particlar (a) if they are invited to indicate the fixed-term sentence that would have been passed on a prisoner to reflect the gravity of his offence had he been sentenced to a fixed-term rather than an indeterminate sentence and (b) if they are invited to indicate the period of detention that the prisoner would have served had he been sentenced to a fixed-term sentence rather than an indeterminate sentence; and if he himself applies either or both criteria when determining the period of detention necessary to satisfy the requirements of deterrence and retribution;

(3) when considering parole, if he seeks and receives from the Lord Chief Justice and the trial judge a specific indication as to the number of years that they each think that a prisoner serving a discretionary life sentence should serve;

(4) if, when considering parole, he treats the views of the Lord Chief Justice and the trial judge as to the requirements of retribution and deterrence as conclusive as to what those requirements are.

Mr. Hurd: I attach great importance to the demands of retribution and general deterrence in all life sentence cases. Life sentences are passed only when grave offences are committed and it would be wrong for any Home Secretary not to have regard to the retributive and deterrent elemens of the sentence in deciding when the prisoner should be considered for release on licence.

As indicated in my predecessor's statement of 30 November 1983, I look to the judiciary for advice on the length of detention necessary to satisfy the requirements of retribution and general deterrence in each individual case. The procedure which applies to all life sentence cases, irrespective of whether the life sentence is mandatory or discretionary is that the trial judge, if available, and the Lord Chief Justice are provided with a detailed memorandum on the offence and the prisoner's background, a copy of any letter sent to me by the trial judge after sentence and copies of the latest reports on the prisoner's conduct and progres in prison, and are asked to state their views on the case and on the period of detention necessary to meet the requirements of retribution and general deterrence. Usually, but not always, the views of the judiciary are expressed in terms of length of actual detention.

On the basis of the same information that was before the trial judge and the Lord Chief Justice and in the light of their views, the circumstances of the individual case, and having regard to my own wider responsibilities, I decide on the date of the first reference of the case to the local review committee as the first stage of a formal review by the Parole Board. In all cases, I take account of the views of the judiciary. They are not overriding, although I naturally attach great weight to them.

Syrian Students

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will revoke all leave given to Syrian students to permit them to study in the United Kingdom; and if he will refuse further such applications for the time being.

Mr. Waddington: Applications for leave to enter or remain are considered individually in accordance with the immigration rules. Following the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Syria, we are considering whether any further tightening of the immigration control in relation to nationals of that country is necessary in the interests of national security.

Nuclear Waste Disposal

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for reports from the relevant chief constables as to the cost of the police operation at each of the four sites surveyed by NIREX under special development orders up to 1 October.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am asking the chief constables to let me have such information as is available and will write to the hon. Member.

Criminal Justice (White Paper)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all those organisations and individuals who have responded to the White Paper on Criminal Justice (Cmnd. 9658) and its associated discussion papers.

Mr. Mellor: The following organisations and individuals responded to some of the proposals in the White Paper and its associated discussion documents:

In addition, 30 members of the public submitted comments.

Criminal Law (Codification)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has had with interested parties concerning Law Commission report 143, "Codification of the Criminal Law"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: None. In its introduction to the report, the Law Commission seeks the views of the professions and the public on the proposals.

Civil Protection

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in monitoring the performance of local authorities in meeting their civil protection responsibilities; and when a report thereon will be made available.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question on this subject from my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Terlezki) on 22 July at column 156.

That reply referred to a proposed rolling three-year programme for implementation of the 1983 Civil Defence Regulations. The programme was issued to local authorities on 30 October after consultation with the local authority associations. It sets out a timetable for systematic monitoring. A copy is in the Library of the House.

Police (Northamptonshire)

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Northamptonshire as to the circumstances in which on Monday 20 October officers, out of uniform and hatless, in an unmarked car, on the M1 northbound stopped a woman driving alone and did not immediately offer visual or verbal proof of their identity; and if he will make a statement on the substance of the report.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The enforcement of road traffic law, including the policy on the use of unmarked vehicles, is a matter for individual chief officers of police. I understand that in this case the officers made use of the police vehicle's blue flashing lights and two tone horn to stop a driver suspected of exceeding the speed limit, and that the officers were wearing uniform.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will investigate the circumstances and conditions in which remand prisoners, including Tracy Armstrong, a constituent of the hon. Member for Hackney South and Shoreditch, are being kept a week at a time in cells at magistrates' courts, including those at Lavender Hill magistrates court and Highbury Corner magistrates court; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Some untried prisoners are having to be held in police cells in London because of lack of places to accommodate the untried population. We are continuing to take vigorous action to tackle this problem. Among recent or current developments are the transfer of prisoners to other parts of the country, an increase in the capacity of Brixton, an increase in the number of untried prisoners held at Pentonville and the introduction of units for untried prisoners at Feltham and Rochester youth custody centres. We have also reached broad agreement with the Prison Officers Association at Holloway on an internal reorganisation which will progressively increase its capacity sufficiently to accommodate all London female untried prisoners.

We are conscious that police cells are not designed for holding prisoners for extended periods and that prisoners accommodated there do not receive the full range of privileges available in prison. Nevertheless, the police are doing all they can to provide the best possible conditions in very difficult circumstances.

Mr. Amanaullah Khan

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the case of Mr. Amanaullah Khan is to be considered by the Security Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: This case does not fall to be considered by the Security Commission. Mr. Khan has, however, exercised his option to appear before my panel of advisers in cases involving deportation on grounds of national security and I understand that arrangements are being made for a hearing as soon as possible.

Visas

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action a person with a visa to visit the United Kingdom is required to take in the United Kingdom if they wish to extend their permission to visit the United Kingdom; if representations from hon. Members will be considered in such a circumstance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: A visa holder admitted to the United Kingdom as a visitor may apply for an extension of his stay in accordance with the provisions of the immigration rules. Representations by hon. Members on such applications are taken into account in the normal way.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, when a person with a visitor's visa is refused entry to the United Kingdom, what information is given to the passenger about their rights of appeal; in what languages such information is available; whether such a passenger is detained or granted temporary admission pending appeal; what rights to make telephone calls such passengers are given; what information about rights to independent representation is available and in what languages; what independent advice is available to such passengers from independent advice agencies at ports of entry; how soon after entry appeals are held; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: When a passenger who holds a valid visa is refused leave to enter the country, he is given a written notice, in English, of his right of appeal, which he may exercise before departure. The immigration service informs the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service of all such cases. If the passenger does not understand English, the notice and the appeal procedures are explained to him in his own language. He has access to a telephone. Under the Immigration Act 1971, a passenger who has been refused entry is liable to detention but most of those who remain here for an appeal hearing are instead granted temporary admission. The hearing is normally a few weeks after refusal.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will arrange for nationals of countries subject to visa control, settled in the United Kingdom, who are advised by his Department to obtain visa exemption stamps to avoid difficulties on re-entry to the United Kingdom, to obtain such stamps from immigration officers on departure from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to enable persons travelling abroad to obtain visa exemption stamps at air and sea ports.

Mr. Waddington: Immigration officers automatically stamp the passports of eligible passengers entering the United Kingdom to show that they are exempt from a visa requirement. Passengers whose passports have not been so endorsed on entry or while in this country may obtain exempt endorsement where adequate arrangements can be made to establish exemption.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when an overseas national who requires a visa to visit the United Kingdom arrives in the United Kingdom without a visa, what minimum time they will be allowed to remain in the United Kingdom before removal from the United Kingdom; what access to a public telephone will be given to such passengers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: How soon it is practicable to remove passengers refused leave to enter the country depends on the circumstances.

DNA Testing

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply of 28 October, from what countries the families to be tested by DNA originate; on what criteria the families are being selected; how many families, to date, have been selected; when families selected will be notified of that selection; if hon. Members whose constituents have been selected, or are selected, will be notified; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The arrangements for the proposed trial using DNA testing in a sample of immigration cases are still being developed. Some cases will be selected on a random basis; some will be people who have already volunteered. The families who will be invited to participate have not yet been selected. It will be for individual applicants to decide if they wish to approach an hon. Member.

Mr. Vanunu

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has of the departure of Mr. Vanunu from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: I have no such evidence. Anyone who has evidence that any offence was committed should of course at once inform the police.

Breathalyser

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is yet in a position to announce a decision on the continuation of the blood test option for drivers subjected to a Lion Intoximeter 3000 breathalyser test; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend intends to make an announcement shortly.

EMPLOYMENT

Manpower Services Commission

Sir Peter Mills asked the Paymaster General why so many frequent changes are made in civil servants working for the Manpower Services Commission in the south-west of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Manpower Services Commission has recently undergone a period of rapid growth as a result of new and expanded initiatives such as job clubs, restart and the job training scheme. The commission has had to arrange a considerable number of personnel moves in order to ensure that these important initiatives, are adequately and properly staffed.

Sir Peter Mills asked the Paymaster General why the Manpower Services Commission will not allow the various agencies in the south-west of England to have more freedom in their work and monitor the results.

Mr. Trippier: I understand my hon. Friend is referring to the schemes run under the community programme.

The revised controls for the community programme, introduced on 1 April 1986 as a result of a report by Coopers and Lybrand Management Consultants, include recommendations about the financial management of agencies. Prior to an agency being approved, Manpower Services Commission officials have to ensure that management controls are adequate, making recommendations as appropriate. The frequency and nature of monitoring undertaken depends upon the effectiveness of the controls operated by the agency management.

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General how many community employment programme and community programme managing agents or sponsors have been excluded from schemes in the following area manpower board areas: Birmingham/Solihull, Coventry/Warwickshire, Wolverhampton/Walsall, Sheffield/Rotherham, Nottinghamshire, Trafford/Salford, central Manchester, inner Liverpool, outer Liverpool, London north-east, London north, London south and west and London south-east.

Mr. Lee: This information is not available centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General what was the annual expenditure of the Manpower Services Commission in each year since 1976 for the following area manpower boards; and what is the projected expenditure up to 1988; Birmingham/Solihull, Coventry/Warwickshire, Wolverhampton/Walsall, Sheffield/Rotherham, Nottinghamshire, Trafford/Salford, central Manchester, inner Liverpool, outer Liverpool, London north-east, London north, London south and west and London south-east.

Mr. Trippier: It is not possible to provide an answer to the historic and current parts of this question except at a disproportionate cost to the taxpayer. Details of projected expenditure in the areas covered by the specified area manpower boards in 1987-88 can not be ascertained until the total estimate provision for the Manpower Services Commission's grant-in-aid and for Department of Employment agency programmes delivered by the commission is settled for that year.

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General how much has been paid by the Manpower Services Commission's north-east London area manpower board to target training workshop YTS in the current financial year; and what was the forecast budget for target training in the current financial year.

Mr. Lee: The Manpower Services Commission has so far paid a total of £126,038 in grants to target training workshop YTS in the current financial year. The forecast budget for the workshop in the current financial year was £265,200 for grant aid, plus £12,650 for managing agent's fees and VAT.

Community Programme

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will list the major individual programmes, the individual budgets and number of approved places allocated annually to the special temporary employment programme, the community employment programme and the community programme since 1978 in the following area manpower board areas: Birmingham/Solihull, Coventry/Warwickshire, Wolverhampton/Walsall, Sheffield/Rotherham, Nottinghamshire, Trafford/Salford, central Manchester, inner Liverpool, outer Liverpool, London north-east, London north, London south and west and London south-east;

(2) if he will list the number of approved places which have been allocated annually to the special temporary employment programme, the community employment programme and the community programme since 1978 in the following area manpower board areas: Birmingham/Solihull, Coventry/Warwickshire, Wolverhampton/Walsall, Sheffield/Rotherham, Nottinghamshire, Trafford/Salford, central Manchester, inner Liverpool, outer Liverpool, London north-east, London north, London south and west and London south-east;

(3) if he will list the agencies and sponsors employing long-term unemployed people under the community programme; how many approved places each agency and sponsor has; and how many of their places are filled for the following area manpower boards: Birmingham/Solihull, Coventry/Warwickshire, Wolverhampton/Walsall, Sheffield/Rotherham, Nottinghamshire, Trafford/Salford, central Manchester, inner Liverpool, outer Liverpool, London north-east, London north, London south and west and London south-east.

Mr. Lee: The information requested in these questions is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Employment Measures

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General what are the numbers of community programme entrants in the 12 months to February 1986, April 1986 and July 1986; and what were the proportions of part-time participants who entered the programme in those 12-month periods.

Mr. Lee: The number of community programme entrants in the 12 months to February 1986, April 1986 and July 1986; and the percentage of part-time participants are as follows:

Twelve months ending	Total entrants	Percentage of part-time entrants
February 1986	231,671	85
April 1986	254,012	85
July 1986	280,406	86

Restart Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate the total number of people leaving the unemployment register in connection with the restart scheme.

Mr. Lee: By 9 October, 71,506 had left the unemployment register after receiving a letter in connection with restart. Included in this figure are 30,218 people who left the register after being interviewed.

Jobstart Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish the latest estimates of the numbers of people taking jobs under the jobstart scheme, the average level of gross earnings for such jobs and the distribution of jobstart earnings, in the same or similar format to that given in his answer of 18 April, Official Report, columns 527-28, also showing how many of the long-term unemployed were given restart interviews in the period covered by the estimates.

Mr. Lee: The restart programme was extended nationally on 1 July 1986, earlier in some areas. By 9 October, 366,451 people had been counselled. In the same period, 1,312 people started on the jobstart scheme. Information about wage levels is available for the first 965 of these participants. The average starting wage in that group was £64·69 per week.

The range of wages is shown in the table.

Wages (£ a week)	Number
0-39	35
40-49	57
50-59	147
60-69	266
70-79	460
Total	965

Work Availability Test

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General if he will publish details and results of the strengthened availability for work test pilot exercise run from 16 June in 12 unemployed benefit offices.

Mr. Lee: The availability for work experiments were conducted in 12 unemployment benefit offices. In half the offices an experimental questionnaire was issued to all new claimants and in the other half the questionnaire was issued after six weeks unemployment. This was supplemented by interviews in some cases. The results were measured against a group of 12 "control" offices.

The results were:

	Experimental Offices	Control Offices
(a) New Claims Experiments
Number of initial claim enquiries	14,059	14,467
Number of claims not pursued	1,077	586
(b) Six Week Experiments
Number of Claimants reaching 6 weeks unemployment	4,731	6,317
Claims withdrawn within 2 weeks of issue of questionnaire	514	330
(c) Claims disallowed by the independent adjudication authorities on availability grounds (both experiments)	543	53
(d) Appeals against disallowance	59	4
(e) Appeals allowed	25	1

Some of those who did not pursue or withdrew their claims transferred to other venefits and in addition some claimants were helped towards re-employment opportunities through jobcentres.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will list all those Department of Employment offices in which the new work availability test has been introduced;

(2) if he will list for each region and for each Department of Employment office in the region the date at which the new work availability test will be introduced.

Mr. Lee: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

EEC Regulations

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Paymaster General, what estimate he has made of the additional employment which will be created in laboratories to be created under article 4 of the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has appointed nine existing test laboratories to examine, among other things, noise emissions from lawn mowers. We do not know, at this early stage, whether these bodies will need to appoint additional staff but it was never the purpose of the regulations to create jobs in this direct way and I hope they do not cause unnecessary public expense. The harmonisation of these standards should produce fair competition within the common market and prevent other countries from excluding products by producing unnecessarily stringent regulations. I hope that our manufacturers will be able to take advantage of the wider market that should result.

Career Development Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General (1) how many loans have been made under the career development scheme to date in each pilot area and in total;

(2) what is the total value of loans made under the career development scheme to date in each pilot area and the overall total value.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: At 30 October 1986, the number and value of career development loans notified to my Department by participating banks for each of the four pilot areas and in total was as follows:

	Number of loans	Value of loans £
Aberdeen	26	50,494
Bristol & Bath	45	103,635
Greater Manchester	29	44,935
Reading & Slough	30	68,750
Total	130	267,814

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General how many loans of £500 to £1,000, £1,000 to £2,000, £2,000 to £3,000, £3,000 to £4,000 and £4,000 to £5,000 have been made under the career development scheme to date in each of the pilot areas and in total.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: At 30 October 1986, the number of career development loans notified to my Department by the participating banks was as follows:

	Aberdeen	Bristol/Bath	Greater Manchester	Reading/ Slough	Total
£500-£1,000	13	13	17	10	53
£1,001-£2,000	2	7	4	6	19
£2,001-£3,000	6	15	5	5	31
£3,001-£4,000	2	4	1	3	10
£4,001-£5,000	3	6	2	6	17
All Values	26	45	29	30	130

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General how many loans have been made under the career development scheme in each pilot area and in total to date, the value of which lie between £300 and £500.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Six career development loans have been made at the previous lower limit of £500. I reduced the lower limit to £300 earlier this month following discussions with the participating banks, training providers and potential users of the scheme.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General how many applications for loans under the career development scheme have been made to date in each pilot area and in total to date; and, in each case, how many were rejected.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: As at 30 October 1986, the total numbers of applications and formal rejections notified to my Department by participating banks for each of the four pilot areas and in total was as follows:

	Number of Career Development Loan applications	Number of formal rejections[1]
Aberdeen	48	22
Bristol & Bath	53	8
Greater Manchester	111	82
Reading & Slough	42	12
Total of 4 Areas	254	124

[1] The participating banks advise that a greater number have not proceeded with applications to the stage of formal rejection, but detailed statistics are not kept.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the progress of the career development scheme to date in each of the pilot areas.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I hope that people who live in the four pilot areas of Aberdeen, Bristol/Bath, Greater Manchester and Reading/Slough, or who wish to train in these areas, will consider whether to take advantage of the career development loans. Some 130,000 leaflets have been distributed about this scheme and requests have been received for some 10,000 detailed information packs. Greater Manchester, with the largest population, has so far attracted most applications, but numbers are now also growing in the other three areas.

Jobcentres

Mr. Janner asked the Paymaster General whether teleprinters are now installed in all jobcentres; what is the cost of installing them; and what he estimates to be the cost of the operation of each such teleprinter per month.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Teletypewriter terminals are installed in all but the smallest 221 jobcentres, which do not merit the installation of a terminal because of low business volume. There are 1,080 terminals currently in use. The cost of installing each teletypewriter is £90 plus VAT on average. Monthly operational cost of each teletypewriter is £179 plus VAT excluding staff time.

Wages Act 1986

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General how progress towards achieving employment creation objectives of the Wages Act 1986 is to be monitored by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We will not be establishing any specific monitoring arrangements. In my opinion the orders of the unreformed wages councils were becoming so damaging to new job creation that the 1986 Act can only increase employment beyond what it would otherwise have been.

Agriculture (Back Injuries)

Miss Maynard asked the Paymaster General what information he has about the incidence of back injuries in agriculture; and what investigations are being carried out by his Department and the Health and Safety Executive into this question, with particular reference to back injuries and problems caused by the design of tractor seats.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I shall write shortly to the hon. Member and will place a copy of my letter in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Public Services Agency

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps will be taken during the proposed reorganisation of the Property Services Agency to ensure that there is no degradation in the level of service given to clients;

(2) what specific steps will be taken to ensure that the level of service given by the Property Services Agency to Government communications headquarters, Cheltenham, and United States Air Force at Fairford will be maintained if staff are relocated to Bristol; and what extra costs are estimated to be involved in maintaining this level of service in those circumstances.

Mr. Chope: I believe the reorganisation of PSA by shortening the chain of command will improve the service it gives to clients. At both Fairford and GCHQ the district works offices will be strengthened and will be directly responsible to the regional HQ at Bristol. There will be no significant change in the numbers and level of professional and technical staff available but they will be better organised. We have the support of our clients for these changes.

Caravan Sites Act 1968

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government has any plans to seek to amend or repeal the Caravan Sites Act 1968.

Mr. Tracey: A review of policy for the provision of gipsy sites under the Caravan Sites Act 1968 is at an advanced stage. Consultations have taken place and we hope to announce the conclusions before long.

Poilution

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will rank, in descending order, the information available to him on the total emissions for each of the last 10 years of (a) sulphur oxides, (b) carbon monoxide and (c) hydrocarbons.

Mr. Waldegrave: The data requested are contained in the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics," published annually by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. The latest edition, Number 8, is available in the Library. Total emission data for sulphur oxides are given in table 2.4, and for carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons in table 2.7.

Eastern District Distributor Road, Leicestershire

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is yet able to announce whether the eastern district distributor road is to be included in the approved structure plan for the county of Leicestershire.

Mr. Tracey: The modifications which the Secretary of State proposes to make to the submitted alterations to the plan will be published in the near future. There will then be an opportunity for representations to be made on them to my right hon. Friend before he makes his final decision on the plan.

EEC Directives

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to implement the European directive on environmental assessment; whether he intends to make use of existing powers under the Town and Country Planning Act 1972 with a view to implementing the directive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Member states are required to take the measures necessary to comply with the directive by 2 July 1988. Proposals for meeting its requirements were set out in a consultation paper issued in April of this year, copies of which are in the Library. It is intended to make full use of existing powers and procedures under town and country planning legislation, but a few new provisions will be required. Responses to the consultation paper are being considered, and it is too early to say when the necessary orders under the European Communities Act 1972 are likely to be made.

Birmingham (Urban Development Agency)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about proposals made to him by Birmingham city council and the private sector for an urban development agency.

Mr. John Patten: Birmingham city council and representatives from the private sector presented outline proposals to my right hon. Friend on 30 July 1986. I look forward to seeing details of the alternative proposals which the city have been discussing with the private sector as soon as they are available.

Housing Finance

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the housing investment programme allocation for Leeds city council for each of the last three years.

Mr. Tracey: The initial housing investment programme allocations for Leeds city council for 1986-87, 1985-86 and 1984-85 were £22.345 million, £24,826 million and £29,016 million respectively. HIP allocations do not provide a measure of the scale of a council's capital programme since they ignore the significant spending power available from capital receipts.

Liverpool Freeport (Falkland Islands Vehicles)

Mr. Oakes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many vehicles from the Falkland Islands are at present stored at Liverpool freeport prior to their disposal by auction;

(2) what was the total cost to public funds of the vehicles and equipment from the Falkland Islands at present stored at Liverpool freeport prior to disposal by auction;

(3) how many of the vehicles from the Falkland Islands at present stored at Liverpool freeport prior to disposal by auction have never been in use;

(4) what was the total cost of transporting the vehicles and equipment at present stored at Liverpool freeport from the Falkland Islands to Liverpool;

(5) when he proposes to commence the auction of the vehicles and equipment from the Falkland Islands at present stored at Liverpool freeport; and over how many days he anticipates the auction will last;

(6) if British buyers will be allowed to bid in the auction of vehicles and equipment from the Falkland Islands at present stored at Liverpool freeport.

Mr. Chope: At the conclusion of the Mount Pleasant airport project the contractor, the Laing-Mowlem-ARC joint venture sold its surplus plant and equipment to a company which arranged and paid for transporting to the United Kingdom. This company has now arranged an auction at Liverpool, which is open to prospective buyers worldwide.

The original cost of the plant formed part of the total contract price agreed with LMA.

Rate Poundage

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the total rate rise in poundage and percentage terms, at ratepayer level, in every local authority in England between 1981-82 and 1986-87, whole period, ranked from biggest increase to smallest increase, by class.

Mr. Ridley: I have today placed the available information in the Library.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether local authorities which sell land or buildings previously used for educational purposes to trusts running city technology colleges will be permitted to retain and use all the proceeds from such sales without penalisation through the rate support grant.

Mr. Chope [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986, c. 69]: Such receipts would be treated in the same way as any other capital receipt.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Income Tax

Mr. Chapman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much is paid in income tax by those whose earnings place them in the top 5 per cent. of taxpayers; and if he will estimate the additional yield from increasing income tax rates on people with such earnings by (i) 10 per cent. and (ii) 20 per cent.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The top 5 per cent. of taxpayers (counting a married couple as one) are expected to pay about £12 billion in income tax in 1986-87. If higher rates of tax were increased by (i) 10 percentage points and (ii) 20 percentage points, they would pay additional tax of (i) £1·3 billion and (ii) £2·5 billion respectively. These estimates make no allowance for possible behavioural changes which might result from increased higher rates. They also assume no change to the basic rate of tax.

VAT (Housing)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how much revenue would be raised by the imposition of value added tax at 15 per cent. on new houses other than council houses.

Mr. Brooke: The question is hypothetical and it is difficult to make an accurate estimate of such a major change. However, bearing these reservations in mind, it is estimated that the net additional full year revenue of imposing value added tax at 15 per cent. on private new housing would be about £575 million (at 1986-87 prices).

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish information available to him on the rank in descending order of the gross domestic product per head of the top 30 countries in the world for each year since 1979;

(2) if he will publish information available to him in descending order of the gross domestic product per head of the top 30 countries in the world for each year since 1979.

Mr. MacGregor: Information for the OECD member states is available in the OECD publication "National Accounts, Main Aggregates, Volume 1, 1960-1984". Wider coverage is given by the United Nations publication "National Accounts Statistics, Main Aggregates, 1982". Both volumes are available in the House of Commons Library.

For ranking countries in terms of gross domestic product per capita, there are no fully comparable worldwide data. The official date available for some countries are in terms of gross domestic product; for others they are in terms of net material product. In making comparisons between countries using gross domestic product and those using net material product, extreme caution must be exercised.

Infraction Proceedings

Mr. Heddle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the European Court to announce its decision in the matter of infraction proceedings under the European Economic Community sixth directive.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement made by my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir George Young) in replying to the Adjournment debate on 25 July at column 923.

VAT (Scottish Borders)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make a statement on the steps taken to date to publicise his decision to downgrade the Borders Customs and Excise value added tax advisory functions presently provided in Galashiels;

(2) what reductions in the provision of advice on value added tax will occur as a result of the decision to withdraw Her Majesty's Customs and Excise value added tax services from Galashiels to the regional office in Edinburgh;

(3) whether he will reconsider his decision to remove to Edinburgh the value added tax advisory service currently offered to the business community in the Borders area; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what estimate has been made of the effect on value added tax revenues from the Borders area after value added tax advisory services are withdrawn from the local Customs and Excise office in Galashiels;

(5) what savings he expects to accrue as a result of the withdrawal of locally provided value added tax advice by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise officers in Scotland after implementation of the forthcoming changes agreed in September 1985.

Mr. Brooke: The arrangements by Customs and Excise for providing an inquiry service to the business community and the public was reviewed as part of the Government's programme aimed at improving efficiency in the Civil Service. The recommendations which were accepted by the Government are intended to provide a more comprehensive and effective service rather than achieve specific savings. The inquiries will be channelled to a limited number of main Customs offices and dealt with by trained staff. Details of the offices providing information will be shown in the local telephone directories. The revised arrangements are not expected to have any effect on the VAT revenue.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the ability of Her Majesty's Customs and Excise to maintain a regular programme of visits to local business men in the Borders after the implementation of the withdrawal of the value added tax advisory service to Edinburgh.

Mr. Brooke: The changes proposed to the Customs and Excise public inquiries service will not affect the programme of control visits to registered VAT traders.

Privatisation

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what selection procedure is used to obtain legal and financial advice from sources outsider Her Majesty's Government in connection with privatisation proposals.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

TRANSPORT

Transport Act 1985

4. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has had recent discussions with local authority representatives concerning the impact of the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend and I meet various local authority representatives from time to time, to discuss matters which include the Transport Act 1985.

British Airports Authority

5. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for Transport at what recent price he intends to sell the British Airports Authority.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The price at which BAA plc shares will be sold will depend on a number of factors including market conditions at the time of the offer for sale.

Bus Industry

6. Mr. Forth asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress of de-regulation in the bus industry.

Mr. Moore: Deregulation has got off to a very good start. Service levels have been very largely maintained, new forms of service, particularly minibuses, have been introduced, and there have been substantial savings in subsidy, thanks to the introduction of competitive tendering.

Lorry Ban, London

7. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Transport what monitoring is now being undertaken by his Department of the effects of the night-time and week-end lorry ban in London.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Responsibility for the ban rests with the London boroughs, including measuring its effects.

Settle-Carlisle Railway

10. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has discussed with the chairman of British Railways the preservation of the Settle-Carlisle railway line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: It would be premature to discuss the detailed case for retaining this line in advance of receiving either BR's financial case or the TUCC's report. I expect to receive both documents before the end of the year.

London Regional Transport

13. Mr. Moynihan asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on revenue subsidies to London Regional Transport.

Mr. Moore: London Regional Transport is to be congratulated on reducing the burden of revenue subsidies to £97·4 million last year. It virtually achieved in one year the target reduction to £95 million for which we gave it three years. This has allowed for increased investment to improve the system. £234 million was spent last year to which we contributed grant of £198 million; this year the target for investment is increased to £261 million and capital grant goes up to £216 million. At the same time the burden on London's ratepayers has been reduced from 10·8p in the pound last year to 9·79p in the pound this year.

Efficiency has not been won by cutting services. The volume of bus services has been maintained and underground services are being increased to cater for record levels of patronage. We have just approved £45 million investment in additional trains.

15. Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met representatives of London Regional Transport staff.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend has had no meetings with representatives of London Regional Transport staff since taking up his appointment.

30. Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the chairman of London Regional Transport.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend sees Dr. Bright from time to time. Their last meeting was at the London Passenger Transport Group on 22 July. My own most recent meeting with Dr. Bright was on 14 October.

32. Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with London Regional Transport management concerning service levels.

Mr. David Mitchell: None. These are the responsibility of management.

24. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects London Regional Transport to publish its business plan for 1987-88.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand that London Regional Transport proposes to publish its business plan for 1987-88 in December.

37. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Transport what developments have occurred on London Regional Transport since the capital's transport systems were recovered from Greater London council control; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: London Regional Transport's record has been one of success. The underground services have achieved record levels of patronage, while bus patronage has been stabilised after many years of decline. More efficient management has reduced the operating subsidies required to less than half the sum planned by the GLC. This has left room to increase investment in improving the system, up from £234 million spent last year to £261 million planned for this year, while still usefully reducing the burden on the ratepayer.

Council of Transport Ministers

16. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress of the European Council of Transport Ministers under the British presidency.

Mr. Moore: Useful progress has been made in preparation for Transport Council meetings on 10-11 November and 15-16 December. The informal Council last month showed that there is a willingness to make progress on the liberalisation of air transport, and we shall be pressing for agreement on a package of liberal measures for a three-year first step towards the 1992 target date for completion of the Community's internal market. On shipping we are building on the substantial measure of agreement already reached on three of the four proposed shipping regulations with the aim of adopting a comprehensive package in December. We shall also be pressing for progress on road haulage liberalisation on the basis of Commission proposals expected shortly.

Bus Services (Subsidy)

18. Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of bus services are being financed through subsidy under the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: Operators registered about three quarters of existing service levels to run without subsidy after deregulation on 26 October, although there are variations from one part of the country to another. I am glad that local authorities have been able broadly to continue the rest of the services, at greatly reduced subsidy.

M25

19. Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to relieve congestion on the M25; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: Congestion has occurred mainly at peak times on the south-west section of M25. Following a study by Brian Colquhoun and Partners in the spring, we are already changing some of the road markings and signs to help traffic flow more smoothly at junctions. As I announced on 29 October, we have appointed L. G. Mouchel and Partners to develop a plan for carrying out the construction of a fourth lane between junctions 11 and 13, together with improvements to slip roads and strengthening of the hard shoulder. These were also recommended by Colquhouns.

BR (Service Improvement)

20. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail management concerning service improvement.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend and I frequently discuss with Sir Robert Reid improvements to the service offered to BR's customers. The objectives that we have now set the board for the next three years emphasise the importance of improving its quality of service.

Docklands Light Railway

21. Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to reach conclusions concerning the funding of the eastern extension of docklands light railway.

Mr. Moore: I have not yet received any formal proposals for an eastern extension of the docklands light railway.

Motorway Construction

22. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on new motorway construction in each of the past three years at constant prices.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The amount spent on new motorway construction in England at constant 1985-86 prices was £263 million in 1983-84, £281 million in 1984-85 and £254 million in 1985-86.

Channel Tunnel

23. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about the Channel tunnel project.

Mr. David Mitchell: Over the last three months, my Department has received about 70 representations from members of the public about the Channel tunnel project.

British Rail (Subsidies)

25. Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he is making with the reduction of public subsidies to British Rail.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport announced on 10 October that he had been able to settle this year's public service obligation grant to the railway at £712·3 million. This was comfortably within the cash ceiling on PSO grant for this year of £736 million, which represents the target which my predecessor set in 1983. I pay tribute to Sir Robert Reid, his board and the staff of the railway for the considerable achievement of reducing the railway's call on the taxpayer by over 25 per cent. in this period.

On 21 October, my right hon. Friend announced updated objectives for the railway including a new grant target. He confirmed that Inter-City, which is achieving a remarkable financial turnround in financial performance, will not be eligible for any PSO grant from 1 April 1988, and asked Sir Robert Reid to reduce the Network SouthEast and provincial sector's requirement for taxpayers' support to £555 million (in 1986-87 prices) by 1989-90, while securing improvements in the quality of service provided.

Bus Services

26. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he now expects to bus services following implementation of the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is already clear that the overall level of bus services will be broadly maintained, at a lower cost to the rate and taxpayer. New forms of operation, including minibuses and taxibuses, are being introduced to meet the needs of travellers more closely.

Road Safety

27. Sir Fergus Montgomery asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the relative performance of the United Kingdom in road safety compared with that of other European countries.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My assessment is based on the rate of road deaths per 100,000 population. In the latest available statistics, the rate for the United Kingdom—10·2 in 1984—is the lowest of any member state of the European Community. Rates in Norway and Sweden are lower still at 9·8 and 9·6 respectively. With over 300,000 killed or injured on our roads, the figures are still too high. There remains considerable scope for further improvement, particularly to reduce casualties among vulnerable road users on urban and residential streets.

Rural Bus Services

28. Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress in the provision of rural bus services.

46. Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect of the Transport Act 1985 upon the extent and operation of rural bus services.

Mr. David Mitchell: It appears that rural bus services have been broadly maintained at their previous levels and that there have been substantial savings in local authority subsidy. The Government's transitional rural grant, worth up to £20 million for Great Britain in the present financial year, and the rural transport development fund, worth £1 million in England this year, with additional amounts available for Scotland and Wales, have contributed to this good result, and to a number of innovative rural services.

Railways (Investment)

29. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport what trend there has been in the last four years in investment in the United Kingdom's railways.

Mr. David Mitchell: Railway investment in Great Britain has increased by 37 per cent. in real terms over the four years from 1982 to 1985-86. In 1985-86 prices the figures are:

	£ million
1982	278
1983	281
1984-85	[1]321
1985-86	382

Search and Rescue (North-West Scotland)

31. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will report on progress towards establishing a search and rescue helicopter facility in north-west Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: In April of this year my Department established a working group under the aegis of the United Kingdom search and rescue committee to review rescue helicopter coverage of the United Kingdom search and rescue region, which includes north-west Scotland.

The group has considered written evidence and has held coastal meetings at Inverness and Lee-on-Solent to which interested parties were invited.

A report is presently being prepared to put before the United Kingdom search and rescue committee in December. I cannot anticipate its contents.

West Yorkshire (Buses)

33. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of the bus services of West Yorkshire are being financed through subsidy under the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: The West Yorkshire passenger transport executive's latest transport plan estimates that some 30 per cent. of vehicle miles on local bus services will, under the Transport Act 1985, be financed through subsidy after deregulation on 26 October. I understand that overall service levels are estimated to be substantially the same after 26 October as before.

BR (Investments)

34. Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the number and value of major investments approved for British Rail since June 1983.

Mr. David Mitchell: Since June 1983, we have approved 19 major investments, with a total value of some £940 million at today's prices. In addition, we have given approval in principle to Channel tunnel investment, and the Railways Board has itself also approved many smaller schemes.

Bus Services (Union Representations)

35. Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the trade unions covering passenger transport about the affects of the Transport Act 1985 on bus services.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have received a number of representations. Among the points I have made in reply has been that local bus services were in long-run decline before the implementation of the Transport Act 1985, and that in the past ten years employment in the bus and coach industry as a whole has fallen by some 22 per cent. In the National Bus Company alone, over 20,000 odd jobs have been lost in that period. The Transport Act gives the bus industry new opportunities to break out of its spiral of decline and there is every reason to believe that in most of the country it will succeed in doing so.

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he is now in a position to announce plans to light further stretches of the United Kingdom's motorways; and whether he has identified any particular stretches for early lighting up.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The current programme for additional motorway lighting in England is listed below:

Motorway	Location	Length (miles)	Installation year
M25	Junction 6	approx 1·5	1987-88
M25	Junction 11	approx 1·5	After 1986-87
M5	Catshill to Lydiate Ash	1·7	1986-87
M6	East of Preston	6·5	1987-88
M62	West of Eccles Interchange	0·3	1986-87
M66	Middleton to M62 Simister Interchange	1·0	After 1989

Other motorways are the responsibility of the Secretaries of State for Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland as appropriate.

Ilminister Bypass

38. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will announce the date for the start of the Ilminister bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Tenders for this scheme were invited in August, and due to be returned at the end of October. We will award the contract very shortly. We expect the successful contractor to start work as soon as possible.

Bypasses

39. Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied with the progress of the programme of road bypasses around towns and villages.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. The Government's commitment to removing through traffic from towns and villages has resulted in the completion of 61 trunk road bypasses and relief roads since 1979. A further 157 such schemes are in the current programme.

The construction and improvement of local roads is the responsibility of the local highway authorities. The Government's policy is to permit local authorities the maximum freedom in planning their road programmes. Although the Government use transport supplementary grant to encourage local authorities to improve roads that complement the trunk road network, there is no single programme of bypasses on local roads. The information that we have is that local authorities will have completed about 130 bypasses and relief roads in the three years to March 1987, with a further 200 or so under construction or due to start during 1987-88.

Domestic Air Routes

40. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what evidence he has about the effects on consumers on domestic air routes of liberalisation of the airline industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: There is clear evidence that the introduction of competition on domestic routes has benefited consumers through improved levels of service and a wider range of fares. Furthermore, traffic on the Edinburgh and Glasgow trunk routes from London, for example, has grown faster since the introduction of competing services at Heathrow than might have been expected by comparison with growth on other major domestic routes.

BR (Procurement Programme)

41. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he next intends to meet the chairman of British Rail to discuss British Rail's procurement programme.

Mr. David Mitchell: The position has not changed since my reply to the hon. Member on 24 February 1986 at column 668.

Disabled People

42. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of British Rail on travelling conditions on trains for disabled people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: My officials have regular discussions with British Rail about the Transport needs of disabled people. We are also staging a major international conference on 1 and 2 December to review and discuss the transport needs of disabled people. European transport operators, including British Rail, will be taking part.

Bus Services (Lancashire)

43. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus services have been cut in Lancashire; and what is the increased cost arising from implementation of the Transport Act.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand that the overall level of bus services in Lancashire after 26 October has been maintained at current levels and that, far from increases, the costs of subsidy to the county council has been reduced from over £8 million to under £3 million in a full year.

National Bus Company (Privatisation)

44. Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will report progress on the privatisation of the various subsidiaries of the National Bus Company.

Mr. David Mitchell: Four subsidiaries, National Holidays Ltd., Devon General Ltd., Badgerline Ltd. and the Southern Vectis Omnibus Company Ltd. have been sold, the last three to their own managements. I look forward to approving further disposals of NBC subsidiaries in the near future.

London Underground (Crime)

45. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussion he has had with London Regional Transport in respect of combating crime on the London underground.

Mr. David Mitchell: As the hon. Member will know, a study to investigate crime on the London underground, including officials from my Department and London Regional Transport, was launched at the Prime Minister's seminar on crime prevention in January of this year. Its report has now been completed and is to be published next month. As a result of this work we are making available to London Regional Transport £15 million over the next three years to invest in measures which the report identifies. LRT is now preparing a detailed programme of implementation which I shall be discussing with the chairman.

Landing Rights (Heathrow)

47. Sir Peter Emery asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he will consider applications from airlines, not at the moment allowed to use London, Heathrow, to be allowed to have landing rights at London, Heathrow; what was the date when an airline was last granted this right; and if he will consider discussing this matter when he next speaks with the chairman of the British Airports Authority.

Mr. Michael Spicer: While foreign airlines require an operating permit from my right hon. Friend to operate air transport services at British airports, services by British airlines are subject to licensing by the Civil Aviation Authority.

Rights to use Heathrow airport are also subject to air traffic distribution rules. Rules restricting access to Heathrow were first instituted in 1977 in order to prevent demand from swamping the capacity available at the airport. In June 1985 paragraphs 11.3 and 11.12 of the White Paper "Airports Policy" (Cmnd. 9542) described the then rules and amended them slightly. The White Paper also announced the Government's intention to invite the Civil Aviation Authority to review the rules for traffic distribution between the London airports. The authority's review was completed in May 1986. It endorsed the existing rules and recommended further restrictions. On 21 July I announced the Government's intention to make formal traffic distribution rules under S31 of the Airports Act 1986. These rules were made on 24 September. Copies were placed in the Library. They include restrictions on new airlines operating international scheduled services, and on charter flights, at Heathrow and further regulate access for new domestic scheduled operations and other categories of service. My right hon. Friend has no present plans to change the recently made rules.

I and my right hon. Friend meet the chairman of BAA plc. from time to time to discuss a variety of matters of mutual interest, including airline operations at Heathrow.

M27 (Junction 5)

48. Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve the lighting at junction 5 of the M27 motorway in the borough of Eastleigh.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A lighting scheme has been designed. The Civil Aviation Authority and other interested bodies have been asked to comment on it. The work will be put in hand when agreement is reached.

Sightseeing Buses, London

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he plans to take steps to reduce the number of sightseeing double-decker buses on the streets of London.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. The licensing of London local services, including excursions and tours, is a matter for the Metropolitan traffic commissioner within the provisions of the Transport Act 1985.

Helicopters (Safety)

Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the results of the Civil Aviation Authority study into the safety aspects of helicopter offshore diversions.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Aviation safety is the statutory responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority, not of my right hon. Friend. I understand that in the study that the CAA has carried out, it analysed much complex statistical material bearing upon safety of offshore diversion by helicopters but found that the data so far pointed to no firm conclusions. The CAA now hopes to start a new round of discussions with interested parts of the industry in the very near future.

M1 (Repairs)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many carriageway repair operations are being carried out on the M1 motorway between London and Wakefield (i) southbound and (ii) northbound; if he will identify the location, the mileage involved, the start of the contracs and the estimated termination of the repair works involved.

Mr. Moore: The information requested is as follows:

Site	Carriageway	Mileage	Start date	Programmed completion date
J1-5	Both carriageways	1·2	20 October 1986	14 November 1986
J8	Both carriageways	2·8	23 May 1986	3 November 1986
J14-15	southbound	1·5	19 August 1986	11 November 1986
J22-23	southbound	1·5	25 September 1986	30 November 1986
J24-25	southbound	0·3	24 September 1986	mid-November 1986
J31-33	northbound	5·3	mid-October 1986	end January 1987

In addition, minor repairs take place from time to time.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions, and for what periods and reasons junction 8 (a) north and (b) south on the M1 at Hemel Hempstead has been closed to traffic during the current year; and when it is anticipated that both junctions will be open for traffic.

Mr. Moore: During the last 12 months, the northbound entry and southbound exit slip roads at junction 8 have been closed on two occasions, for about three weeks from 10 June and again since 13 September. The closures have been to permit reconstruction of the adjacent sections of both main carriageways, as part of a major contract covering a three mile length of the motorway. This is a lane rental contract and the contractor hopes to complete the work by 5 November, when the two slip roads should be re-opened.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions and for what periods and reasons there have been contraflow and other restrictions in the vicinity of junction 8 (a) northbound and (b) southbound on the M1 at Hemel Hempstead; and when it is anticipated that present roadworks will be completed.

Mr. Moore: On three occasions in the last six years: from October 1980 to November 1983 for the widening of M1 between junctions 5 and 8; from 2 to 16 July 1985 for the reconstruction of 200 yd of the northbound carriageway north of the widened section; and since 23 May 1986 for the reconstruction of a further three miles of both carriageways. The contractor hopes to complete the current work by 5 November.

Mr. Corbett asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will publish a list of programmed or planned roadworks in the vicinity of junction 8 of the M1 at Hemel Hempstead in the next 12 months, giving details of work involved, its cost and duration.

Mr. Moore: There are plans to overlay parts of both carriageways between junctions 9 and 10 in the financial year 1987-88. The precise extent, timing and cost have not yet been determined.

M1 (Closed-circuit Television)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many closed circuit televisions are installed on the M1 between London and Wakefield; for what purpose they are used; when they were installed; and when they will be removed.

Mr. Moore: Eight temporary closed circuit television cameras are in use at the contraflow scheme between junctions 14 and 15 of the M1 for the purpose of aiding traffic management and the deployment of emergency services. They were installed at the start of the contraflow scheme on 1 October and will be removed when the maintenance contract is completed in mid-November.

Permanent CCTV cameras are being installed between junctions 5 and 8 of the M1 by the end of the year to assist the police survey and manage the traffic flow in the vicinity of the M1-M25 interchange. Some of the masts for these are already in place but no cameras have as yet been installed.

M3 (Bar End to Christchurch)

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to complete his consideration of the inspector's report on the public inquiry into the completion of the M3 motorway from Bar End to Christchurch; and when he will make a consequential public announcement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Road Sweeping (Greenwich)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport what financial provision is to be made available to the London borough of Greenwich for the sweeping of the four main trunk roads in the borough; how this compares with the allocation made by the former Greater London council; and how frequently his Department now expects those roads to be swept compared with the past.

Mr. David Mitchell: Next year's allocations have not been made. Sweeping for highway safety and maintenance is governed by the Department's code of practice, while that for health and amenity purposes is a borough responsibility. Variations to the code have been drawn up to reflect the special problems of London roads. The detailed application within individual boroughs will continue to be discussed with them.

Drink-driving Campaign

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his drinking and driving campaign for Christmas and beyond.

Mr. David Mitchell: Drinking and driving is a year-round problem which we will continue to publicise at every opportunity. The theme for the Christmas phase of the rolling road safety publicity programme will be "Don't Drink and Drive". The advertising element will be launched at the end of November.

Eastern Counties (Road Routes)

Mr. Haselhurst asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has completed his study of east-west road routes through the eastern counties; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The report of the county councils who undertook the study for the Department was received at the end of last week. It will take a while to assess its findings. The results will be made known as quickly as possible.

Transport Act 1985 (West Yorkshire)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the current operation of the Transport Act 1985 in relation to west Yorkshire.

Mr. David Mitchell: I understand that bus services overall are at broadly the same level as before deregulation. Bus express services and minibuses are being introduced in a number of places, providing customers with better services.

Messrs. Arvoland, Cambridgeshire

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Transport what negotiations he has had with Messrs. Arvoland of Cambridgeshire, manufacturers of remould tyres, about the danger of manufacturing and selling such tyres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: My officials have been in discussion with Arvoland Limited since receiving a report from Birmingham consumer protection officers last May. These discussions have included tests on remould tyres manufactured by Arvoland Limited to assess whether they are safe. The results show that tyres manufactured before April 1986 may not comply with the performance requirements of the Motor Vehicles Tyres (Safety) Regulations 1984.

The manufacturer has now agreed to withdraw from sales as quickly as possible tyres produced before this date. In addition, further action under the code of practice on tyre recalls agreed between the Department and relevant trade associations is being considered urgently.

Air Transport Industry

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the contribution of the United Kingdom's air transport industry to the national economy.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Civil aviation directly provides about 80,000 jobs in the United Kingdom. In 1985, British airlines contributed some £650 million to the balance of payments. About £29 billion of our visible trade last year passed through United Kingdom airports.

Electric Milk Floats (Accidents)

Mr. Spencer asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were killed or injured over the last 12 months in accidents involving electric milk floats.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested is not available. Although the police collect information about every road accident in which someone is injured, they do not record "electric milk floats" as a separate vehicle type. Milk floats are classed with "light goods vehicles". This situation is likely to remain for the time being, as a balance has to be struck between the additional police resources required and the usefulness, for road safety policy, of the additional data collected.

DEFENCE

Cruise and Pershing

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the impact of the removal of cruise and Pershing II missiles from western Europe on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's strategy of flexible response.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 29 October at column 199.

Contracts (North-West)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the latest estimate of the number of people employed on defence contracts in the north-west during 1986.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Estimates of the total number of jobs in United Kingdom industry sustained by defence expenditure are derived from generalised statistical information. It is not possible to give a separate figure for the north-west of England.

Nuclear Weapons (Tests)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1 January he has met experts on the verification of nuclear weapon tests from (a) United Kingdom non-governmental centres of excellence, (b) the administration of the United States of America and (c) the administration of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: United Kingdom officials have met British non-governmental seismology experts on a number of occasions this year. Officials have also met foreign experts, including United States and Union of Soviet Socialist Republics representatives, at the two meetings of the ad hoc group of scientific experts of the conference on disarmament.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to study all the scientific evidence submitted to his Department from non-governmental sources on the subject of verifying a comprehensive nuclear test ban; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) on 30 June 1986 at column 438.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make it his policy to invite the Natural Resource Defence Council of the United States of America to submit a full report to Her Majesty's Government on the scientific purpose, the technology employed, and the technical results of its nuclear weapon explosion verification experiments completed recently at Semipalatinsk in Kazakhstan in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to invite Dr. Thomas Cochrane, senior scientist of the Natural Resource Defence Council of the United States of America to meet nuclear weapon test seismic verification experts in his Department;

(3) if he has any plans to invite Professor Mikhail Sodovsky, Director of the Soviet Institute of Geophysics, to engage in discussions with his Department on the subject of the technical problems associated with verifying nuclear weapon tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) on 30 June 1986 at column 438. The results of the study of the Semiplatinsk nuclear weapon test site by the Natural Resource Defence Council of the United States of America will, no doubt, be published.

The conference on disarmament in Geneva and its adhoc group of scientific experts are the appropriate fora to disccuss the issues surrounding the verification of nuclear weapons tests with the Soviet Union. We are aware of the work of Dr. Thomas Cochrane and Professor Mikhail Sodovsky through open literature.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence if Her Majesty's Government will make available additional financial support to non-governmental scientific bodies investigating or wishing to investigate the technical difficulties associated with verifying nuclear weapon tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Her Majesty's Government are content with the present level of funding into the technical investigation of the difficulties associated with the verification of nuclear weapon tests, and in the present circumstances see no need to increase it.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his counterparts in the administration of the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics about the three seismic array experiments conducted at Semipalatinsk in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics by the National Resource Defence Council of the United States of America.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Nuclear testing issues are discussed as a matter of course at regular meetings with the United States Administration. We also discuss such issues with the Soviet Union.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is Her Majesty's Government's policy with regard to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republic's proposal for the installation of seismic arrays around the shared United States/United Kingdom nuclear weapon test site at Nevada; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Her Majesty's Government are not aware of any official proposal by the USSR to install seismic arrays around the United State's nuclear weapon test site in Nevada; the question is therefore hypothetical.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer on 13 May, Official Report, column 542, what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the degree of effectiveness required of verification systems in any future comprehensive nuclear weapons test ban; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) on 2 July 1986 at column 585.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence which particular capability of the United Kingdom's seismometers designed to verify nuclear weapons tests specifically requires improvement to achieve the requisite level of efficiency in the signal to noise ratio for effective verification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no deficiencies specific to United Kingdom seismometers and, although improvements in the signal-to-noise ratio are always beneficial, the pivotal argument in verification is not detection but an unambiguous method of discriminating between nuclear explosions and all other seismic events.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are his latest plans to accelerate Her Majesty's Government's programme for solving the technical seismic difficulties associated with the verification of a comprehensive nuclear weapons test ban.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Research continues to improve diagnostic and experimental techniques to identify the nature of seismic disturbances. Her Majesty's Government wholeheartedly support the activities of the conference on disarmament, and the bodies it sponsors such as the ad-hoc group of scientific experts, which is the appropriate multilateral forum in which to discuss the verification issues related to nuclear testing.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1970 Her Majesty's Government have been invited to observe nuclear weapon tests conducted in the United States of America.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: United Kingdom observers have been present at the Nevada test site when nuclear tests relevant to the United Kingdom defence nuclear programme have been undertaken. In co-operation with the United States the United Kingdom has conducted 15 underground tests at the NTS from 1970 to date.

Nuclear Weapons (Design and Development)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the technology and expertise necessary for the satisfactory design and development of new nuclear warheads solely by the processes of computer simulation is available to Her Majesty's Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Computer simulation alone does not currently offer a method of satisfactorily designing and developing new nuclear warheads.

Nuclear Missiles

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the statement of the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Mr. Stanley) on 23 October, Official Report, column 1294, what discussions are to be held with the United Kingdom's North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies on the development of adequate procedures to verify possible reductions by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics of the number of SS20s based in Europe.

Mr. Stanley: The United States continues to develop its negotiating position on intermediate range nuclear forces with its allies, principally through regular meetings in NATO of the special consultative group. The group has considered all issues relevant to an arms control agreement on intermediate range nuclear forces, including verification. It last met on 16 October.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he last discussed the issue of collateral constraints on short and medium range nuclear systems with official representatives of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Mr. Stanley: The question of collateral constraints on shorter-range systems has always been an element in the INF negotiations which are conducted between the United States, in consultation with her NATO allies, and the Soviet Union. The issue was also raised in a meeting between my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and the Soviet ambassador on 23 July.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the effect on the security of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation of an arms control agreement on medium range nuclear missiles in Europe without reference to collateral restraints on short range nuclear missiles.

Mr. Stanley: NATO has always insisted that any agreement limiting long range intermediate nuclear force missiles should include appropriate constraints on Soviet shorter range nuclear force missiles to prevent circumvention of the provisions on longer range weapons. This remains the position.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the effects on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation's strategy of flexible response of the removal of ground-launched cruise missiles from (a) the United Kingdom or (b) Western Europe.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 29 October 1986 at column 199.

Holy Loch

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if Her Majesty's Government are currently investigating the possibility of adapting the docking facilities at Holy Lock, Scotland.

Mr. Stanley: No. The US Defence Secretary has made it clear that the US Navy has no plans to withdraw from the Holy Loch.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Hospitals (Alternative Services)

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what evaluation studies have been carried out of the effects of hospital rundown and build-up of alternative services on patients and staff.

Mrs. Currie: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my predecessor on 9 July at column 168. More recently, we know of Mersey regional health authority's desire to study the rundown process at Rainhill hospital, and have seen a proposal to study the rundown and closure of Saxondale hospital in Nottingham. A study is already under way of the effects of transfers of patients made in connection with the closure of Banstead hospital. We understand that Birmingham city council will be launching a major research project in January 1987 to consider the movement of mentally ill, mentally handicapped and physically handicapped people into community care.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the results of the investigation into the provision of clearer and firmer control guidance on planning and monitoring local mental health services will be published.

Mrs. Currie: As noted in the Government Response* to the report of the Social Services Committee on community care (second report, 1984-85 Session), the Department is exploring the need for such guidance, including revision of the policy papers which were appended to the Government response. Any fresh guidance will be published in the normal way. Reports of the visits of the national development team for mentally handicapped people and of the health advisory service to individual areas are published, as are periodic general reports by both bodies.

* Government response to the report of the Social Services Committee on community care (second report, 1984-85

Local Office Staffs

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of staff employed in his Department's local offices in July 1979 and July 1986 in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow, Central.

Mr. Lyell: The city of Glasgow is currently served by 15 of the Department's local offices whose total administrative area is not conterminous with the city boundaries. The constituency of Glasgow, Central is currently served by nine of the Department's local offices whose total administrative area is not conterminous with the constituency boundaries.

The number of staff in post on 1 July for the requested years is as follows:—

	1979	1986
Glasgow	1,900	1,954
Glasgow Central	1,151	1,177

Benefit Claims

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of benefit claims in action, live load, in August 1979 and August 1986 in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow, Central.

Mr. Lyell: Glasgow is covered by 14 of the Department's local offices. Glasgow (Central) is covered by eight of those offices but the boundaries are not conterminous with those of the constituency. The table shows the number of supplementary benefit claims in action—live load—in August 1979 and August 1986 in the offices serving (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow Central.

	August 1979	August 1986
Glasgow	88,560	151,373
Glasgow Central	54,839	97,127

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number of benefit claims awaiting processing, backlog in August 1979 and August 1986 in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow Central.

Mr. Lyell: Figures for the number of claims awaiting action in local offices are not available for the period before 1983. The numbers of claims for supplementary benefit awaiting action on 30 August 1983 and 26 August 1986 were as follows:

	30 August 1983	26 August 1986
Glasgow	1,879	4,069
Glasgow, (Central)	1,124	2,121

Single Payments

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total amount of moneys paid out in single payments in 1979 and 1985 by his Department's offices in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow Central.

Mr. Lyell: Glasgow is covered by 14 of the Department's local offices. Glasgow Central is covered by eight of those offices but their boundaries are not conterminous with those of the constituency. The information requested is shown for years ending early in April. However, the figures are not directly comparable; single payments replaced exceptional needs payments in November 1980.

	1979-80 £	1985-86* £
Glasgow	3,415,812	20,543,269
Glasgow Central*	2,048,660	14,936,051

* 1985-86 figures are provisional

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. McTaggart asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow Central are currently in receipt of supplementary benefit; and how many are pensioners, heads of one-parent families or unemployed.

Mr. Lyell: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The numbers of people receiving supplementary benefit from the Department's offices serving (a) Glasgow and (b) Glasgow, Central on 13 August 1986 — the latest available figures — were as follows:

	Glasgow	Glasgow Central
Unemployed	67,568	43,161
Over pension age	38,735	26,271
Others (including one parent families)	45,070	27,695
Total	151,373	97,127

AIDS

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the current number of acquired immune deficiency syndrome sufferers in the United Kingdom; and at what rate this is increasing;

(2) what is the estimated total annual cost to public funds of treating acquired immune deficiency syndrome sufferers in the United Kingdom; and what is the total amount being spent on research into the disease.

Mr. Newton: At the end of September 1986, 512 cases of AIDS in the United Kingdom had been reported to the communicable disease surveillance centre of whom 250 had died. The number of cases has been doubling approximately every 10 months. The Government-funded Medical Research Council is responsible for co-ordinating AIDS research in the United Kingdom. I understand that 15 special project grants have been awarded at a cost of £1·5 million.

I regret that information on the total annual cost to public funds of treating AIDS patients is not available. However, there is some information available on the cost of treating individual AIDS patients and I refer my hon. Friend to my predecessor's reply to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 17 July at column 612.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any persons have contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome as the result of treating an acquired immune deficiency syndrome patient.

Mr. Newton: No health care worker is known to have contracted AIDS in the United Kingdom as a result of treating an AIDS patient. One nurse has developed antibodies to the AIDS virus following an accident with a contaminated needle.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is aware of any babies born in the United Kingdom who are (i) acquired immune deficiency syndrome carriers and (ii) suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Mr. Newton: By the end of September, two cases of babies with AIDS in the United Kingdom had been reported to the communicable disease surveillance centre. There have also been reports of babies who may be infected with the AIDS virus. These cases are unconfirmed and are being investigated.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any persons have received transfused blood contaminated with the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus.

Mr. Newton: Since October 1985 the national blood transfusion service has screened all blood donations for antibodies to the AIDS virus. No cases of AIDS virus transmission have been reported in patients given blood since that date. Before screening could be made available to the service, a small number of patients received blood infected with the virus. Two of these have since developed AIDS.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the information available to him on the number of people being treated for acquired immune deficiency syndrome per 100,000 of the population in each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country for the past five years.

Mr. Newton: Information in the form requested is not available but the following figures show cumulative totals of cases reported to the World Health Organisation, together with an approximate rate per 100,000 population.

Pensioners

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of people in receipt of a pension in respect of age in (a) 1979 and (b) 1986.

Mr. Lyell: The only state pension payable solely in respect of age is the non-contributory retirement pension for people aged over 80. Entitlement to state retirement pension is subject to contribution and retirement conditions in addition to the attainment of minimum pension age. Supplementary pension is payable from minimum pension age, provided the individual concerned is not in full-time work and income is below statutory requirements. The numbers of people in receipt of retirement and supplementary pensions on the dates for which information is available and which are the most relevant for the years specified are as follows:

Retirement Pension[1]
November 1978: 8,775,480
March 1986[2]: 9,777,880

Supplementary Pension only
December 1978: 107,000
December 1985[2]: 100,000

[1] Includes non-contributory pensions for people over 80, pensions paid to people overseas and those who receive graduated pension only.
[2] Latest dates for which information is available.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 1985, to the hon. Member for Corby, (Mr. Powell), Official Report, column 162, how many responses he has received from hon. and right hon. Members to his invitation to recommend individuals for membership of regional health authorities.

Mrs. Currie: Five.

Hip Operations

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action his Department is taking to reduce waiting list times for hip operations.

Mr. Newton: The chairmen of regional health authorities were asked to report by the end of October on the nature, extent and cause of delays in in-patient and out-patient treatment in every district. These reports will be studied urgently with a view to undertaking a sustained programme of action to reduce waiting lists and times. Health authorities have also been asked to increase the number of hip operations from 38,000 in 1984 to approaching 50,000 in 1990.

NHS (Private Contractors)

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many private contractors have had to withdraw from catering, cleaning and laundry commitments in the National Health Service.

Mrs. Currie: To date the Department has been notified of 12 contracts awarded to private contractors which have been terminated, or are due to be terminated, before the end of the contract period.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many private companies engaged in National Health Service contracts have had penalties imposed upon them for failing to meet their contracts.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that the information requested is not collected centrally.

Local Office (Camberwell)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what increase in staff resources he will allocate to the supplementary benefit office at 6 Camberwell New Road, SE5; and when the office will re-open.

Mr. Lyell: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Stevens) on 7 March at column 322, in which he announced that over 5,000 staff have been allocated to local offices this year in addition to the number justified by normal staffing arrangements. The supplementary benefit office at 6 Camberwell New Road received an additional 10 staff as its share of the 5,000 staff. A full review of local office complements is in progress, the results of which will be taken into account in determining staff resources for all local offices after April 1987. Until then, there are no proposals to provide a further increase in staffing levels at this office.

Plans are being prepared to repair serious damage to the counter area, caused by members of the public. The office will open again when the repairs are completed and the facilities are safe for both staff and public.

Surgery Waiting Times (Thames Regions)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average delay for elective non-urgent surgery in each of the Thames health regions.

Mr. Newton: I regret that I cannot give my hon. Friend information in precisely the form he seeks. The estimated median interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission for surgical operation is given in the table for the latest year for which information is available centrally.

National Health Service hospitals, non-psychiatric and non-maternity departments, 1984

Regional Health Authority	Estimated median waiting time (in weeks) of surgical waiting list cases
North West Thames	6
North East Thames	7
South East Thames	6
South West Thames	8

Under 25-Year-Olds

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the cost to the Government of keeping a single under 25-year-old on social security for one calendar year.

Mr. Lyell: If a single under 25-year-old is unemployed the benefit expenditure for a year at current rates is as follows. If he is entitled to unemployment benefit, he receives £1,601·60 a year. If not, he may receive supplementary benefit either as a householder, at a cost of £1,549·60 or as a non-householder at a cost of £1,240·20 per year, though the supplementary benefit costs would be lower if the claimant had other resources. Householders will normally also be entitled to housing benefit at a rate dependent upon their individual circumstances.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average number of applications for invlaid care allowance (a) received by and (b) completed by his Department in each month, using the last year for which figures are available as a base.

Mr. Major: The table sets out the actual number of invlaid care allowance claims recieved from men and single women and, separately, from married women and the number of cases cleared in each month from October 1985 to September 1986. Because of the increase in claims from June 1986, a monthly average has not been calculated.

Month	Men and single women		Married women
	Claims received	Claims cleared	Claims received	Claims cleared[1]
1985

August	1,561	1,092	7,904	347
September	6,230	2,029	33,676	3,604

[1] The legislation extending ICA to married women received Royal Assent at end of July 1986. No awards could be adjudicated prior to Royal Assent.
[2] Includes cases disallowed in earlier months because conditions other than marital status were not satisfied.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give a breakdown of the number of applications for invalid care allowance currently outstanding, showing the totals by numbers of months outstanding and giving an overall summary total.

Mr. Major: At 24 October 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 66,500 claims from married women and 9,000 from men and single women outstanding. I regret that information is not collected in a form to provide the breakdown requested.

Pensions

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the level of the over 80s addition to the retirement pension and supplementary pension at April 1987 had it been increased in line with changes to the retail price index since 1971.

Mr. Lyell: The 25 percentage addition introduced in September 1971 would rise to £1.20 in April 1987 if it were increased at the next uprating in line with increases in prices up to September 1986.

Earnings Limit

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the level of the limit on earnings for retirement pensioners at April 1987 had it been increased in line with changes to the retail price index between May 1985 and September 1986.

Mr. Lyell: If the retirement pensioners' earnings limit were increased in April 1987 in line with the movement of the retail price index between May 1985 and September 1986, it would increase from £75 to £77 (rounded to the nearest whole pound).

Family Income Supplement

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the most recent estimate of the proportion of recipients of family income supplement who are liable to income tax.

Mr. Major: At April 1986, the latest date for which information is available, the proportion of family income supplement recipients whose declared income, at the time their claim was made, exceeded the level of income above which income tax is payable was 70 per cent.

Benefit Claimants

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish information showing the number of claimants who have had their benefit (a) reduced or (b) withdrawn in connection with the restart scheme, the average duration of benefit withdrawal or reduction and the average loss and the numbers resulting from (i) failure to attend an interview, (ii) lack of interest in restart options and (iii) other reasons.

Mr. Major: Up to 9 October 1986, the latest date for which figures are available for the national restart scheme and by which time 522,668 people had been invited to interview, 10,842 decisions to disallow benefit or credits had been made. Of these, 9,757 were as a result of a failure to attend an interview without good cause 1,029 were on the grounds of non-availability for work and 56 resulted from a refusal of suitable employment. No information is available on the duration of benefit withdrawal or the average loss of benefit but where disallowance is the result of failure to attend for interview benefit is reinstated as soon as the person does attend or makes acceptable arrangements to be interviewed.

Only the disqualifications resulting from a refusal of suitable employment would lead to a reduction in benefit by the imposition of a voluntary unemployment deduction, under regulation 8 of the Supplementary Benefit (Requirement) Regulations 1983. No information on this small number of cases is available. In the other circumstances benefit is withdrawn, though some claimants may then become entitled to payments under the Supplementary Benefit (Urgent Cases) Regulations. No information is available about payments made in these cases under these urgency provisions.

Leaflets

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many copies of (a) P11 "NHS Prescriptions", (b) D11 "NHS Dental Treatment", (c) G11 "NHS vouchers for glasses (NHS glasses up to 1985)", (d) MV11 "Milk and Vitamins (for pregnant women)", and (e) H11"Help with Fares to Hospital", were produced for distribution in (i) England, (ii) Wales and (iii) Scotland, for each of the financial years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Nicholas Lyell: The number of leaflets produced and distributed in each of the financial years 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87 is shown in the table.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (a) how many copies of the leaflet "The Health Service Today" were printed, (b) what was the cost, (c) whom they were distributed to, and (d) what was the cost of distribution to each of the categories mentioned in answer to (c).

Mrs. Currie: Six hundred thousand copies of the leaflet "The Health Service Today" were printed at a cost of £10,900. Copies were sent to all Members of Parliament representing English constituencies, and to the press. The main distribution is through regional health authorities and family practitioner committees. The cost of distribution was £17,084.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, why leaflets D11 (NHS dental treatment), G11, (NHS vouchers for glasses), MV11 (milk and vitamins for pregnant women) and H11 (Help with fares to hospital) were withdrawn from the Post Office in July.

Mr. Lyell: Leaflet H11 has never been distributed through post offices. Leaflets D11, G11 and MV11 have not been displayed in post offices since July 1985.

Information about all the benefits referred to in the question is included in a single leaflet FB2 "Which benefit?", a brief guide to all social security benefits, which has recently been added to the displays of DHSS leaflets and posters in post offices.

The leaflets referred to in the question are distributed widely through local social security offices, DHSS leaflets unit and through many advice centres and libraries. In addition, leaflet D11 (NHS dental treatment) is distributed through dentists' surgeries, leaflet G11 (NHS vouchers for glasses) is distributed through opticians, leaflet MV11 (milk and vitamins) is distributed through clinics and H11 (fares to hospitals) is distributed through hospitals. It is both more helpful and more cost-effective to distribute these leaflets in this way than to do so through post offices.

Milk Tokens

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will extend the use of milk tokens to the purchase of soya milk; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Where a clinical need exists, certain approved soya-based milks are available free on prescription to mothers and children who qualify for this benefit. Generally, however, I am advised that cows' milk is nutritionally better than soya milk as a source of energy, protein, calcium and other minerals, and certain vitamins essential for the growth of a healthy child. No change in the present welfare milk arrangements is therefore envisaged.

In-patients (Cross-infections)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the public health laboratory service estimate of the rate of cross-infections amongst in-patients in each year from 1979.

Mrs. Currie: Information on cross-infections is not available on an annual basis. The 1981 public health laboratory service prevalence study of hospital acquired infection indicated that some 19·1 per cent. of patients surveyed in hospital had infections. About half these infections had been acquired before entry to hospital. There is no reason to suppose there has been a major change since 1981.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the table showing total growth on the National Health Service expenditure given in his answer of 14 May 1985, Official Report, columns 119-20, so as to provide information for 1985-86.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many supplementary benefit claimants were registered at the Woolwich office of his Department at the most recent convenient date compared to the numbers at a similar point in each of the preceding eight years.

Mr. Lyell: The total number of people receiving supplementary benefit from the Department's local office at Woolwich on 13 August—the latest figures available—and on comparable dates in each of the preceding eight years was:

	Number
1986	18,982
1985	18,380
1984	17,516
1983	16,212
1982	14,895
1981	12,585
1980	11,016
1979	10,600
1978	11,101

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many supplementary benefit payments were made by the Woolwich office of his Department to travellers or others with no fixed address during 1985; what was the total sum involved; and how these figures compare to those for the preceding seven years.

Mr. Lyell: The Department's local offices do not keep separate statistics on the number of supplementary benefit payments made to travellers or others with no fixed address.

The information is therefore not readily available and could be obtained only by a special exercise which would be disproportionately costly.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total sum paid out in single payments by his Department's Woolwich office in 1979 and 1985; and what was the total number of claimants in each case.

Mr. Lyell: During the year ending on 8 April 1986, the Department's Woolwich office made 16,827 single payments amounting to £1,462,009. These figures are provisional and some claimants may have received more than one payment. Comparable information for 1979 is not available.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants at his Department's Woolwich office are currently awaiting an appeal to a supplementary benefits tribunal compared to the figures of (a) two and (b) five years previously.

Mr. Lyell: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) on 23 October at column 981.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current waiting time for a supplementary benefit tribunal hearing in the Greater London area compared with that of (a) two and (b) five years previously.

Mr. Lyell: National administrative statistics of social security appeals are not disaggregated for localities smaller than a social security region. The social security regions which include London were restructured in July 1982 when the three former regions were reduced to two and again less radically in April 1983. The boundaries of these regions are shown in appendix 4 of "Social Security Statistics 1983". As a consequence, the estimates for 1981 below are not comparable with those for 1984 and 1985.

Subject to these caveats, the average number of weeks from lodgement of an appeal to a hearing for all supplementary benefit appeals in the London regions was as follows:

Social Security Region	Quarter Ending December 1981 Number of weeks	Quarter ending December 1984 Number of weeks	Quarter ending December 1985 Number of weeks
London North	6·1	14·0	15·2
London South	7·3	14·0	18·9
London West	6·8

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many severe weather payments have been made during 1986 to applicants at his Department's Woolwich office; and what was the total sum paid.

Mr. Lyell: Local offices have been asked to make a return so that the number of payments and amounts paid can be calculated. Not all these returns have yet been received, but it is known that the Woolwich office made 279 payments, totalling £10,081.

Pharmacists

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received from the pharmaceutical profession concerning their legal protection in the dispensing of forged prescriptions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: We have had one representation from the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee and one letter from an individual.

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what measures were taken by his Department to advise retail outlets other than pharmacies regarding the withdrawal of junior aspirin.

Mrs. Currie: The Department discussed with the pharmaceutical industry a number of measures to give publicity to the recommendation of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 9 June 1986, that aspirin should not be given to children under 12 except on medical advice. Manufacturers immediately voluntarily stopped the supply of all aspirin-containing products for children and arranged to inform retail outlets of their action. I am advised that the manufacturers subsequently placed advertisements in trade journals and in ethnic minority newspapers, in addition to the extensive general publicity; some manufacturers wrote individually to retail outlets.

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects the new arrangements for National Health Service contracts for pharmacists to come into effect.

Mr. Newton: The introduction of the new arrangements for National Health Service pharmacy contracts is dependent on the enactment of the National Health Service (Amendment) Bill. No decision has yet been taken on an implementation date for the new contract.

Great Ormond Street Hospital

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total cost of the rehabilitation works to the cardiac wing at Great Ormond street hospital for sick children, including fees and equipment.

Mrs. Currie: The total cost of the rehabilitation works to the cardiac wing at Great Ormond street hospital for sick children, including fees and equipment, is estimated to be £18,520,000. This sum does not include fees of council, solicitors and expert witnesses in connection with current litigation.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the cause of the delay in the estimated completion date of the rehabiliation works at Great Ormond street hospital.

Mrs. Currie: Delay to the estimated completion date of the rehabilitation work to the cardiac wing at Great Ormond street hospital has arisen from the unforeseeable degree of difficulty in carrying out a range of complex repair works. We anticipate completion by 28 February 1987.

Benefits

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to review existing procedures whereby interim financial assistance is not available to claimants in financial difficulties caused by administrative delay in processing benefits due to them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: The interim payment provisions have been reviewed and the scope for such payments is being extended under section 51(1) of the Social Security Act 1986.

Doctors

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy to encourage more younger doctors to seek appointments in National Health Service hospitals prior to entering general practice; and if, in addition to the experience they will gain in hospital service, he will introduce further incentives with a view to ensuring the availability of adequate medical staff.

Mr. Newton: The recent consultation document on hospital medical staffing, "Achieving a Balance", a copy of which is in the Library, contains a package of measures which, along with continuing improvement in standards of patient care, is intended to improve medical career prospects. Doctors wishing to become principals in general practice are required to complete three years of specified vocational training of which two are spent in hospital training posts. An independent review body determines the remuneration levels for all National Health Service doctors.

Abortions and Sterilisations

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has concerning the average percentage of the workload of gynaecological departments which is spent in National Health Service hospitals upon non-emergency gynaecological out-patient attendances for (a) the performing of abortions and (b) the performing of sterilisations; and what percentage of such non-emergency gynaecological out-patient work is spent dealing with the sequelae of such procedures.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has concerning the total amount spent each year by the National Health Service upon the performing of abortions and sterilisations; and what element of this figure is made up of any special fees paid to doctors for such operations.

Mrs. Currie: The accounts submitted by the health authorities to the Department do not show separately the amounts spent on abortions and sterilisations and I regret therefore that we are unable to provide the information requested.

Family Practitioners (Rewards)

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has plans to institute a system for rewarding the good family practitioner and penalising the bad; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The Government's "Primary Health Care — An Agenda for Discussion" contains proposals designed to reward those doctors providing the highest standards of care and to provide incentives to others. These and other proposals in the discussion document are currently the subject of wide consultation throughout the country with both professional and lay groups. When these consultations are completed at the end of this year and the evidence has been fully considered, we intend to formulate firm proposals.

Cervical Smears

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Secretary of State for Social Services by what target date he expects that the National Health Service should be able to provide a three-yearly cervical smear test cycle along the lines recommended by the British Medical Association.

Mrs. Currie: The recommended interval for cervical cancer screening is currently five years. This recommendation is under review and we will announce the outcome of that review in due course.

Social Security Act 1986

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, following the passing of the Social Security Act 1986, how many people have so far been affected or excluded from benefit as a result of (a) the ending of industrial disablement benefit for disablement below 14 per cent., (b) paying industrial disablement benefit of between 14 per cent. and 19 per cent. at the 20 per cent. rate, (c) the abolition of reduced rate unemployment and sickness benefit and maternity allowance for new claimants, (d) the extension of voluntary unemployment disqualification from six weeks to 13 weeks and (e) ending dependency additions in respect of dependants who are on strike.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information is not available. The effects of the changes to the industrial injuries scheme and the extension of voluntary unemployment disqualification will be monitored, but no figures are yet available.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received the statistics about private hospitals, nursing homes and clinics registered under the Nursing Home Act 1975 as at 31 December 1985 from regional and district health authorities; and whether he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Newton: Yes. I will arrange for a set of national, regional and district summaries to be placed in the Library as soon as validation of the data has been completed.

Training Programmes

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if attendance on or completion of a course relating to the Government's restart programme or the proposed six-month training programme for the long-term unemployed under 25 years will affect entitlement to supplementary benefit, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 23 October, c. 984]: Attendance on or completion of a restart course does not affect entitlement to supplementary benefit. The new six-month training course will be experimental and will be run on a pilot basis in nine areas. As participation during these pilots will be voluntary, benefit sanctions will not apply to persons who do not accept offers or who leave courses prematurely.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the information on bed numbers given in his answer of 1 July 1985, Official Report, column 49, so as to give data for 1985 and 1986 to date.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to the reply, 21 July 1986, c. 100]: The figures for closure of beds and for the provision of beds in new units for 1985 and 1986 are as follows. We do not hold figures centrally for the provision of new beds and services in non-National Health Service facilities or the numerous very small schemes which are responding to the "care in the community" initiative.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Tropical Development Research Institute

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of any changes made in plans for the concentration of units of the Tropical Development Research Institute at Chatham since he made the initial announcement.

Mr. Chris Patten: There have been no changes to the plan announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Raison), the then Minister for Overseas Development, on 5 September 1985 for the relocation of the Tropical Development and Research Institute and the Land Resources Development Centre to a single site at the Chatham maritime development area. Detailed planning is continuing and the move is expected to be completed during 1988.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teacher Numbers

44. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he intends to take to increase the numbers of teachers of physics, chemistry, mathematics and other sciences.

Mrs. Rumbold: The consultative document "Action on Teacher Supply in Mathematics, Physics and Technology" set out our proposals for those secondary subjects experiencing the most serious supply difficulties. Some of the measures discussed in the document are relevant to other science provision. We shall continue to monitor the demand for teachers of all subjects and to consider where further action might be necessary.

Literacy

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will rank in ascending order by his country the number of weekly hours of reading time for each of the age groups (i) 15 to 24, (ii) 25 to 34, (iii) 35 to 44, (iv) 45 to 54, (v) 55 to 64 and (vi) 65 years and over in those Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries for which he has information;

(2) if he will rank in ascending order by country the total number of weekly hours of reading time in those Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries for which he has information;

(3) what information his Department holds on the incidence of functional illiteracy by age group for the British population.

Mr. Walden: This information is not available centrally.

School Closures

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of schools closed for each year from 1979-80 to 1985-86 inclusive, and the percentage of these closures which involved rural schools.

Mr. Dunn: Information on school closures is kept by calendar year. Numbers of closures approved by the Secretary of State or determined by local education authorities since 1979 are shown in the table.

Year	Total school closures	Rural school closures	Rural school closures as a percentage of all closures

Academic Year

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if there are any plans to alter the current three-term academic year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The National Association of Head Teachers, the Association of County Councils and, very recently, the National Union of Teachers have all issued consultative documents on this subject. I understand that the NAHT will be discussing the matter shortly with representatives of examining and validating bodies. We shall be interested to see the outcome of the consultations.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received regarding the position in the talks on the pay of teachers in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received some 200 letters since the Coventry meeting in July. Nearly all have been critical of the Coventry heads of agreement. The most common criticism has been the reduced differentials for the present scale 4 and senior teachers. Other criticisms have included the long period of assimilation to the proposed new pay scale, and the reduced opportunities for promotion.

Single Sex Schools

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many single sex schools there are in England; if he will break down the numbers into local education authority areas, showing the number of schools (a) for boys and (b) for girls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The number of maintained single sex schools in England in January 1986 was 616. The breakdown by local education authority is as follows:

	Boys Schools	Girls Schools
Barking	1	1
Barnet	3	5
Bexley	3	3

A and O-level Passes

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science pursuant to the answer of 22 October to the hon. Member for Leicester, East Official Report, column 885, if he will now give comprehensive figures detailing the number of passes attained in A and O-levels for Leicester and the east midlands.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not collected centrally.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from the policy sub-committee of Manchester Education Committee concerning his proposal to establish city technology colleges; what reply he is sending; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has recently received a letter from Councillor Harris, Chair of the Policy Sub-Committee of the Manchester City Council Education Committee. He will be replying shortly, and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

TRANSPORT

Orange Badge Scheme

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the number of orange badges issued to people who are registered blind in (i) inner London, (ii) outer London, (iii) metropolitan districts, (iv) non-metropolitan counties in England, (v) Wales and (vi) Scotland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Information is not collected centrally in the form requested. In the light of details supplied by some local authorities it is estimated there are currently some 24,000 such badge holders throughout Britain.

Road Assessment Studies, London

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects to publish the consultants' reports on the four London road assessment studies.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Greenwich on 27 October at column 40.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to improve communications, other than by rail, from the north east to the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Our aim is to ensure that the network of motorways and trunk roads is adequate to meet current and future needs. These include the need to provide access to the Channel tunnel from all parts of the country. The current construction programme includes schemes to upgrade existing north-south routes and roads to the tunnel in Kent.

Marine Pilotage

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what safeguards he intends to introduce to ensure that commercial pressures on ports to reduce costs will not reduce standards within the marine pilotage service;

(2) if he has any plans to change the current arrangements for marine pilotage so as to improve safety of navigation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government intend to introduce proposals for legislation as soon as possible which will transfer responsibility for pilotage to the harbour authorities. The legislation will require authorities to provide the pilotage services which are necessary to secure safety of navigation, and there is no reason to believe that the authorities will act irresponsibly in meeting this requirement.

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now list those harbour authorities to which he intends to transfer pilotage responsibilities.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The terms of the new legislation will determine which harbour authorities will become responsible for pilotage. A list of the relevant authorities will be made available when the legislative proposals are published.

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list information available to him as to which harbour authorities have experience in running pilotage services.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Of the 45 pilotage authorities which have responsibility for pilotage, 29 are harbour authorities; those harbour authorities which are active in this capacity are as listed:

Aberdeen Harbour Board
Associated British Ports
Berwick Harbour Commissioners
Bristol Port Authority
Coleraine Harbour Commissioners
Dundee Port Authority
Fenland District Council
Fraserburgh Harbour Commissioners
Grampian Regional Council
Inverness Harbour Trust
Irvine Harbour Company
King's Lynn Conservancy Board
Lancaster Port Commissioners
Lerwick Harbour Trust
Littlehampton Harbour Board
Londonderry Port and Harbour Commissioners
Manchester Ship Canal Company
Mersey Docks and Harbour Company
Montrose Harbour Trust
Orkney Islands Council
Peterhead Harbour Trust
Shetland Islands Council
Wick Harbour Trust

In addition, local harbour authorities are invariably among the interests represented in the membership of other pilotage authorities or their pilotage committees. In a few cases, staff are shared by a pilotage authority and a harbour authority.

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of cost savings arising from economies in administration and operation as a result of the proposed integration of pilotage with other port services.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer to my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend's earlier question on 25 July at column 515.

Legislative Proposals (Savings)

Sir Julian Ridsdale asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to quantify estimated savings expected to be achieved from legislative proposals emanating from his Department.

Mr. Michael Spicer: It is already my right hon. Friend's policy to do so wherever possible.

EMPLOYMENT

Community Industry Scheme

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Paymaster General if he will consider the extension of the community industry scheme to allow participants to stay on the scheme for two years instead of one.

Mr. Lee: No.

Holidays

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Paymaster General if he will rank in ascending order for the most recent year for which figures are available the number of public holidays and days of annual leave entitlement per year per employee in each Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country for which he has information.

Mr. Lee: Different countries apply different conventions to the definition and measurement of holidays so their statistics are not wholly comparable. However, the table gives the latest information which is available ranked in ascending order of annual leave entitlement.

Number of public holidays and days of annual leave

Hours of Work

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Paymaster General what information his Department collects on the trends in average hours actually worked per week per employed person and activity sector for England and Wales.

Mr. Lee: An index of average weekly hours worked by operatives in manufacturing industries in Great Britain (but not in England and Wales separately) is published each month in table 1.12 of the labour market data section of Employment Gazette. This index is based on the average basic hours worked by operatives covered by national wage agreements, together with the hours of overtime worked and hours lost through short-time working.

Table 5.6 of the labour market data section of Employment Gazette gives information from the new earnings survey, which is conducted each April, on average weekly hours of full-time employees in Great Britain in manufacturing industries and all industries and services. Table 5.4 gives similar information for certain industries for full-time manual employees by industry in the United Kingdom for October.

Estimates of the average hours worked by persons in employment in all industries in England and Wales in the spring of each year can also be derived from the labour force survey.

Special Employment Measures

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General what estimates there are for expenditure on each special employment measure, including YTS, for each year from 1980 for each area manpower board in England, Wales and Scotland.

Mr. Lee: I regret that it is not possible to provide the information requested except at a disproportionate cost.

Self-employment

Mr. David Howell asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards self-employment, with specific reference to current Inland Revenue practice in relation to assessment for income tax and national insurance contributions.

Mr. Lee: The Government is committed to encouraging self-employment as an important source of enterprise and innovation, new business formation and jobs. I welcome the marked increase in the number of self-employed people, from just over 1·8 million in 1979 to more than 2·7 million now. More than 179,000 self-employed people have benefited from our enterprise allowance scheme.

Paragraph 6.12 of the White paper "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers" (Cmnd. 9794) recorded progress being made by Inland Revenue and DHSS to improve tax and national insurance procedures for the self-employed. The Government remain committed to seeking further such improvements where these are possible.

Long-term Unemployed Persons

Mr. Holt asked the Paymaster General what plans there are to assist more easily and generously long-term unemployed men and women to relocate to take up employment.

Mr. Lee: Long-term unemployed people, like other jobseekers, may apply for assistance under the travel to interview scheme, which pays fares to jobseekers attending interviews with employers beyond daily travelling distance of their homes. Restart interviewers give long-term unemployed people advice about this scheme in appropriate cases. There are no plans at present to extend this scheme.

Mr. Holt asked the Paymaster General how many men and women over 50 years of age who had been long-term unemployed are now in full-time employment in the north-east region.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not available.

Disabled People

Mr. McWilliam asked the Paymaster General if he will list the total number of exemption permits issued by the Manpower Services Commission in relation to the requirement of employers to employ a minimum of 3 per cent. registered disabled people in each of the last seven years for which figures are available.

Mr. Lee: Information is not collected centrally on the number of permits issued under the terms of the quota scheme. However, figures are available on the numbers of employers who were below quota on 1 June and to whom permits had been issued during the previous 12 months. Figures for the last seven years are set out in the table. The issue of a permit enables an employer who is not employing the 3 per cent. quota of registered disabled people lawfully to engage a specified number of workers who are not so registered. However, the permit does not exempt the employer from the duty under the provisions of the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act to employ the quota.

Number of employers issued with permits in the 12 months to 1 June

Year	Number
1980	22,001
1981	21,183
1982	19,796
1983	18,536
1984	18,769
1985	18,681
1986	18,840

Mr. McWilliam asked the Paymaster General if he will list those companies with 1,000 or more employees for which an exemption certificate in respect of employment of disabled people was issued during the last 12 months for which this information is available.

Mr. Lee: Information about the application of the quota scheme provisions of the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act to individual employers has been treated by successive Governments as confidential and is not disclosed without their agreement.

Minimum Wage Policy

Mr. Galley asked the Paymaster General what assessment he has made of the employment consequences of a minimum wage policy.

Mr. Lee: Using the earnings information from the 1985 new earnings survey, we estimate that a national minimum wage of £80 per week (the level implied in the TUC/Labour party document "Low Pay: Policies and Priorities") could result in job losses ranging between 60,000 and 600,000 over a period of time. This large range reflects uncertainty about the effect of a minimum wage on the structure of earnings, and the extent to which higher paid workers would be able to secure compensating wage increases to restore previous differentials.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General if he will indicate the nature of each change in the basis of the calculation of the total number of unemployed persons since 1979 and the effect, in terms of numbers, on the unemployed register consequent upon each change.

Mr. Lee: A full description of all the changes since 1979 which have so far affected the published unemployment figures was given on page 422 of the October 1986 edition of Employment Gazette, a copy of which is the Library.

Availability for Work Regulations

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General in which department, within the local office, the claim advisers administering the new availability for work regulations will be; and who will be their line managers.

Mr. Lee: Claimant advisers will operate from unemployment benefit offices and will replace unemployment review officers in the DHSS advising on benefits and re-employment opportunities. They will be managed separately by team managers who will report directly to their respective regional offices.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will indicate the nature and size of the current deficit in the balance of trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Alan Clark: In September, trade in manufactures showed a deficit of £0·6 billion.

Post Office

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the financial targets set for the Post Office for 1985-86 and 1986-87, respectively.

Mr. Pattie: As I announced on 24 July 1985, at columns 565-66, each of royal mails and counters was required to secure a 4·5 per cent. return on turnover, on the current cost accounting convention, before tax, but after interest for the financial year 1985-86.

As to 1986-87, I announced on 31 July this year that the postal business of the Post Office had been set an overall target of securing a return on turnover of 3·25 per cent. before interest and tax in each of the years 1986-87 to 1988-89. The full text of my announcement was as follows:

"Last year the Post Office moved towards the separation of the Royal Mail and Counters businesses, and earlier this year it announced its decision to divide Royal Mail into two separate businesses, Letters and Parcels. The process of establishing these three businesses and of separating their accounts will not be complete for about another two years. This limits the robustness of the available figures.

But after consulting the Post Office I have decided that the time is right for separate medium-term targets to be set for the three businesses for the three years 1986-87 to 1988-89. National Girobank is already targeted separately.

Last year the Government set the Royal Mail business the performance aim of reducing its real unit costs by 2·2 per cent. in 1985-86 compared with 1984-85, and the Counters business was targeted for a reduction of 1·5 per cent. compared with 1984-85. In the event, Counters achieved its target and Royal Mail bettered its target by 0·2 per cent. I congratulate the management and work force of the Post Office on their achievement.

Nevertheless, I am confident that those employed in the Post Office understand that in order to protect the future of the businesses, it is essential to retain existing customers and attract new work. Further improvements in efficiency remain the key to maintaining and improving the Post Office's competitiveness.

Accordingly I have set the Post Office the target of achieving a reduction of 5·5 per cent. in the real unit costs of the postal business at the end of 1988-89, compared with 1985-86, with at least a 1·5 per cent. reduction to be achieved by the end of 1986-87. I have agreed with the Post Office that the component businesses should be set individual targets to reduce real unit costs over the same period. These will be 6 per cent. for Letters; 5·4 per cent. for Parcels; and 3·7 per cent. for Counters.

The lengthy process of separating the accounts of the new businesses raises problems in attempting to set financial objectives. The review that was announced in July last year of the financial objective for Royal Mail and Counters concluded that the appropriate overall objective was a return on turnover of 3·25 per cent. before net interest and tax, on the current cost accounting basis, in each of the years 1986-87 to 1988-89.

Although the Post Office has proposed profit targets for each of the three businesses in each of those years there must be uncertainty about the reliability of the underlying assumptions until further progress has been made with the new information systems.

To support the overall target of 3·25 per cent. in 1986-87 I have agreed with the Post Office that the three businesses should secure returns in that year on the same basis as the overall target. These will be 3 per cent. for Letters; 6 per cent. for Parcels; and 1·3 per cent. for Counters.

It is my intention before the end of March next year to agree with the Post Office and announce target returns for the three businesses for 1987-88."

Post Office (Investment)

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will state the amount of Post Office investment approved for each year, individually since 1983, together with his estimate of the amount to be approved for 1986-87 and 1987-88; what the amount will be in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The annual public expenditure White Paper states the level of investment in fixed assets agreed for the succeeding financial year for individual nationalised industries. For the Post Office's postal business the figures for the years 1982-83 were as follows:

	£ million
1982-83	115·0
1983-84	130·0
1984-85	156·8
1985-86	134·0
1986-87	98·0

During 1985-86 the level of investment approved for that year was increased to £164 million. The investment approved for 1987-88 and estimates of expenditure on fixed assets in 1988-89 and 1989-90 will be published in the forthcoming public expenditure White Paper.

Productivity

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the comparative productivity of foreign-owned firms operating in the United Kingdom and British firms over the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The table compares the value added per employee in United Kingdom manufacturing industry by United Kingdom and foreign owned enterprises for 1981 and 1983. Data are available only for every second year, the most recent being 1983. The apparent significant difference between the productivity of United Kingdom and foreign firms may, at least in part, be explained by the disproportionate presence of foreign owned firms in high value added sectors of the economy.

Gross value added per employee by United Kingdom and foreign owned enterprises in the United Kingdom manufacturing industry

	1981 £	1983 £
United Kingdom owned enterprises	9,631	12,323
Foreign owned enterprises	12,355	16,626

Cigarette Sales

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the volume of cigarette sales in the United Kingdom in 1980-81, 1985-86 and in the first three months of the present financial year; and what proportion of the total volume of those sales was met by imported cigarettes in each of those periods.

Mr. Butcher: The information available on quantities of cigarettes released for consumption in United Kingdom as compiled by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise is as follows:

Quantities of cigarettes released for home consumption

	Total clearances Million	Proportion accounted for by imports Per cent.
1980-81	119,185	1·5
1985-86	96,304	11·0

Chemical Exports (Iraq)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list in the Official Report the chemicals which are on the restricted list for export to Iraq.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Lawnmowers (Noise)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice he is providing to retailers about the steps which they should take in relation to lawnmowers in stock at the time of implementation of the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986 applies to lawnmowers manufactured on or after 1 July 1987. Retailers existing stock at the time of implementation will therefore not be affected.

Retailers association along with other interested organisations are kept informed of the progress of the lawnmowers directive and the regulations through our normal general circulars.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if batch sampling of new lawnmowers will be permitted after the implementing of the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations.

Mr. Butcher: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement outlining the policy objectives which Her Majesty's Government are seeking to achieve by making the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986.

Mr. Butcher: The regulations arise from the requirement on the United Kingdom to implement EC directive 84/538/EEC. The directive removes those technical barriers to trade between member states which arise because member states have different national rules on noise levels which they apply to lawnmowers. Thus, the UK policy objective of the regulations is to gain the advantage for British lawnmower manufacturers of guaranteed access to markets in member states without having to comply with many different standards. It is also part of the general UK policy to complete the internal market by 1992. This policy was affirmed by heads of member states at the treaty conference in December 1985.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the cost to public funds in travel and accommodation of public servants during the negotiations in the EEC of the directive on lawnmower harmonisation of noise emission standards; and how many official and ministerial meetings took place in the course of negotiations.

Mr. Butcher: No such estimate can be made. The lawnmowers proposal was one of a package adopted in 1984 and was negotiated (over a number of years) together with others in a sometimes sporadic fashion. Meetings attended by United Kingdom officials usually covered more than just the lawnmowers proposal.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many testing centres he plans to authorise to conduct tests in accordance with the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; and what criteria he will apply in determining the location of such centres.

Mr. Butcher: Nine test laboratories have already been appointed to carry out tests. Any test organisation can apply to be appointed and one of the criteria for appointment is satisfying the national measurement accreditation service requirements. There are no criteria for determining the location of the laboratories.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps he is taking to control the level of charges levied for testing lawnmowers under the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what estimate he has made of the additional costs which will be required to be borne by the lawnmower manufacturing industry in consequence of the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 3 November 1986]: The additional cost to manufacturers will depend largely on the extent to which their lawnmowers already meet the specified noise levels.

The Lawnmower (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986 implements the European Communities article 100 directive, which was adopted in September 1984 and comes into force on 1 July 1987. The purpose of this directive is to harmonise member states' laws relating to the permissible sound power level of certain categories of lawnmower. Prior to being placed onto the market, lawnmowers will have to be tested and certified to show they conform to the requirements of the directive. Conforming products will have free access to the Community market. Obviously it is hoped that the advantages to be gained by the United Kingdom's Lawnmower industry from a more open Community market will outweigh the initial additional costs.

With regard to the control of charges for tests, my Department has agreed with the manufacturers and the appointed test laboratories to allow for market forces to dictate the charges. Manufacturers are therefore able to shop around and negotiate an acceptable price.

ENVIRONMENT

Sports Ministers (Conference)

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the fifth conference of European Ministers responsible for sport.

Mr. Tracey: The United Kingdom was represented by officials from the Department and the director general of the Sports Council. The agenda was divided into two themes: progress in European sports co-operation 1984-1986; and items of current political concern. A number of resolutions were adopted, all of which were acceptable to the United Kingdom.

In particular, the conference agreed on the need to extend the impact of the European anti-doping charter for sport adopted at the last conference in Malta in 1984. Doping remains one of the intractable problems facing sport today. Although the ultimate sanction lies with the national and international sports federations, Governments can and should help through concerted international action. To this end the conference welcomed the positive contribution made by the Canadian Minister of Sport, and his offer to act as an intermediary to spread the Council of Europe's—and Canada's—work to other nations, including the United States of America and the Eastern block.

Another important agenda item was apartheid in sports. On the point of principle there was nothing between us: we all abhor apartheid and wish to see it ended in South Africa.

There were, however, differences — inspired by differences of constitution — in the way Governments viewed their locus in trying to prevent sporting contacts with South Africa. The resolution adopted is acceptable to the United Kingdom, and is compatible with Commonwealth and Her Majesty's Government's policy on sporting contacts with South Africa as enshrined in the "Gleneagles Agreement."

There was a useful discussion about the operation of the European convention on spectator violence and misbehaviour at sports events. Continuing political impetus was given to the work on violence associated with sport in general, and in particular to a study of the reasons behind violence with an aim to prevention.

The conference also adopted resolutions on ways to increase the impact of "Sport for All" policies with reference to participation by specific target groups. In particular, it endorsed the "European Charter for Sport for All: Disabled Persons"; and passed a resolution on "Sport for Prisoners and Young Delinquents". The conference agreed more generally the need to assess ways in which healthy participation for all might be promoted in a co-ordinated European programme through the study of injuries and their prevention.

Conference also supported resolutions on: international sports competitions, recognising that Governments share some concern for the wider implications of staging of major sports events; new partnerships in sport, conscious of the respective roles of Government, sport, commerce and media to the development of sport; sport and the environment, recognising the importance of reconciling sporting and environmental interests when and where these are in conflict; the 1988 Olympic Games, reaffirming support for the Olympic movement both now and in the future; and the future activities of the Council of Europe in the field of sport.

I shall place copies of these resolutions in the Library once the final texts have been issued by the conference secretariat.

Noise

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will arrange for his Department to collect and publish information on the percentage of the British population exposed to (a) road traffic noise and (b) aircraft noise.

Mr. Waldegrave: The "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics", published annually by my Department and available in the Library of the House, includes statistics relating to noise from road traffic and aircraft. While my Department's research programme includes studies aimed at identifying more precisely the nature and scale of noise nuisance from various sources, we have no plans to expand these statistics at present.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many changes have been made in the contents and method of calculating rate support grant for 1987-88.

Mr. Chope: The Secretary of State's proposals for the 1987-88 rate support grant settlement were set out in his consultation paper issued on 3 October, copies of which are in the Library. By comparison with the 1986-87 settlement, substantial increases are proposed in the provision for local authority expenditure, and in the aggregate amount available for grant. A number of changes in the method of distributing grant are also proposed.

Travellers Caravans

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the number of travellers caravans on (a) authorised and (b) unauthorised sites in (i) Greater London and (ii) the London borough of Greenwich as revealed by the July 1986 census.

Mr. Tracey: Returns were received from 31 out of the 32 London boroughs. The figures are:

	Caravans on authorised sites	Caravans on unauthorised sites
Greater London	598	413
London Borough of Greenwich	78	66

Mrs. B. Johnston

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth can expect a reply to his two letters of 1 May and 25 July with reference to Mrs. B. Johnston of Age Concern, Rugby.

Mr. Chope: My hon. Friend's letter of 1 May was received in the Department and was identified as a matter for which the Department of Health and Social Security has responsibility. The correspondence then appears to have gone astray in the process of arranging its transfer. The Department can find no record of the further letter of 25 July. I apologise unreservedly for any difficulty that may have been caused to my hon. Friend, and I shall write to him so that we can now deal speedily with the issues raised by him and his constituent.

Grant-related Expenditure

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the percentage change in grant-related expenditure for each local authority between 1986-87 and 1987-88, ranked from biggest increase to biggest decrease.

Mr. Ridley: The figures are as follows:

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the total and (b) the percentage year-on-year change in the grant-related expenditure of (i) the Inner London education authority and (ii) the Metropolitan police, in each year from 1981-82.

Mr. Ridley: The figures are as follows:

	Inner London education authority		Metropolitan police
	£ million	Percentage change on previous year per cent.	£ million	Percentage change on previous year per cent.
1981-82	468·477	—	273·606	—
1982-83	509·273	+8·7	327·191	+19·6
1983-84	516·489	+1·4	345·921	+5·7
1984-85	533·033	+3·2	366·547	+6·0
1985-86	556·388	+4·4	384·948	+5·0
1986-87	545·294	−2·0	421·270	+9·4
[1]1987-88	564·731	+3·6	459·352	+9·0

[1] Provisional.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the national grant-related expenditure assessments of London Regional Transport in 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88, consistent with the grant-related poundage reduction for spending at grant-related expenditure shown for each year; and if he will list the reasons for the changes between the years.

Mr. Ridley: The notional grant-related expenditure assessments (GREs) for London Regional Transport (LRT) in 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 are as follows:

	£ million
1985-86	292·3
1986-87	489·3
[1]1987-88	365·6

[1] Provisional.

The increase in the notional GRE from 1985-86 to 1986-87 was due mainly to the introduction in 1986-87 of a new element relating to London Underground services, following a change made to the notional GRE formula to take account of rail services other than British Rail services supported under section 20 of the Transport Act 1968.

The fall in GRE in 1987-88 reflects the proposed change in the method of calculating the cost of financing LRT capital to bring it into line with the way that local authority capital expenditure is treated in GREs generally.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish (a) the total current expenditure and (b) total capital expenditure of each residuary body in 1986-87;

(2) if he will publish the relevant, total, current and grant-related expenditure of local authorities in total at plan, budget and at all later stages in each year from 1981-82 to 1987-88, estimated.

Mr. Ridley: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Local Government Finance

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the responses to Cmnd. 9714, "Paying for Local Government"; and if he plans to publish a further White Paper on the subject of local government finance.

Mr. Ridley: I do not have the permission of respondents to publish their views. I shall, however, publish a summary of the representations received in due course. Further statements of Government policy on this subject will be made as and when appropriate.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the total cost to his Department of all preparatory work, both internal and external, and subsequent costs of the Green Paper, "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714).

Mr. Ridley: The costs attributable to the division in my Department responsible for the Green Paper between 1 November 1984 and 30 September 1986 were £773,100. This includes the cost of salaries, travel and subsistence, stationery, typing, cartographic, printing and computing services.

Rate Support Grant (Hertfordshire)

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with the Hertfordshire county council regarding its level of rate support grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government has agreed to meet a delegation from Hertfordshire county council on Thursday 6 November to discuss the RSG settlement.

Newham (Direct Labour Organisation)

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, following his request for a special report on Newham's direct labour organisation, he has reached a decision on that organisation's future.

Dr. Boyson: The special report provided by the London borough of Newham shows that Newham's direct labour organisation made losses on major new construction schemes totalling some £3·3 million over the period 1982-83 to 1984-85 with a loss in 1984-85 alone of over £2 million. The council has stopped awarding new major construction projects to its DLO for the time being, but despite this anticipates a further loss of around £2 million in 1985-86.

Having considered the report my right hon. Friend has today informed the borough, in accordance with his powers under section 17(5) of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, that with immediate effect its direct labour organisation shall no longer have power to undertake major new building work except as necessary to complete work already awarded to it.

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the total of local authorities' capital receipts at the end of each financial year from 1981-82 to 1985-86, showing the proportion of receipts backed by cash.

Mr. Ridley: Local authorities' capital receipts against the DOE-LA1 cash limit in each of the years 1981-82 to 1985-86, including receipts from health authorities and repayments of grants and advances, were as follows:

	£ million
1981-82	1,335
1982-83	2,235
1983-84	2,230
1984-85	2,150
1985-86	2,318

Information on the accumulated capital receipts held by local authorities was not collected by the Government before 1984-85. At the end of that year the total of accumulated receipts giving rise to spending permission in later years was £6·2 billion. Some of these receipts were notional, such as leasing disposals. The cash from much of the remainder had been used for such purposes as repaying debt and financing capitalised housing repairs. After allowing for such factors only £3·7 billion out of the £6·2 billion spending permission could be converted into cash. But very little even of this £3·7 billion was actually held on deposit at a bank. Most of it had been temporarily lent for other purposes within the authority and could be turned into cash only if the authority undertook further external borrowing. The total external loan debt of English local authorities at 31 March 1986 was £33·6 billion.

Information on the position at the end of 1985-86 is being collected at present and will be published when available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Health Services

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the revenue expenditure on health and community health services for each year from 1974-75 giving information adjusted by (a) the gross domestic product deflator, (b) National Health Service pay and prices and (c) the gross domestic product retail price index for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Health and personal social services expenditure

HOME DEPARTMENT

New Prison, Arncott

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give an estimated timetable of the construction of the new prison at Arncott.

Mr. Mellor: The construction of the new prison at Arncott (Bicester) is planned to commence in the autumn of 1987 and to be completed in the latter half of 1991.

Operation Condor

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will provide figures detailing arrests resulting from the searches conducted at the Afro-Caribbean Club and other property and premises searched during Operation Condor;

(2) how many people were arrested as a result of Operation Condor directly; and how many were arrested and subsequently charged with public order offences.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that there were 86 arrests on 24 July arising from Operation Condor. None of those arrested was subsequently charged with any public order offence.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many locations other than the Afro-Caribbean Club were searched by the police as part of Operation Condor; and if he will list these other locations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that a total of 12 locations were searched under warrant, including the Afro-Caribbean Club. Eight of these locations were within the Brixton division and four elsewhere in south London. It would not be appropriate to publicise the addresses.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of arrests for the evening of 24 July in the police divisions which cover the London borough of Lambeth.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that during the period 4.30 pm to midnight, 43 people were arrested and taken to police stations within the Lambeth division. A further 37 people were arrested and taken to police stations outside the division.

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers were used during Operation Condor; and if he will provide the information by rank and police division.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: 798. The officers were drawn from divisions and branches throughout the Metropolitan police district and it would be possible to give a breakdown by rank and division only at disproportionate cost.

Plastic Bullets (Lambeth)

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department where plastic bullets are stored in Lambeth and in what quantities; what officers in Lambeth police district are trained in the use of plastic bullets; at what level decisions are made for their deployment; and what criteria are used in reaching a decision for deployment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is not the practice to disclose where in the Metropolitan police district plastic baton rounds are stored or which officers have been trained in their use. As to the other points raised, I would refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 19 May 1986 (Official Report, columns 15-16.)

Alcohol Test Computers

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implications of the use of breath check alcohol test computers, by private individuals, for road safety.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is open to individuals to use such self-test equipment as they wish. The report of the Blennerhassett committee pointed out limitations of self-testing equipment, particularly that alcohol will be underestimated if a test is carried out before the alcohol consumed has been absorbed.

Conservative Party Conference

Mr. Butterfill asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has conducted an analysis of the total security costs relating to the 1986 Conservative party conference in Bournemouth; what proportion of this will be borne by Her Majesty's Government; and whether he has any proposals to change the basis on which the costs of security at the major party conferences are funded.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have not conducted such an analysis. 51 per cent. of expenditure incurred by the Dorset police authority on the policing of the conference will be met by the Home Office through police grant in the usual way. Block grant from the Department of the Environment makes a further contribution to the costs. There are no plans to make any special arrangements for the funding of such costs. Certain expenditure incurred by the Conservative party on security at the conference may qualify for reimbursement from central funds under the scheme announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in her reply to a question by my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Southport (Sir I. Percival) on 25 July.

Deportation

Mr. Leadbitter asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the light of the information supplied by the hon. Member for Hartlepool, he will deport the individual named on the ground that his presence is not conducive to the public good; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I am writing to the hon. Member.

Prisoners (Deaths)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to the answer of 23 October, if he will break down the number of deaths for each year other than from natural causes, by cause and by coroner's verdict;

(2) if he will list in each year from 1980 to 1985 the number of deaths from non-natural causes in each prison in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has had any representations in respect of the number of suicides in prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We receive very few representations about the number of suicides in prison. The interpretation of statistics on prison suicide was one of the issues considered in the report of the Working Group on Suicide Prevention, published on 5 September.

Crimes and Offences (Fines)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the current maximum fines which can be imposed by the courts for (a) soliciting, (b) prostitution, (c) criminal damage, (d) drunk driving, (e) speeding, (f) assault and (g) selling lawnmowers which do not conform to the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations; and what plans he has for reviewing the maximum levels of fines for crimes and offences.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is set out in the table, except as regards prostitution which in itself is not an offence. For the more serious offences of assault and criminal damage, imprisonment is also available as a sanction.

We keep maximum penalties under constant review.

Offence	Enactment	Maximum Fine
Soliciting (of male by female)	Section 1 of the Street Offences Act 1959	Level 2 on the standard scale (£100) for first offence; level 3 (£400) for second or subsequent offence.
Soliciting (of male by male)	Section 32 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956	Statutory maximum (£2,000) if prosecuted summarily; unlimited fine on indictment.

Offence	Enactment	Maximum Fine
Persistent soliciting of women/kerb crawling	Sections 1 and 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 1985	Level 3 on standard scale (£400).
Criminal Damage	Section 1 of the Criminal Damage Act 1971 (for damage of more than £400); (for damage of £400 or less).	Unlimited fine on indictment; statutory maximum (£2,000) when tried summarily. Level 4 on the standard scale (£1,000).
Driving when unfit through drink/ with excess alcohol	Sections 5 (1) and 6(1)(a) of the Road Traffice Act 1972	Level 5 on the standard scale (£2,000).
Exceeding speed limit	Section 89(1) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984	Level 3 on the standard scale (£400).
Common assault	Section 42 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861	Level 3 on the standard scale (£400).
Assault occasioning actual bodily harm	Section 47 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861	Unlimited fine on indictment; statutory maximum (£2,000) if tried summarily.
Sale of Lawnmowers contrary to the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986		£1,000

AIDS

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome were recorded in Scotland at the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information he has about the trend in the number of cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in Glasgow and the west of Scotland at the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: By 31 October, 13 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) had been recorded in Scotland. Five of these were from Glasgow and the west of Scotland. It is not possible to establish trends from this small number of cases. The Government's public education compaign is intended to warn the public generally, and particularly groups at special risk, of the danger that AIDS presents to the whole population. We are continuing to give this serious disease our urgent attention.

Health Services

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the revenue expenditure on health and community health services each year from 1974-75 giving information adjusted by (a) the domestic product deflator, (b) National Health Service pay and prices and (c) the retail price index for Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is given in the table. No separate NHS pay and price factors are maintained for Scotland. The figures at column 3 have therefore been constructed using NHS pay and price index data maintained for England by the Department of Health and Social Security. The amounts at column 4 have been converted using the Retail Price Index, which is constructed on a United Kingdom basis. Since the RPI measures the movement in the cost of goods and services purchased by an average domestic household, it is not an appropriate indicator of cost movements in Health Service expenditure.

Chernobyl (Warnings)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he intends to take in the light of the report by Mr. David Webster on the performance of Government agencies in giving advice to the public concerning dangers arising from radioactive fallout from Chernobyl; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The Government are examining carefully their response to the Chernobyl accident to consider what lessons can be learnt from all aspects of the event, including the giving of advice and information to the public, for application in any possible future accident involving the release of radioactivity.

Torness (Survey)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the scope of the survey and data to be provided by the common services agency of the Scottish Health Service to the South of Scotland electricty board and the Lothian health board as a base line health survey in the area around Torness power station; what is the estimated cost of this survey; and if his Department will meet this cost.

Mr. John MacKay: The initial base line study of data for the area around Torness power station which will be conducted by the Common Services Agency for the Scottish Health Service is an examination of the incidence of all cancers in young persons (0-24 age group) and leukaemia and selected other cancers in adults in the period 1975-84 within 12·5 km and between 12·5 km and 25 km of the proposed reactor site.

The analysis will make use of existing data sets and the cost (estimated to be about £550) of this initial study will be met by the Common Services Agency.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Health Authorities (Membership)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how he intends to invite recommendations for membership of health authorities in the future.

Mrs. Currie: In accordance with schedule 5 of the National Health Service Act 1977 we shall invite nominations by direct invitation to a number of specific interested bodies. As has been our practice in the past, we shall also invite hon. and right hon. Members to submit nominations, In accordance with the wishes of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, we shall be seeking to appoint women to a larger proportion of the appointments than in the past. We shall also, of course, always seek to ensure that each health authority's membership reflects as far as possible the community it serves.

Royal Herbert Hospital, Woolwich

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how long the Royal Herbert hospital, Woolwich, hs been empty; what is the annual cost of maintaining the buildings; and what uses have been, or are likely to be, considered for the site.

Mrs. Currie: The Royal Herbert hospital at Woolwich is the responsibility of the South East Thames regional health authority, which is awaiting the result of an application for listed building consent for demolition. If successful, the planning permission already given for development will be put into action for disposal of the site. If consent is not obtained then alternative uses would have to be considered.

I am informed that the hospital closed down at the end of 1979. £22,000 per year is spent on security and a minimal sum on maintenance.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report for the following age categories (a) 15 to 24 years, (b) 25 to 44 years, (c) 45 to 54 years, (d) 55 to 64 years, (e) 65 to 74 years and (f) 75 to 84 years, the number of deaths from cervical carcinoma in the Peterborough health authority for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Currie: The information is shown in the table. Figures prior to 1982 are not comparable with those of later years as the Peterborough health district is not contermininous with the Peterborough district health authority.

Housing Benefit

Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish, in the same format as the answer of 5 July 1985, Official Report, columns 301-3, the latest available estimates of: (a) recipients of housing benefit not on supplementary benefit, (b) the numbers of households affected by the rent taper change to be introduce in April 1987 and (c) the number of households losing entitlement to rent rebates; if he will give information on the changes to the housing benefit needs allowance by publishing a table showing the April 1987 needs allowances and disregards and the level at which they would stand if the updating formula previously used were still in force; and if he will also publish a table giving a detailed breakdown of the numbers of households losing: (i) less than 26p, (ii) 26 to 50p, and (ii) 51p to £1 and such other ranges of losses as may be appropriate as a combined result of both the taper and needs allowance changes, distinguishing as far as possible between pensioners, working and other households.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Operating Department Assistants

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will make a statement on the pay, conditions and hours of service of operating department assistants in the National Health Service;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report for each year since 1979 the number of operating department assistants leaving the service with the corresponding figures for recruitment.

Mrs. Currie: Remuneration and conditions of service of operating department assistants are matters for the Professional and Technical Staffs 'B' Whitley Council. A copy of the council handbook has been placed in the Library. Information about such staff leaving and entering the National Health Service is not collected centrally. Over the past few years the number of those employed in England has remained constant at around 2,700.

Pensions

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the answer of 29 October, he will define the term "pay day" in relation to the timing of the payment of retirement pension; and what estimate he has made of the maximum amount which could be lost between a pensioners' qualifying birth date and the first relevant pay day.

Mr. Lyell: The pay day is the day for each individual pensioner from which weekly sums of retirement pension become payable. The prescribed pay day for those retiring at present is Monday. Since pension is payable weekly in advance, the first pension payment is at most six days after the qualifying birthday and the date of retirement. The maximum difference is, therefore, six-sevenths of the weekly pension rate. However, pension is a weekly benefit and is never calculated on a daily basis.

The Department's leaflet NP 32, a copy of which is in the Library and which is sent automatically to all pensioners some three months before they reach pensionable age, advises pensioners that any delay between the date of retirement and the first pension pay day can be avoided by choosing the pension pay day as the date of retirement.

Resource Allocation Working Party

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the progress of the resource allocation working party review.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Twickenham (Mr. Jessel) on 21 October 1986 at column 854.

AIDS

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he is taking to ensure that the public are better aware of the dangers of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and how to avoid the risk of becoming infected by the virus.

Mr. Newton: I refer my hon. Friend the my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Stockport (Mr. Favell) on 28 October 1986 at column 123.

General Household Survey

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the result of the 1985 general household survey questionnaire section on carers on pages 46 to 57 inclusive.

Mrs. Currie: Analysis of the 1985 general household survey questionnaire section on carers will be published in the 1985 general household survey report which is expected to be ready at the end of next year.

Health Services

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the revenue expenditure on health and community health services for each year from 1974-75 giving information adjusted by (a) the gross domestic product deflator, (b) National Health Service pay and prices and (c) the retail price index for (i) England and (ii) Wales.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Artificial Limbs (Review)

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to respond to the detailed recommendations of the McColl Committee on its review of the artificial limbs and appliances services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 29 October 1986 at column 187.

Mentally Handicapped Children

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many mentally handicapped children remain in long-stay hospitals;

(2) when he expect his Department's information paper on mentally handicapped children in long-stay hospitals to be published;

(3) if he will set a date for letting all mentally handicapped children out of long-stay hospitals and into appropriate community facilities; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will meet representations from Exodus, the organisation pressing to bring mentally handicapped children out of long-stay hospitals; and if he will make a statement;

(5) when he last consulted with regional health authority chairmen about transferring all mentally handicapped children from long-stay hospitals to the community; and what conclusions were reached;

(6) how many mentally handicapped children have been transferred from long-stay hospitals to the community in each of the last seven years; and if he is satisfied that adequate community provision has been made for them.

Mrs. Currie: [pursuant to her reply, 22 October, columns 905-6]: Mental handicap hospitals and units are not classified by the length of time residents stay. At 31 December 1985 there were 585 children aged under 16 years resident in National Health Service mental handicap hospitals and hospital units, and a further 293 children resident in small National Health Service mental handicap units in the community. The figures include children admitted for short-term care or assessment, and those who spend part of their time at home and part in a National Health Service unit. Separate figures are not available centrally for these categories of residents, nor are the numbers of children discharged from mental handicap hospitals into the community. However, the total number of discharges (including transfers) from mental handicap hospitals and units included in the DHSS booklets "Mental health Statistics for England" (copies in the Library) show that the great majority of these follow lengths of stay of less than six months, which could be for assessment, short-term treatment, or family respite care. Discharges after a longer stay may be for resettlement in the community, and these were as follows:—

Children aged under 16 discharged from National Health Service mental handicap hospitals, with duration of stay one year or more.

Year	Number
1979	166
1980	169
1981	139
1982	141
1983	135
1984	110
1985	122

Information is not available centrally about the nature of the provision made for children who have been transferred from large long-stay hospitals. Health authorities were asked to review the needs of children in their care jointly with local authorities to decide the best way to make more suitable provision. Authorities are aware of the importance of ensuring that services meet the whole range of needs of individual children wherever they are living and that parents are fully consulted.

When my noble Friend consulted the chairmen of regional health authorities in the spring about their plans for transferring the remaining long-stay children from large mental handicap hospitals to more appropriate alternatives, they reported a total of 330 still in hospital. Health authorities' plans are well advanced and, accordingly, we have asked them to ensure that by the end of 1988 no mentally handicapped child receiving long-term care should be required to live in a large mental handicap hospital.

We shall be following up progress in regional reviews and a further announcement will be made in due course. My noble Friend, who has been in correspondence with EXODUS, will be meeting representatives of organisations concerned with provision for mentally handicapped children, including EXODUS, a copy of the information paper for the meeting will be placed in the Library.

ENERGY

Nuclear Power Generation

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Energy what estimate he has of the number of people directly and indirectly employed in nuclear power generation.

Mr. Goodlad: The CEGB and SSEB currently employ over 11,000 people directly for nuclear power generation. Both the UKAEA and BNFL also generate electricity from some of their nuclear plant, but given the nature of their respective operations it is not possible to give a precise figure for the numbers employed in the generation of electricity. Overall, the nuclear industry directly employs about 44,000 people. Many thousands more are employed on the industry's major capital projects, in maintaining and servicing the industry's existing sites and in providing local infrastructure. Well over 100,000 jobs depend directly or indirectly on the industry.

PRIME MINISTER

Bournemouth

Q79. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Prime Minister when she last visited Bournemouth in an offical capacity.

The Prime Minister: On Monday 6 October, when I visited the site of the new Bournemouth district general hospital.

Scotland (Oil-Related Activity)

Q86. Mr. Kennedy asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the current level of oil-related economic activity in Scotland.

The Prime Minister: The production of oil from the United Kingdom continental shelf is continuing at a broadly constant level. Daily average production expressed in million barrels per day was 2·692 during January 1986 and 2·508 during August 1986, with an average over the eight months of 2·525. The level of development and exploration of new fields is lower as a result of retrenchment by companies in reaction to low oil prices. This downturn in offshore activities has resulted in reduced demand for equipment, goods and services, particularly in the fabrication and supply companies, many of which are based in Scotland. Various proposals for fiscal and other measures have been put to the Government by the oil industry and others and these are being considered.

Engagements

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 November.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 November.

Mr. Yeo asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagments for Tuesday 4 November.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 November.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty The Queen.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Reykjavik Summit

45. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations took place between his Department and the United States Administration concerning the arms control position adopted by the United States Government at Reykjavik.

Mr. Renton: In addition to the usual and continuous process of Alliance consultation, senior United States officials briefed the North Atlantic Council shortly before the Reykjavik meeting. Since then close consultation has continued, including bilateral contacts, the meeting of the North Atlantic Council on 13 October with Secretary Shultz, and the nuclear planning group meeting on 21-22 October. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is visiting the United States on 15 November for discussions with President Reagan.

47. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with his European colleagues in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation about the proposals made at the Reykjavik summit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence met NATO Defence Ministers of the nuclear planning group at its meeting at Gleneagles on 21-22 October.

I also attended a meeting of the North Atlantic Council on 13 October, which discussed the Reykjavik outcome with Secretary Shultz.

Trident

46. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what prevailing international circumstances Her Majesty's Government would now consider Trident to be negotiable in arms control talks.

Mr. Renton: We have repeatedly stated that if the Soviet and United States strategic arsenals were to be very substantially reduced and if no significant changes had occurred in Soviet defensive capability we would want to review our position and consider how best we could contribute to arms control in the light of the reduced threat. That remains the position. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said on 30 October, the independent nuclear deterrent is vital to our future defence.

Nuclear Missiles

48. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's position on developments towards British participation in any intermediate range nuclear force arms negotiations.

Mr. Renton: The Geneva nuclear and space talks are bilateral negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union. There is no question of British participation.

49. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government still support the zero-zero option for intermediate range nuclear forces in Europe.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's position on the intermediate range nuclear forces negotiations with particular reference to the United States negotiating line at the Reykjavik summit.

Mr. Renton: The Alliance has consistently made clear its criteria for an acceptable INF agreement. These include the need for equal and global limits, appropriate constraints on shorter range INF and effective verification.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have been involved, or infend to become involved, in any discussions with the United States Administration concerning the reinterpretation or otherwise of the ABM treaty in relation to the SDI programme; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Renton: We are not a party to the ABM treaty, although we have discussed ABM treaty issues with the United States Administration and will continue to do so as appropriate.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, following the Government's support for the United Nations General Assembly resolution calling for demilitarisation in the south Atlantic, he plans to reduce the British military presence in the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Renton: Our support for the United Nations resolution declaring a zone of peace and co-operation in the south Atlantic area reflects our desire to work for the reduction of tension in the region. As we made clear at the United Nations, we do not regard the new zone as affecting basic rights under the United Nations charter, which include that of self-defence.

Force levels in the Falklands reflect the continuing need for a military presence sufficient to deter aggression and to defend the islands against attack.

Baha'i Community (Iran)

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent action he and his Community colleagues have taken on behalf of the Baha'i community in Iran.

Mr. Renton: As Presidency of the European Community we were instrumental in presenting a demarche to the Iranian Government on 26 August expressing our concern at the treatment of minority groups in Iran, and in particular the continued persecution of members of the Baha'i sect.

At the United Nations General Assembly this autumn we shall again make clear that we look to the Government of Iran to respect the human rights standards set out in the international instruments to which they are party.

"Living Conditions in OECD Countries"

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development has yet updated table 7·5 bis on pages 76 and 77 of Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development Social Policy Studies No. 3: "Living Conditions in OECD Countries."

Mrs. Chalker: No. The OECD has no plans to update this particular table. But information on OECD unemployment is contained in the "Employment Outlook" and statistical background published by the OECD each September.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the role of the Heung Yee Kuk in the New Territories, Hong Kong, after 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: There is no specific provision in the Joint Declaration on the Question of Hong Kong concerning the future of the Heung Yee Kuk after 1997. This is essentially a matter for the Government of the future Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of China.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the reports of the UMELCO of Hong Kong visits to North America, Europe and Japan to study nuclear power projects.

Mr. Renton: A copy will be placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of the Hong Kong Government on the Daya Bay nuclear power plant.

Mr. Renton: The Hong Kong Government's policy towards the Daya Bay nuclear power plant has been set out in the speeches given by the Financial Secretary in the Legislative Council of Hong Kong on 16 July and 15 October 1986. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange for a referendum to be held on the proposed nuclear power plant at Daya Bay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: No. We do not believe this would be appropriate. The proposed nuclear power station is to be located in the People's Republic of China.

Nepal

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's relations with Nepal.

Mr. Renton: Relations between Britain and Nepal have traditionally been close and friendly; they continue to be so.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government of Nepal have made any representations concerning the dismissal of the soldiers of the Gurkha Regiment based in Hong Kong.

Mr. Renton: The Government of Nepal have made no such representations. We informed them at an early stage and have remained in close contact.

British Council

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what annual savings will result from the closure of the British Council's offices in Damascus; and whether the money saved will be retained for the use of the British Council.

Mr. Renton: The maximum annual gross saving that may eventually result from closing the British Council office in Damascus is of the order of £0·4 million. However, in 1986-87 there will be no savings and funds may be needed in 1987-88 to cover residual costs.

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government intend to cover the cost of increased security for the British Council; what estimate he has received from the British Council of such costs; how much money he proposes to make available for this purpose; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: In 1986-87 the council asked for £820,000 additional to its voted provision for the year to cover the cost of increased security. Parliamentary approval will be sought to provide a substantial proportion of this money. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has in principle accepted the council's case for enhanced security in the years 1987-88 to 1989-90 but the results of the public expenditure survey cannot be anticipated. Further details will be published in the public expenditure White Paper and in the Supply Estimates to be submitted for parliamentary approval.

India

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further action he intends to take following the Government of India's refusal to grant visas to the two British drugs liaison officers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We have been promised a definitive response from the Indian Government in the very near future on whether the drug liaison officers can take up their posts.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a White Paper concerning the policy of Her Majesty's Government concerning fisheries in the Falklands including details of the negotiations conducted under the auspices of the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the statement my right hon. and learned Friend made to the House on 29 October, at columns 323-33, in which he made clear our policy and drew attention to our support for a study by the Food and Agriculture Organisation on fish stocks in the south-west Atlantic.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Tubero v. Toomey

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Attorney-General what has been the result of the investigation into allegations made by the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) regarding the case of Tubero v. Toomey and others.

The Attorney-General: I apologise for the length of this answer.

On 19 December last the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) made in this House serious allegations against the senior master of the Supreme Court Mr. J. R. Bickford Smith, TD concerning his handling of two interlocutory applications in the Queen's Bench division in two separate actions between the same parties. The hon. Member had given no previous notice of his allegations, and it is understood that the rule of the House forbidding adverse references to the higher judiciary except on substantive resolution does not apply to masters of the Supreme Court. Later the hon. Member wrote to the Lord Chancellor enclosing a report from the solicitors acting for the plaintiffs in the proceedings. The Lord Chancellor has made extensive inquiries about these allegations, involving the solicitors for the defendants and counsel representing both parties in the proceedings as well as the senior master himself and Sir Neil Lawson, who heard the appeal in chambers on the first summons.

Both sets of proceedings arose from a claim by a Mr. Tubero and an associated company ("the plaintiffs") against the thousands of members of over 40 syndicates at Lloyd's, of whom only three were named as representing the rest. One of the defendants, but not one of those named, was a Mr. John Bickford-Smith who was a member of at least one of these syndicates. (I refer to the defendants collectively as "the defendants" and to Mr. Bickford-Smith as "Mr. Bickford-Smith the underwriter").

The claim arose from a contract of insurance against theft by the defendants in connection with the plaintiffs' jewellery business in Los Angeles. The claim was based on an allegation that the plaintiffs had suffered loss from a theft of jewellery at their Los Angeles premises on 4 August 1981.

Origially the claim was pursued against the dependents in the United States district court of South Florida. The defendants (then sued as "Lloyd's of London") disputed the claim on a number of grounds, including a denial that the alleged theft had taken place. On 17 May 1984 and 24 September 1984 the plaintiffs lost in interlocutory proceedings in their proceedings in the district court. The plaintiffs themsleves have never pursued these proceedings further since by an order dated 23 May 1985 the European American Bank were substituted as plaintiffs. Subsequently the plaintffs started separate proceedings in the state courts of Florida and New York. Those in the state court of Florida were dismissed as "duplicitous". It has not been ascertained exactly what became of the New York proceedings. On 1 August 1984 the plaintiffs commenced the first set of English proceedings in the Queen's Bench division of the High Court in London, by writ No. 1904 M 2943. These proceedings were founded on the same cause of action as those in the Florida district court. On 28 November 1984 the defendants issued a summons to dismiss these proceedings as an abuse of the process of the court. This was heard by the senior master on 13 December 1984. He allowed the summons and dismissed the action. The plaintiffs subsequently appealed but on 25 March 1985 the appeal was dismissed by Sir Neil Lawson sitting as judge in chambers. In a letter to the Lord Chancellor enclosing a note of his ex tempore judgment, Sir Neil Lawson describes the case as the "clearest possible case of abuse of the process".

The allegations concerning the first English proceedings

In his remarks to the House of 19 December 1985 the hon. Member alleged that in relation to the hearing in December 1984 the senior master had "grabbed" the case and insisted that he should deal with it. There is no truth whatever in this allegation. The case had originally been assigned to Master Turner, but in accordance with everyday practice in the Queen's Bench division, the defendants requested the masters' secretary to arrange for the senior master to take the case in view of his knowledge of United States law and procedure.

The hon. Member also suggested that the senior master had an interest in the case which he failed to disclose. There is no truth whatever in this. The senior master had no such interest. It appears, though accounts differ, that in one way or another counsel for the plaintiffs told the senior master that one of the defendants was a Mr. J. Bickford-Smith, but it does not appear that this was by way of obj tion but to avoid any conceivable embarrassment, . nce the senior master's initials are "J.R." and his name Bickford Smith though not hypenated is also identical. The senior master has a clear recollection to the effect that he explained that the underwriter was probably a cousin of his.

That the point was not seriously pursued before the senior master is clear not only from the recollections of counsel but also from the fact that it was not raised again in the proceedings.

The relationship allegation

In the course of his speech on 18 December the hon. Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch said

"I have had a genealogist check the position and I can report that the grandfather of both of them—that is both the senior master and Mr. Bickford-Smith the underwriter—

"was George Smith"

This would have made them first cousins and if true it would have been at best a serious reflection on the judgment of the senior master if (which did not happen) either party had objected to his taking the case and he had insisted on hearing it. But it is not true. Whilst it is not suggested that the hon. Member wilfully misled the House, the information of the genealogist disclosed by the hon. Member shows a very different situation.

It is true that the two Bickford-Smiths had a common ancester in one George Smith. He was not the grandfather of either and therefore they are not first cousins. He was the great great grandfather of Mr. Bickford-Smith the underwriter and the great grandfather of the senior master. The two men are thus second cousins once removed. That Mr. Bickford-Smith the underwriter, one of at least 15,000-odd defendants, had a minute interest in the proceedings is undeniable but can hardly be held to justify the intemperate criticism to which the senior master was subjected by the hon. Member. When these facts were brought to the hon. Member's notice in case he wished to make a personal statement to the House, he attributed his error to a "slip". Since the correct genealogy was apparently in his possession at the time, it may be thought to be rather worse than that.

The allegation that the senior master lied

The hon. Member also said:

"Master Bickford Smith lied to counsel. Yes, he lied. He said: 'You will not find another master in this corridor, nor a single judge in this building, who is not a Lloyd's underwriter.'"

The attribution of this remark to the senior master rests solely on the evidence of the solicitor appearing for the plaintiffs. It appears to be wholly incorrect as well as irrelevant and is in fact nonsensical. The senior master emphatically denies that he made this statement, and the solicitor's recollection is challenged by every counsel in the case, including the plaintiffs' own counsel. In fact it was clearly not made. The senior master is himself not an underwriter and would therefore be a living disproof of the assertion. The hon. Member was unable to provide any supporting evidence for this allegation except the solicitor in question. The alleged "lie" was never told. The allegation is clearly either fantasy or fabrication.

The allegation concerning the defendants' solicitors

The third allegation related to the defendants' Solicitors.

The hon. Member said:

"Further, what is happening in this case when of the solicitors, Elborne Mitchell, Elborne is a member of Lloyd's council, is a consultant in the case and is also a defendant in the case".—[Official Report, 18 December 1985; Vol. 89, c. 464-65.]

Again this is incorrect. Mr. Elbone was not a consultant in the case. At no stage did Mr. Elborne deal with the proceedings. Messrs. Elborne Mitchell and Co. were indeed the defendants' solicitors on the record, but the proceedings were dealt with by another partner.

The plaintiffs, who had lost their case before the senior master and had their action dismissed as an abuse of the process of the court, appealed to Sir Neil Lawson. Neither the notice of appeal nor anything said at the hearing of the appeal bears any trace of the matters complained of by the hon. Member, and though Sir Neil Lawson gave leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal the plaintiffs made no attempt to do so.

The second set of English proceedings

Instead of making use of the leave to appeal granted them on 4 April 1985 the plaintiffs proceeded to issue a second writ against the defendants (serial number 1985 M1458). Their cause of action was different from that in the first English proceedings and inconsistent with it. This second writ seems to have contained a claim that on 19 March 1985 (about a week before the hearing by Sir Neil Lawson on 25 March) an agreement in writing by way of accord and satisfaction had been made between the two firms of solicitors settling the plaintiffs claim for $US 2 million. It is difficult to see how this could ever have matched with the plaintiffs' conduct a week later in prosecuting their appeal before Sir Neil Lawson in the first proceedings which as stated above was in respect of the original loss and not on the alleged agreement.

The second writ was also the subject of an application to dismiss or strike out the claim as an abuse of the process of the court. On 11 June 1985 the senior master ordered all previous proceedings to be struck out and for technical reasons a fresh statement of claim to be delivered. The plaintiffs were ordered to pay £300 in costs. In spite of the adverse order by the senior master the plaintiffs complied with it and did not appeal. Nor did they raise at the hearing any contention as to the suitability of the senior master to deal with the summons. It seems inconceivable that they should have acted in this manner had there been any substance in any of the serious allegations made against the senior master.

The revised statement of claim delivered as the result of the hearing on 11 June 1985 was met by a further application by the defendants to dismiss the second English proceedings as an abuse of the process of the court. This case came before the senior master on 9 and 17 October 1985. In the event the plaintiffs again lost. The senior master dismissed the action, which then permanently disappeared. Again no objection was made to the senior master taking the summons. Again the judgment was not appealed. The senior master concluded that the proceedings disclosed a "crude attempt" by the solicitors to the plaintiffs to obtain by trick wording money for their clients to which they knew they were not entitled at the expense of a United States bank to which the plaintiffs (or one of them) was or were indebted and of the underwriters, and the senior master expressed disapproval of the conduct of the plaintiffs' solicitors.

It is worth recording that the district judge in the United States district court had formed a similarly unflattering view of the plaintiffs and their advisers. Inter alia the district judge said (23 May 1985):

"It is painfully obvious that the affidavit submitted by Tubero is false. It should also be noted that the officer who notarised the affidavit is Robert H. Anderson II, Tubero's counsel . . .

It is clear on the face of the record in the main action that there has been a total lack of good faith prosecution (sic) in the main action . . .

The actions of Tubero's Counsel, Robert H. Anderson II are among the most unprofessional that this Court has witnessed. His behaviour can only be described as a blight on the reputation of the general legal community. It is the undersigned's opinion that Anderson's actions herein raise serious questions regarding his fitness as a member of the legal profession".

Other matters

I turn to two other matters referred to by the hon. Member in his speech of 19 December. The first is the reference to freemasonary which appears to savour more of fantasy than fact. Contrary to what he has suggested Sir Neil Lawson is not a freemason, and, so far as can be ascertained, none of the counsel is a freemason.

The second other matter is a criticism of a letter as "pathetic" which it is alleged that the plaintiffs received from the Lord Chancellor's Office. This can only refer to one or both of two letters dated respectively 10 May 1985 and 4 September 1985 and written respectively 10 May 1985 and 4 September 1985 and written respectively to Mr. Tubero and to the American attorney Robert H. Anderson II (referred to above). In both of these the plaintiffs were properly advised that any objections to the hearing of a proceeding by a particular judge should be taken at the hearing in accordance with advice received.

Conclusion

The Lord Chancellor has looked into this case closely and can find no foundation whatever for the allegations which the hon. Gentleman has made against the senior master. Nor is there any evidence that Sir Neil Lawson, of the members of the Bar concerned in the case, or the defendants' solicitors, failed to deal with the matters before them on their merits, or that there was anything improper in their approach. The hon. Member cites a theory of some masonic conspiracy in support of his allegations. There is no basis for such a theory. So far as is known to the Lord Chancellor freemasonry is a perfectly lawful organisation and in any case, apart from the senior master, none of the persons involved in the proceedings appear to be freemasons. In particular, Sir Neil Lawson who disposed on appeal of the first proceedings is not. Though this has not influenced him in any way, the Lord Chancellor has asked me to say that he personally is not, nor has he never been, a freemason, but that he is a name at Lloyd's though not a member of any of the syndicates involved in the proceedings.

I regard it as most unfortunate that such serious and damaging remarks of this kind, which on investigation are apparently without any foundation whatever, should have been made in the House about a member of the judiciary. There is a well understood rule in the House that senior judges may not be attacked in debate save on a substantive motion. Whether or not a similar rule should apply to other judges and if so of which grades could only be decided by the House itself. But it may at least be thought that to make allegations of this kind under cover of parliamentary privilege in the middle of the night without prior notice to the Minister charged with replying, if not a misuse by the hon. Member of his rights, is at least contrary to the elementary rules of natural justice and fair play.

Lord Chancellor's Department (Running Costs)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Attorney-General what change is proposed for the 1986-87 running costs limit for the Lord Chancellor's Department.

The Attorney-General: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate the gross running costs limit for the Lord Chancellor's Department will be increased by £2,000,000 from £190,919,000 to £192,919,000. The increase is required for additional manpower to staff new courtrooms for the Crown court and to deal with increasing criminal and civil business. The extra costs will be offset by additional fee income and therefore there is no net change in public expenditure.

Land Registry (Running Costs)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Attorney-General what change is proposed for the 1986-87 running costs limit for the Land Registry.

The Attorney-General: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the running costs limit for the Land Registry will be increased by £1,835,000 from £82,840,000 to £84,675,000. Almost all the increase is required for temporary staff and overtime costs because the number of applications for registration in 1986-87 is now expected to reach 2,521,000, which exceeds the total originally anticipated, 2,292,000, by over 9 per cent. The increased running costs will be fully offset by the extra fee revenue that the greater workload will generate. No net additional public expenditure is therefore involved.

THE ARTS

Cleveland County Museums Service

Mr. Tinn asked the Minister for the Arts if he has made arrangements for an exhibition relating to the Cleveland County Museums Service's International Drawing Biennale to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Luce: I understand that arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall between 15 and 19 December 1986.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Exchange Controls

Mr. Galley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the new employment generated in the United Kingdom as a result of outward investment since the abolition of exchange controls.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Taxation

Mr. Hanley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in the consolidation of the Income and Corporaton Taxes Act 1970 and the subsequent Finance Acts, and when he expects to publish a consolidated Bill.

Mr. Norman Lamont: On present plans, it is hoped to introduced a Bill consolidating the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970 and subsequent legislation early in the 1987-88 Session of Parliament.

Betting

Mr. Charles Morrison asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the revenue from (a) off-course betting duty and (b) on-course betting duty for 1985-86; and what was the change from the previous year;

(2) what information he has on the betting turnover (a) off-course and (b) on-course for 1985-86; and what was the change from the previous year;

(3) what information he has on the betting turnover (a) off-course and (b) on-course for the six months, 5 April 1986 to 5 October 1986; and what was the change from the corresponding period for the previous year;

(4) what was the revenue from (a) off-course betting duty and (b) on-course betting duty for the six months 5 April 1986 to 5 October 1986; and what was the change from the corresponding period the previous year.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Personal Income

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will detail the total of personal income going to the top 1 per cent., 2 per cent., 3 per cent., 4 per cent., and 5 per cent., respectively, before and after tax of each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 31 October 1986, c. 268]: Information is given in the tables. The quantile groups have been determined by reference to the distribution of income before tax (table 1) or after tax (table 2) of those single people and married couples for whom the Inland Revenue has records in each year. The figures are based on surveys of personal incomes.

Privatisation

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what selection procedure is used to obtain legal and financial advice from sources outside Her Majesty's Government in connection with privatisation proposals.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 3 November 1986]: The usual practice is that appointments by Departments of financial and legal advisers on privatisation are made following competitions.

WALES

Drug Addiction

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of beds in each hospital in Wales allocated specifically for the treatment of drug addiction.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not available centrally.

Drug Addicts

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the number of registered drug addicts in each health authority in Wales for each of the past five years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The numbers of new and former narcotic drug addicts notified to the Home Office are published annually. A copy of the Home Office's publication "Statistics on the Misuse of Drugs United Kingdom: Supplementary Tables 1984", which contains data for the most recent five years, is in the Library. Information relates to police force area and is not available by district health authority.

British Iron and Steel Federation Houses

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the sums of money that his Department has allocated for the refurbishment of the British Iron and Steel Federation houses that are privately owned in Wales during each of the past five years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Allocations have not been made for this purpose. A recent report by the Building Research Establishment found that the majority of BISF houses are structurally sound.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the sums of money allocated by his Department to each local authority in Wales for the improvement of council-owned British Iron and Steel Federation houses during each of the past five years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: No specific allocations have been made for this purpose. Local authorities are free to decide their own expenditure priorities within the total allocations made available to them.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department has any plans to make grants available for the removal of asbestos in privately owned British Iron and Steel Federation houses.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Asbestos is generally present in BISF homes only as a small proportion of the composition of the roof material. These roofs are not considered to constitute a hazard and there are no plans for specific grants to be made available.

AIDS

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if any persons in Wales have received transfused blood contaminated with the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Since 14 October 1985 the National Blood Transfusion Service has screened all blood donations for antibody to the AIDS virus.

No cases of patients receiving transfusions of contaminated blood have been reported in Wales.

Regional Development Grant

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each year since the introduction of the regional development grant, the percentage of the working population of Wales residing in assisted areas qualifying for that grant.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The regional development grant system introduced in 1972 was replaced by a new system introduced in November 1984, based on a combination of regional development grants and regional selective assistance. The proportion of the economically active population of Wales residing in assisted areas qualifying for that grant has been as follows during the period:

	Per cent.
Before August 1982	100
August 1982 to November 1984	93
Post November 1984	38

In addition to regional development grants, projects undertaken in Development Areas may be eligible for regional selective assistance. Regional selective assistance, which, dependant upon circumstances, can be very attractive, is also available in intermediate areas. A further 51 per cent. of the economically active population of Wales resides in Intermediate Areas as now defined, and 89 per cent. reside in areas qualifying for assistance under one or other heads.

Alcohol

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department has undertaken any studies to assess the number of working days lost in Wales annually as a result of alcohol consumption.

Mr. Mark Robinson: No. However, a study into the health, social and economic costs of alcohol misuse in England and Wales has been funded from the DHSS/ Welsh Office research and development budget. (cf McDonnell, R; Maynard, A (1985) "The Costs of Alcohol Misuse", British Journal of Addiction, 80, 27-35, a copy of which is in the Library).

Garden Festival

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he intends to announce his decision on the site of the 1992 garden festival before 30 November.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I am giving very careful consideration to the four short-listed bids and hope to announce my decision soon—whether before or after 30 November I cannot yet say.

Mentally-ill People (Consultative Paper)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he proposes to issue his consultative paper on the mentally ill in Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The consultation paper will address a range of complex issues and will be published as soon as work on them has been completed.

Perinatal Mortality (Report)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he intends to publish the perinatal mortality report.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The report is in the course of final preparation and will be published as soon as is practicable.

Morriston Hospital, Swansea

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales on what date the plastic and burns unit will be established at Morriston hospital, Swansea.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The transfer to Morriston hospital is presently expected to take place in 1992.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Small Farmers

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many small farmers there are in England; and what percentage this is of the total of registered agricultural holdings.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Some 39,000 holdings are usually classified as small, about 26 per cent. of the total.

Meat Inspection

Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria he used in fixing the increase in meat inspection charges at 65 per cent.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Government have made no such increase in charges. The European Commission has published proposals for minimum levels of charges for health inspections in slaughterhouses engaged in intra-Community trade. As has been explained to representatives of the meat trade, we consider the proposed minimum levels to be excessive and we will be seeking changes to the proposals.

Swine Fever

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the outbreaks of swine fever during 1986, including details of the number of cases identified, the number of pigs slaughtered and the reasons why Her Majesty's Government did not impose a ban on imports during the period of the outbreak.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Ten outbreaks of classical swine fever were confirmed between 10 April and 25 June this year. 7,820 pigs were slaughtered. The action taken by the Government ensured that the outbreaks were quickly stamped out.

There were two reasons why the European Community provisions for restricting imports could not be invoked on this occasion. The disease situation in the countries from which we import pigmeat products was not worsening. Also, though there was strong circumstantial evidence to link the outbreaks with feeding of waste scraps from imported pigmeat products, there is no proof that these came from any particular country. A ban on imports would therefore have been legally unsound.

Herring (Irish Sea)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why he has opposed, at the European Economic Community Council of Ministers, the Commission's proposal that herring spawning grounds in the north Irish Sea should remain open until 21 September each year; and if he will make a statement on this decision of the Council of Ministers to reject the Commission's proposal and instead to close the grounds from 1 September.

Mr. Gummer: Fishing for herring is prohibited in two areas of the North Irish sea to protect the spawning grounds. When the closures for 1986 were proposed, the United Kingdom requested a starting date of 1 September in order to safeguard the traditional drift net fishery on the Mourne spawning grounds. Subsequently, at the request of the Northern Irish fishing industry, we asked the Commission to put forward a proposal to amend the starting date for the closure of the Douglas bank spawning grounds to allow this area to remain open until 21 September. The Commission was unwilling to put such a proposal forward for 1986, but I am hopeful that it will do so in its proposals for the quota arrangements for 1987.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Ashley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the value of grain held currently in intervention stocks in the United Kingdom; how many companies are holding such stock; and what monitoring there is to ensure that there is no misappropriation of the stock.

Mr. Gummer: Based on the buying-in price then current, the value of United Kingdom stocks of intervention grain on 17 October 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, was £520 million, of which grain to the value of £479 million was held in commercial stores by 90 companies, the balance in Government-owned stores. The quality and quantity of the stock is monitored by regular visits by the board's agents, the Home Grown Cereals Authority, and by an annual volumetric stocktaking.

Mr. Ashley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) on how many occasions companies involved in holding intervention stocks of agricultural produce have been found to be in financial difficulties; how many have gone into liquidation or are threatened with it; and if he will name the companies involved and state in each case the action taken by officials to safeguard public money and the amount of public money that has been or is likely to be lost as a result of the liquidations that have taken or are likely to take place;

(2) if he will make a statement on the extent of public involvement with the company Trent Grain which holds intervention stocks of agricultural produce, stating (a) whether any public money is likely to be lost, (b) whether there is evidence of any stock loss, (c) when officials first appreciated the nature of the firm's problems, (d) what action was subsequently taken to limit the extent of possible public financial loss and (e) whether officials studied the company reports of the last three years.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the right hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Ashley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report details of the financial monitoring arrangements of companies holding intervention stocks of agricultural produce; how frequent and of what nature are the contacts; what financial information is requested; and at what level responsibility is taken for ensuring that all such companies being paid public money are financially stable.

Mr. Gummer: The Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce makes use of the services of a private business reporting agency in monitoring the financial status of companies offering storage facilities. The board's professional accountants provide advice on the reports received which vary both in content and frequency according to circumstances.

Mr. Ashley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many firms hold intervention stocks of agricultural produce; where they are located; what is the total annual amount paid to such companies; and what is the average amount.

Mr. Gummer: On 30 September 1986, the latest date for which details are available, 249 companies held United Kingdom intervention stocks at the locations listed. The Intervention Board's 1986-87 Supply Estimate contains provision for about £110 million for payments to commercial storekeepers for the handling and storage of intervention produce, an average of £442,000 per company.

Meat (Chemical Treatment)

Mr. Williams asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review his decision not to ban the process of tenderising beef by injection into the jugular vein while the animal is still alive, under constraint in a crush while its head is pulled up.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The proposal to permit tenderisers formed part of our response to the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the slaughter of red meat animals. Our response was issued to interested organisations for comment and we are reviewing our proposals in the light of representations received.

Mr. Williams asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will bring in regulations to enable the consumer to specifically identify meat that has been tenderised by the process of injection of enzymes before the animal was slaughtered;

(2) if he envisages any action to enable consumers to identify meat which has been tenderised by the injection of enzymes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Food Labelling Regulations 1984 already require the name used for any meat which has been treated with proteolytic enzymes or which is derived from an animal that has been so treated shall include or be accompanied by the word "tenderised".

Mr. Williams asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if any research is currently sponsored by his Department to complete the work which had been undertaken until spring 1986 at the Institute of Animal

Research at Newbury into the development of more sensitive tests capable of picking up low residual levels of hormones and antibiotics in carcasses after slaughter.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Research is currently in progress at the Ministry's central veterinary laboratory, Weybridge, on the development and improvement of analytical methods capable of detecting low residual levels of hormones and antibiotics in tissues and body fluids of slaughtered animals.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what forestry development is currently proceeding or is in process of preparation within environmentally sensitive areas; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what drainage projects are planned or proceeding on wetland of ecological or environmental attraction within environmentally sensitive areas;

(3) what current developments are taking place within environmentally sensitive areas which he assesses are likely to be injurious to the present character of such areas; and which of these projects are supported by grants from public funds.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to refuse to make grants towards land drainage or commercial forestry operations within environmentally sensitive areas where such development could be injurious to the quality of the area concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Under existing arrangements, grants for new drainage or forestry work require prior written consent. That consent will be given in environmentally sensitive areas only to developments which are compatible with the environmental features of the area concerned.

Wild Mink

Mr. Pawsey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) at what rate it is estimated that wild mink are increasing in the United Kingdom;

(2) what representations he has received about wild mink in British waterways;

(3) what action he intends to take to reduce the numbers of wild mink;

(4) what reports of damage caused by wild mink he has received over the past three years.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Mink are now well established in the wild in England and Wales, but my Department has no reliable scientific data on the numbers of mink involved, and comprehensive information about the damage caused is not readily available.

Although not a significant agricultural pest, mink are predators of wildfowl, poultry, fisheries and game and in some cases they may cause damage to certain individual enterprises. The Ministry provides specialist advice to anyone experiencing damage and traps are at present loaned free of charge. Responsibility for control of pests none the less rests with the occupier of land.

I am not aware of any recent representations about wild mink in British waterways.

Management Information Systems

Mr. Thurnham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is now able to make available the 1986 returns of his top management information systems.

Mr. Jopling: I am pleased to say that a copy of the 1986 MINIM returns, which cover the objectives and resources used by the Ministry's programmes, has been placed today in the Library of the House.

Fishing Fleet (Decommissioning Scheme)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much cod, haddock, saithe and whiting was caught and landed by vessels which are no longer active in the fleet by virtue of their having been decommissioned since the decommissioning scheme was introduced.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 28 October 1986, c. 85.]: Over 200 vessels have been decommissioned since the scheme was introduced. Details of the total catches by those vessels of the species listed are not readily available and cannot be obtained from the records held by MAFF and DAFS except at disproportionate cost.

DEFENCE

Warship Procurement

12. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement outlining his plans for the future of warship procurement over the next five years.

Mr. Younger: We intend to maintain a substantial warship procurement programme over the next five years, as we have done over the last seven.

Type 23 Frigates

13. Mr. Duffy asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to attain the required ordering pattern of three type 23 frigates per year in order to preserve a proper age structure for a 50 surface ship fleet.

16. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to his statement in July on the placement of orders for type 23 frigates 02, 03 and 04, he will now make a statement on the position in the ordering programme of frigates 05, 06 and 07.

Mr. Younger: Following the announcement I made earlier this year, there are now four of the new class of type 23 frigates on order. No decisions have yet been taken on the size or timing of further orders of follow-on type 23s, but these will, as always, be dependent upon the availability of resources.

Royal Naval Dockyards

14. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on the privatisation of royal naval dockyards.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The timetable for the introduction of commercial management is being achieved. Six tenders have been submitted by companies bidding for the contract to manage the dockyards, and negotiations on the term contract are now in progress. It is hoped to announce a successful contractor for each dockyard at the end of the year, and for that contractor to assume responsibility for the management of the dockyard on vesting day, 6 April 1987.

Fylingdales Early Warning System

15. Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made towards modernisation of the Fylingdales early warning system.

Mr. Stanley: Since the statement I made on 22 May in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough (Sir M. Shaw), a notice of proposed development has been submitted to the North Yorkshire Moors national parks committee and a memorandum of understanding concluded with the Government of the United States.

NATO Air Bases

17. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation has made of the implications of removing United States air bases from Britain.

Mr. Stanley: As stated in the declaration of Alliance Heads of State and Government following the North Atlantic Council meeting in Bonn in 1982:

"The presence of North American armed forces in Europe and the United States strategic nuclear commitment to Europe remain integral to Allied security."

Reykjavik Summit

18. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the proposals put forward at the Reykjavik summit.

21. Mr. Woodall asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the defence implications of the Reykjavik mini-summit.

25. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the Reykjavik summit discussions.

Mr. Stanley: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Members to the statement I made in the House on 23 October. The implications for our defence policy of the arms control process, including the Reykjavik talks, are being fully and continuously considered.

Holy Loch

19. Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what communications he has had with the United States Government relating to the future of Holy Loch.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 23 October.

33. Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions have taken place regarding the future of the United States submarine base on the Holy Loch.

41. Mr. O'Neill asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the future of the United States base in Holy Loch.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) earlier today.

NATO (Nuclear Planning Group)

20. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation nuclear planning group's recent meeting at Gleneagles.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, to the right hon. Member for Llanelli (Mr. Davies) on 23 October, at column 1293.

27. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the meeting of the nuclear planning group at Gleneagles.

30. Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation nuclear planning group meeting at Gleneagles on 20-21 October.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Members to the answer which I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace).

Strategic Defence Initiative

22. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of United Kingdom involvement in research and development related to the United States strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: So far SDI research awards to the United Kingdom amount to $17 million. Other prospects involving both Government research establishments and United Kingdom companies and research organisations are at advanced stages of negotiation, across a broad spectrum of research areas.

34. Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has had discussions with the United States Secretary of Defence concerning the progress of the strategic defence initiative programme since 13 October.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend had a very useful discussion with Mr. Weinberger on a range of issues, including the SDI research programme, at the nuclear planning group meeting in Gleneagles on 21-22 October. The details are confidential.

42. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to discuss the strategic defence initiative with his United States counterparts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: I have no immediate plans to do so. However, the strategic defence initiative is a subject covered in the frequent contacts between Ministers and officials of the British and United States Governments. Most recently it was discussed during the ministerial meeting of NATO's nuclear planning group at Gleneagles on 21-22 October. A copy of the communiqué of that meeting has been placed in the Library.

RAF (Flying Hours Restriction)

23. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the restriction on flying hours in the Royal Air Force imposed when oil prices were high has been modified in the light of lower fuel costs.

Mr. Freeman: There has been no restriction on flying hours in the Royal Air Force since July 1985.

Intermediate Range Nuclear Missiles

24. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Defence what talks he has held recently with the United States Government concerning cuts in intermediate range nuclear missiles.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend had discussions on intermediate range forces with the US Defence Secretary and other NATO Defence Ministers at the recent meeting of the NATO nuclear planning group. A copy of the communiqué issued at the end of that meeting is in the Library.

Service Residences (Malvern)

26. Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the residences up for sale at Malvern are still empty and without offers to purchase; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: All 22 of the Army's surplus married quarters at Wood Farm camp are empty. They have been passed to the Property Services Agency for disposal, and so far 17 have been advertised and offered to service men for sale under the armed forces discounted sales scheme. offers for 16 properties are being processed, and one property for which there is no bid will be sold on the open market by the Property Services Agency. The remaining five surplus quarters will be offered for sale shortly under the discounted sales scheme, and any not sold under the scheme will be sold on the open market.

RAF (Female Pilots)

28. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to change present Royal Air Force policy so as to allow female members of the Royal Air Force to fly aeroplanes.

Mr. Freeman: Women have been eligible for some time to fly as air loadmasters in the RAF. Girls were also given the opportunity to fly following the 1985 reorganisation of the university air squadrons. We have no plans, however, to change our present policy and employ female members of the RAF as pilots or navigators.

Gruinard Island

29. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will report on progress towards the decontamination of Gruinard Island; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Treatment of the island was completed in August. Soil samples have been taken and are now being studied. The results of these studies will be considered by the Ministry of Defence and its independent advisory group before any decision is taken about the future of the island.

Defence Review

31. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for a defence review.

Mr. Younger: None.

Reykjavik Summit

32. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is satisfied that the defence of the United Kingdom would be fully safeguarded if the reductions in nuclear weapons proposed at the Reykjavik summit were all implemented.

Mr. Stanley: The Government fully endorse the bold attempt of the President of the United States to seek far-reaching arms control agreements with the Soviet Union. We have also made it clear that there is obviously a direct relation between major reductions in strategic nuclear forces and conventional forces and it is essential that the two are seen together. Such reductions must also go hand in hand with an improvement of East-West relations generally.

Royal Ordnance Factories

35. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the Royal Ordnance factories.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) on 24 October 1986, at column 967.

Combined Cadet Force

36. Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plan to review his Department's funding of the Combined Cadet Force in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We are presently reviewing the organisation and funding of the Combined Cadet Force to see whether the current arrangements are the most efficient and effective to enable the aims and objectives of the force to be fully realised.

Trident

37. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the capability of Soviet defences to counter the Trident missile when it is deployed.

Mr. Stanley: No developments in Soviet anti-ballistic missile defences are currently foreseen which are likely to negate the deterrent effect of the Trident force within the lifetime of the system.

39. Mr. Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about the relative economics of Trident as the future nuclear deterrent option.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. Trident is the most cost-effective way of providing Britain with the necessary minimum deterrent after Polaris.

Nuclear Deterrent

38. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the purpose of the nuclear deterrent.

Mr. Stanley: I refer my hon. Friend to the description of NATO strategy on pages 12-14 of volume I of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1985".

Northern Ireland

40. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the role and operations of Her Majesty's Forces, including the Ulster Defence Regiment, in support of the civil power in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Stanley: The role of Her Majesty's forces in Northern Ireland is to provide support to the Royal Ulster Constabulary in the fight against terrorism. Nine Regular battalions, one Royal Marine Commando and nine battalions of the Ulster Defence Regiment, together with specialist support from other units, such as the Royal Engineers, are currently deployed in the Province. Elements of the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force also make an important contribution.

Abbott Self-Propelled Gun

43. Sir Patrick Wall asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the 105 mm Abbott Self-Propelled gun will be replaced in the British Army of the Rhine.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We expect to commence phasing out the 105 mm Abbott Self-Propelled gun around the end of this decade.

Missile Launchers

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will identify and quantify the number of missile launchers with a range of up to 200 km currently in Europe credited to North Atlantic Treaty Organisation forces that are (a) non-reloadable and (b) reloadable.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will identify and quantify the number of missile launchers with a range of up to 200 km currently credited to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation armed forces in the United States of America and Europe that are (a) non-reloadable and (b) reloadable.

Mr. Stanley: The "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" shows that there are 90 Lance missile launchers with a range of up to 200 km deployed with NATO forces in Europe. We also understand there are about 12 Lance missile launchers in the United States of America which could reinforce those in Europe. Lance missile launchers are reloadable.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will identify and quantify the number of missile launchers with a range of up to 200 kilometres currently in Europe credited to Warsaw Pact forces that are (a) non-reloadable and (b) reloadable.

Mr. Stanley: Launchers for nuclear missiles with a range of up to 200 km currently deployed with Warsaw Pact forces in Europe are Frog and SS21. The number deployed is shown in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" (annex A, figure 15 under short range systems) as 700. All the launchers are reloadable.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether approval has been given for the construction of underground nuclear weapons storage vaults at Royal Air Force Lakenheath, Royal Air Force Upper Heyford and Royal Air Force Bentwaters.

Mr. Stanley: My Department is involved in continuing discussions with the US Government on possible storage facilities. No decisions have been taken.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by variant the number of (a) short range nuclear weapons with a range of up to 200 km and (b) medium range nuclear missiles with a range of between 200 km and 1000 km that have been removed from Europe as a result of the 27 October 1983 Montebello decision of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation nuclear planning group.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 30 October 1986, c. 262.]: The withdrawals of the following categories of NATO nuclear weapons in Europe since the Montebello decision have been announced to date:

a. In the range up to 200 km, Atomic Demolition Munitions and Honest John missiles have been withdrawn entirely.

b. In the range between 200 km and 1000 km Pershing I missiles have been withdrawn partially

Hong Kong (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the recent visit to Hong Kong by the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Mr. Stanley).

Mr. Stanley: I visited Hong Kong from 27 to 29 August 1986. The main purpose of my visit was to see and talk to personnel from all three services in the Hong Kong garrison, and to have discussions with the Commander British Forces and members of the Hong Kong Government.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Mr. Stanley), met members of the Gurkha Regiment on his recent visit to Hong Kong.

Mr. Stanley: Yes. I had the pleasure of visiting the 6th Queen Elizabeth's Own Gurkha Rifles, the 1st and 2nd Battalions 7th Duke of Edinburgh's Own Gurkha Rifles, and the 10th Princess Mary's Own Gurkha Rifles, and I also met members of the Queen's Gurkha Signals and the Queen's Gurkha Engineers.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Mr. Stanley), met representatives of the anti-nuclear lobby concerning the proposed construction of the Daya Bay nuclear power plant on his recent visit to Hong Kong.

Mr. Stanley: No.

Gurkha Regiment

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Gurkha Regiment are based in Hong Kong at the latest date.

Mr. Stanley: On 31 August there were about 5,000 Gurkhas stationed in Hong Kong, including trainees.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Gurkha soldiers served in Hong Kong since 1956 to 1986; and how many have been dismissed the service.

Mr. Stanley: Some 29,000 Gurkha soldiers have served in Hong Kong since 1956. Of these, a total of 156 men since 1980 have been dismissed or discharged on disciplinary grounds while serving in Hong Kong. This includes the 110 members of 1st/7th Gurkha Rifles discharged in August this year. Records kept prior to 1980 do not specify location at time of discharge.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Gurkha soldiers have been dismissed from Her Majesty's forces since 1956.

Mr. Stanley: Since 1956, 369 Gurkha soldiers have been dismissed or discharged on disciplinary grounds from Her Majesty's forces.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has of the number of people directly and indirectly employed in (a) maintaining the independent nuclear deterrent, (b) the servicing of United States bases in the United Kingdom and (c) the Trident programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is estimated that (a) 11,000 MOD civilians are directly employed in maintaining the independent nuclear deterrent, (b) United States bases and service men and their British employees provide about 30,000 direct and indirect jobs including those generated by the purchase of goods and services in the United Kingdom, (c) the Trident programme will create an average of 8,000 direct and 7,000 indirect job opportunities throughout its procurement period, rising to 15,000 and 12,000 in the peak years of the programme. The number of people indirectly employed in maintaining the independent nuclear deterrent is not known.

Nimrod

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the Nimrod AEW mission system avionics are now operating at an acceptable standard;

(2) what is his assessment of the present efficiency of the GEC avionics radar in the AEW Nimrod programme;

(3) if he is considering accepting the Nimrod AEW at a lower level of performance specification than originally required.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I shall answer shortly.

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest available information of the current cost of the AEW Nimrod programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: To date, some £930 million (VAT included) at current prices has been spent or committed on the Nimrod AEW project.

DEFENCE

Research and Development

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent by his Department during the last year for which figures are available, on research and development; and what proportion of that was spent in Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence plans to spend £398 million on research and £1,940 million on development in the present financial year. Full detail is given in table 3.2 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1986" part II. Defence expenditure is not accounted for on a regional basis.

Schools of Music

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he will be making his decision on the defence schools of music.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend expects to make a decision soon.

Regular Reserve

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence, for each of the last three years for which information is available and for the year to date how many personnel of the Regular reserve have been (a) called to Army reporting centres, (b) reported to Army reporting centres and (c) undertaken uniformed service of at least 48 hours duration.

Mr. Freeman: The number of Regular reservists involved in the activities listed for the current year and three preceding years is as follows:

(a) Called to annual reporting centres

	Number
1983-84	46,303
1984-85	41,478
1985-86	36,579
1986-87	Not available

(b) Reported to annual reporting centres

	Number	per cent.
1983-84	40,730	88
1984-85	35,911	87
1985-86	31,482	86
1986-87	Not available

(c) Uniformed service (training) exceeding 48 hours

	Number
1983-84	Nil
1984-85	3,300
1985-86	2,300
1986-87	[1]2,000

[1] Total estimated 2,300.

Annual voluntary training for Regular reservists was first introduced in 1984-85: prior to this, only the annual reporting exercise was in force.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. Charles Wardle asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is yet in a position to announce a decision on the introduction of ethnic monitoring for the armed forces.

Mr. Freeman: We have decided to introduce ethnic monitoring at the recruitment stage for all formal applicants and new entrants to the armed forces. The target date for its introduction is 1 April 1987. Monitoring will be on the basis of self-classification, as is recommended by the Commission for Racial Equality, and will be at the point of application only. The information derived will be held in the strictest confidence and used solely to produce a profile of the ethnic composition of both those applying for service and those subsequently selected.

This decision was taken as a means of monitoring our success in attracting applications to join the armed forces from all racial groups and to provide an indication of the relative success rate in entry selection. As a means of re-emphasising our commitment to equal opportunities, we also intend to re-issue a Defence Council instruction which sets out the services' responsibilities under the Race Relations Act 1976, the means by which grievances of those serving can be investigated and the existence of administrative and disciplinary sanctions which would be imposed to counter any form of racial prejudice, and which emphasises the unacceptability of any form of racial prejudice within the armed forces. In addition, all service recruitment literature and advertisements will shortly declare that the services are equal opportunity employers under the terms of the Race Relations Act 1976. Written guidance is being issued to recruiting staffs on the need to avoid racial discrimination in recruitment to formalise existing policy.

All those who apply to join the armed forces and meet the necessary entry standards, will continue to be considered for available places regardless of colour, race or creed. Those who are successful will find that they are welcomed into the services.

Nimrod

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is considering accepting the Nimrod AEW at a lower level of performance specification than originally required.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986]: There has been no recent change to ASR 400, which is the baseline against which both the remaining contenders in this competition are being judged.

PRIME MINISTER

Poverty Trap

Mr. Hancock asked the Prime Minister if she will introduce changes in the tax and benefit systems to seek to remove many one-parent families with young children from the poverty trap.

The Prime Minister: Changes are already embodied in the Social Security Act 1986 which will benefit all low-paid workers with children, including single parents, who might be affected by the poverty trap. The calculation of family credit (a new benefit for working families replacing family income supplement) and housing benefit on a net rather than a gross income basis, will mean that workers will no longer find that higher earnings can leave them worse off because of reduced income-related benefits. The future of the additional personal (tax) allowance is considered in the Green Paper "The Reform of Personal Taxation" (Cmnd. 9756) and we are considering the responses to this process of consultation.

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister (1) what the Secretary to the Cabinet understood to be the possible consequences of a failure to establish an official inquiry into the leak of the Solicitor-General's letter on the Westland affair, following his discussions with the Attorney-General in January 1986; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what discussions she had with the former Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks about the substance and details of her speech to the House on 27 January in relation to the Westland affair; and if she will make a statement;

(3) by what means and in what form she originally intended the letter of 6 January fom the Solicitor-General about the Westland affair to be brought into the public domain, prior to the leak of the letter on 6 January; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As was stated in paragraph 28 of the Government's response to the third and fourth reports of the Defence Committee, full accounts of the matters with which the fourth report was concerned have already been given by myself and other Ministers in statements in Parliament, speeches in debates and answers to parliamentary questions, and by the head of the Home Civil Service in his evidence to the Committee. The Government stand by those accounts, and see no reason to qualify or add to them.

Education (Financing)

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister if, pursuant to the announcement by the Secretary of State for Education and Science on 30 October, she will now initiate discussions between relevant departments on the transfer of responsibility for financing state education from local education authorities to the central exchequer; if she will call for a full report to be prepared thereon; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I shall continue to seek all possible means for improving standards in education.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Uganda

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further aid he will give to Uganda in the form of medicines.

Mr. Chris Patten: Between 1981 and the end of this financial year we will have spent £200,000 on the transportation of medical supplies to Uganda. These have been provided by manufacturers at little or no cost. We are considering a request for continued support of this kind.

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further aid he will give to Uganda in the form of Land Rovers for the police force.

Mr. Chris Patten: 26 Land Rovers for the Uganda police force, being provided under the British aid programme for Uganda, have been shipped in the past two weeks. A further 16 Land Rovers are due to be shipped before the end of November. Any request for further Land Rovers for the Uganda police force will be considered after the present vehicles have been in operation for a period.

Bophuthatswana

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 27 October, whether any of the projects for which aid has been made available have been situated in Bophuthatswana.

Mr. Chris Patten: None of the projects for which aid has been made available is in Bophuthatswana.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy towards supporting aid projects in Bophuthatswana.

Mr. Chris Patten: We do not recognise any of the so-called independent homelands and support no aid projects within Bophuthatswana.

TRANSPORT

M1 (Lighting)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many sections of the M1 motorway lighting systems are not working properly between London and Wakefield; who are the responsible authorities for maintenance; and what method of inspection is carried out by those responsible.

Mr. John Moore: All sections of the M1 motorway lighting generally give satisfactory performance notwithstanding minor defects which arise from time to time. There are several outstanding faults currently requiring urgent attention between Watford Gap service area and junction 16 in Northamptonshire. These cannot be repaired at present because of adjacent major road reconstruction works. They should be repaired during November 1986.

Between junctions 8 and 14 in Hertfordshire major maintenance of the central reservation is in progress. This work interferes with the lighting apparatus and opportunity is therefore being taken to renovate the lighting at the same time. As a result only every other lantern is lit, while the works are in progress. This may create the impression that the lighting is faulty in the sections affected.

As Secretary of State I am the highway authority for the M1 motorway and responsible for lighting maintenance on it. I appoint agents to act for me, who either undertake the work themselves, or employ contractors, as follows:

M1 section	Agent	Road lighting maintenance contractor
Greater London	London Borough of Barnet	T. Cartledge & Co.
Hertfordshire, Bedfordshire and Buckinghamshire	Hertfordshire County Council	Eastern Electricity Board
Northamptonshire	Northamptonshire County Council	East Midlands Electricity Board
Leicestershire, Junction 21	Leicester County Council	Leicester County Council
Remainder of Leicestershire, Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire	Derbyshire County Council	East Midlands Electricity Board

Night-time visual inspections are carried out at intervals not exceeding 28 days.

Driving Test

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Transport if there are any plans to introduce motorway driving tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no plans to introduce motorway driving tests. The current driving test provides an adequate assessment of a candidate's basic driving skills. There is no evidence that newly qualified drivers are involved disproportionately in motorway accidents. Safety in general is much better for motorways than other roads.

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of applicants pass the official driving test on their first attempt.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is not collected on a routine basis. Results of a driving test sample survey conducted in 1985 were that 45 per cent. of candidates passed their driving test on the first attempt.

A38 (Devon)

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement on the building of crash barriers on the A38 in Devon.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friend hopes to be able to announce revised criteria for the provision of safety fences shortly.

I recently received a delegation from Devon county council about the need for additional fencing on the A38 and am considering the matter.

A30 (Sourton Cross and Launceston)

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the final route for the A30 between Sourton Cross and Launceston.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department's preferred route for the improvement of this stretch of the A30 remains as announced in July 1982. Whether this will be the final route depends on whether a public inquiry is needed, and, if so, on its outcome.

Parking

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have been caused by indiscriminate parking on roads in each of the following years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans are being considered to help alleviate the dangers of indiscriminate parking by motorists.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The "Highway Code" sets out clearly motorists' responsibilities for parking sensibly and safely. Information and publicity campaigns remind them about particular dangers they may cause. Good practice is encouraged in a variety of ways, ranging from yellow lines to wheel clamps and fines. The most recent innovation is the extended fixed penalty system to ensure that fines are paid.

Drink-Driving Campaign

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a statement on the results of the spring and summer drink-driving campaign.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The campaign was part of our long-term aim to make people more aware of the dangers of drinking and driving all through the year. Following the publicity, we have distributed 700,000 copies of our booklet "The Facts about Drinking and Driving". I shall follow up this increased public awareness by providing more factual information and a clear cut message "Don't Drink and Drive".

M1-M62 Link

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the report which he has commissioned into a possible link between the M1 in the vicinity of junction 39 and the M62 in the vicinity of junction 25.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I expect to receive the consultant's report in the summer of 1987. I hope to make an announcement in 1987.

A629/A650 Airedale Route

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will compare the expected outturn cost for stage 1 of the A629/A650 Airedale route with the amount budgeted for the project when it originally appeared in the road programme.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: When the Kildwick to Keighley section of the Airedale route first appeared as a separate scheme (Cmnd. 7132, "Policy for Roads: England 1978") the listed cost was £7 million at November 1976 prices. This is equivalent to £17·3 million at today's prices. The tender sum is £14·8 million. The final works cost is likely to be higher than this.

Rochester Way Relief Road

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends to increase the capacity of the Rochester Way relief road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Moore: Since I took over the scheme from the GLC, I have been looking carefully at design details to ensure that it will properly serve its purpose of removing traffic from surrounding roads, but, as yet, I have no firm plans.

Motorways

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost of maintenance per mile of the M3 and how this figure compares with the average for other motorways; if he will give a separate figure for the M1 and M25; if he will indicate which is the most expensive section of the M3 to maintain; and how often the stretch between junctions 3 and 4 has been repaired in each of the last five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Motorway maintenance costs vary considerably with the age of the road and the incidence of major renewal schemes. Expenditure on structural maintenance in 1984-85 was as follows:

	£/mile
M3	82,592
All motorways	66,059
M1	149,657
M25	4,511

The highest expenditure so far on structural maintenance of the M3 has been incurred between junctions 3 and 4, the first section to be opened in 1971; 5·6 miles of both carriageways of this section have been renewed under a phased programme of five schemes undertaken between 1981 and 1986, at a total cost of about £6·5 million.

Research and Development

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on research and development, during the last year for which figures are available, by his Department; and what proportion was spent in Wales.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: During the last year for which published figures are available (1984-85), £32·236 million was spent on research and development in the Department of Transport. It is not known how much of this was spent in Wales.

British Airports Authority plc

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements govern the relationship between the Government and the British Airports Authority plc between vesting and privatisation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The British Airports Authority's business was vested in BAA plc on 1 August 1986. Pending the flotation of BAA plc in summer 1987, all shares will be retained by the Government and the company will remain in the public sector. During this period the powers of the Secretary of State over BAA plc will be those of a sole shareholder over his company.

The members of the authority have become directors of BAA plc, and Sir Norman Payne remains as chairman, his present appointment having been extended to 31 July 1989.

A new memorandum and articles of association have been adopted for the company; these will apply while the company remains in the ownership of the Government. The Secretary of State has also concluded a memorandum of understanding with the directors dealing with aspects of their relationship not covered in the articles of association.

The principle underlying these arrangements is to preserve over BAA plc, while it remains in the public sector, controls which are similar to those that were hitherto exercised over the British Airports Authority as a statutory corporation.

I have placed copies of the memorandum and articles of association and of the memorandum of understanding in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Pollution

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department is considering the clean-up of estuarial waters used for harvesting shellfish on a commercial basis.

Mr. John Patten: Water authorities are responsible for determining their own relative spending priorities. The existence of commercial shell fisheries in their area is one of the factors taken into account. A number of major projects are currently under way to improve estuarial waters. For example, the southern water authority is proposing to spend over £20 million on outfall improvements in the Solent and Southampton Water areas, which will improve water quality over shellfish beds in the area. My Department is keeping the matter under review, but considers that there is no need to depart from existing policy.

Basildon (Housing)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement regarding the housing situation in the Vange area in Basildon, and in particular regarding the houses purchased from the local authority, but which have since developed major structural defects.

Mr. John Patten: I refer my hon. Friend to the announcement I made in the course of my reply to his Adjournment debate on Tuesday 4 November.

Single Persons (Housing)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what further initiatives he plans for housing for single people.

Mr. John Patten: My Department's report "Housing Initiatives for Single People of Working Age" describes a number of ways in which both the private and public sector can provide housing for single people. Other measures are the Government's hostels initiative, the introduction of shorthold tenancies and other steps to encourage lettings in the private rented sector. Further measures will include new housing association schemes for shared accommodation for young people wishing to move to take up employment. I outlined these and other measures in my response to a debate initiated by my hon. Friend on 4 November.

Planning Appeals

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning appeals were processed through his Department in 1985; and how that number compares with those processed in 1975, 1965 and 1955, respectively.

Mr. Tracey: The number of planning appeals under section 36 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971, or the equivalent earlier powers, processed by the Department is best measured by reference to the number determined and the number withdrawn (with the implication that work done on them was abortive). The numbers for the years requested by my hon. Friend are:

Years	Appeals determined	Appeals withdrawn
1955	n.a.	n.a.
1965	8,697	4,357
1975	11,846	4,235
1985	14,639	2,110

n.a. = not available.

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average time taken to process a planning appeal in 1985 between the receipt of the inspector's report and the announcement of his determination; and how that time compares with 10, 20, and 30 years before, respectively.

Mr. Tracey: I take it that my hon. Friend's question relates only to appeals recovered for decision by the Secretary of State, and not to cases decided by inspectors.

Information on the time taken between receipt of the inspector's report and the issue of the decision is not available before 1977 in respect of cases decided following an inquiry, or before 1981 in respect of cases decided on the basis of written representations. The Department calculates the time taken in the form of the median time.

The median time between receipt of the inspector's report and the issue of the decision letter in inquiry cases was 10 weeks in 1977 and 13 weeks in 1985; and between receipt of the site visit report and the issue of the decision letter in written representations cases was nine weeks in 1981 and 11 weeks in 1985. By the third quarter of 1986, these median times had reduced to eight weeks and nine weeks respectively.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the estimated costs and savings of the proposed transfer of the functions of the Property Services Agency's Glasgow area office to Edinburgh for the financial years 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Chope: The proposed reorganisation of the United Kingdom territorial organisation of PSA will not come into effect until 1 April 1987, and there will, therefore, be no costs and savings in 1986-87. The costs and savings in the following two years are:

£ million

Cost 1987-88	Savings 1988-89
1·65	1·09

There are further substantial savings in later years and an investment appraisal shows that payback is expected to occur in 1989-90.

Apart from these savings the reorganisation will produce substantial benefits, which cannot be quantified, through better service to clients and better value for money. It fulfils the recommendation of the PAC made in its 30th report 1983-84 and its 19th report 1984-85 that the chain of command should be shortened.

The net costs and savings include savings through increased managerial efficiency through the organisation as a whole.

Specific figures for the Glasgow area office are not available.

Out-of-Town Shopping Centres

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the number of current planning applications and appeals, respectively, relating to out-of-town shopping centres sited on established green belt land in England, giving the total square footage of each;

(2) if he will list the number of current planning appeals relating to out-of-town shopping centres in England, giving the total square footage of each;

(3) if he will list the number of current outstanding planning applications for out-of-town shopping centres in England giving the total square footage of each application.

Mr. Tracey: Although the Department is notified of applications for retail developments which represent substantial departures from the development plan, comprehensive information about applications for retail development, including whether the development is proposed on a site in an approved green belt, is not collected centrally. We have, however, announced that we propose to issue a direction requiring local planning authorities to consult the Department before granting permission for developments involving retail floorspace of 250,000 square feet or more.

I shall write to my hon. Friend with details of the appeals and called-in applications at present before my right hon. Friend for decision, and with details of the extent to which the proposals concerned are in approved green belt land.

Rural Development Areas

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the incentives available in the rural development areas to attract suitable employment projects.

Mr. Tracey: The Development Commission, in conjunction with its agency the Council for Small Industries in Rural Areas where appropriate, provides the following main incentives in rural development areas to attract suitable employment projects:

1. 100 per cent. financed advance factory building programme;
2. 50 per cent. financed factory building programme in partnership with local authorities;
3. 25 per cent. grants to the private sector for redundant building conversions;
4. Technical, managerial and business advice to small firms and the provision of loans;
5. Grants to help the establishment of local enterprise agencies;
6. Grant-aid for rural tourism projects;
7. Grant-aid towards special projects where there are clear employment benefits.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the projects that are planned in the rural development areas bounded by the Crewe and Nantwich constituency, and the total cost of projects in the rural development area in Cheshire for 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Tracey: Information in the form requested will take a little time to prepare. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as it is available.

Council House Sales

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the table giving information on sales of dwellings by each local authority in England which was referred to in the answer given to the hon. Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 1 July, Official Report, column 460.

Mr. John Patten: I have today placed in the Library the latest figures, to which my hon. Friend refers, giving information reported by each local authority in England on the progress of council house sales to the end of June 1986.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Royal Greenwich Observatory

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will be replying to the letter sent to him by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe on 25 September about the siting of the Royal Greenwich Observatory.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has replied today.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Westland plc (Solicitor-General's Letter)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General what preparatory action he took and what discussions he had with the Director of Public Prosecutions and his staff concerning the possibility of a police inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the leak of the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January, in the event that an official internal inquiry into the leak was not established; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I have nothing to add to the oral answer I gave to the hon. Member on 3 November 1986, at column 680.

Operation Bazaar (Aircraft Losses)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Attorney-General if the Lord Chancellor will take steps to release from classification all papers relating to the loss of three Royal Air Force Liberators from 358 Squadron while taking part in Operation Bazaar on 23-24 January 1945 from Jessore and those relating to the subsequent investigation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

All the surviving RAF operational records relating to the loss of three Liberators from 358 Squadron on 22-23 January 1945 are open in the Public Record Office. The only other relevant RAF records are the casualty files, and as confidential personal documents these remain closed. The records of the special operations executive held in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are classified and they too remain closed. General inquiries from members of the public related to the casualty files are answered by the air historical branch in the MOD, and SOE inquiries are handled by the SOE adviser in the FCO.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Amusement Arcades

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the extent of the correlation between the use by young people of amusement arcades and their subsequent acquisition of a gambling habit.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have noted carefully reports which suggest that some young people in some areas may have acquired a habit of gambling on amusement machines, and we shall continue to monitor the situation. However, there seems at present to be little hard evidence about the extent to which use of amusement machines may lead to the acquisition of a habit, either as regards these machines or, subsequently, other forms of gambling.

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to restrict the age at which children may enter amusement arcades; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have at present no plans to do so.

Police (Establishments)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out, by force, the current strength and vacancies for police forces in England and Wales and show the numbers of agreed increases in establishment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information as at 30 September 1986 is as follows:

Police Force	Authorised Establishment	Actual strength	Vacancies	Number of additional posts approved since May 1979
Avon and Somerset	3,020	2,996	24	167

[1] Further increases of 25 posts for Essex and 36 for Kent have been approved with effect from 1 November 1986.
[2] Further increases of 50 posts for Thames Valley have been approved with effect from 1 November 1986 and 50 with effect from 1 April 1987.
[3] In the Metropolitan police seconded officers, for example, at university or on central services, count against the authorised establishment. The strength figure given includes 94 such officers.
[4] The total increase does not take account of the reduction of 224 in the City of London's establishment.

Research and Development

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by his Department on research and development during the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion was spent in Wales.

Mr. Waddington: The Home Office spent £14·2 million on research and development in 1985-86: the information as to what proportion of this was spent in Wales is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Extradition Law (Reform)

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when, pursuant to his reply to the right hon. Member for Brent, East on 24 October, Official Report, column 1009, he proposes to bring forward legislation for extradition law reform.

Mr. Mellor: In the next Session.

Police (Car Patrols)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the effectiveness of mixed sex police car patrols compared with all-male patrols.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner of the Metropolis informs us that experience has shown that all-male, mixed sex and all-female car crews can all be effective. Officers are selected for these duties on the basis of aptitude, not their sex.

Mr. Vanunu (Kidnapping)

Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an immediate inquiry into allegations that Mr. Vanunu, an Israeli citizen, was kidnapped in London by agents of Mossad, the Israeli secret police and was subsequently illegally removed from Britain.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 3 November to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow), at column 325.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Papers

Sir John Page asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which of his Department's papers have been made available to the public since October 1985.

Syria

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report, country by country, what response he has received from each member country of the European Community to Her Majesty's Government's decision to break off diplomatic relations with Syria consequential upon the Syrian Government's complicity in the Nezar Hindawi case.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement that my right hon. and learned Friend made on 28 October, at columns 167-74.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will make representations to the Government of China in support of the request of Hong Kong's sporting bodies for Hong Kong to be recognised as an international sporting nation after 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The "Joint Declaration on the Question of Hong Kong" provides that after 1997 the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region may on its own, using the name "Hong Kong, China", maintain and develop relations and conclude and implement agreements with states, regions and relevant international organisations in various fields, including the sporting field. Arrangements for putting this provision into effect will be a matter for consultation with the Chinese authorities in due course.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding athletes from Hong Kong competing in international sporting events under the name of Hong Kong after 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: None.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the provision of services for handicapped people in Hong Kong.

Mr. Renton: A full range of services for handicapped people in Hong Kong is provided by Government Departments and voluntary agencies and co-ordinated by the commissioner for rehabilitation by means of an annual review of the rehabilitation programme plan.

The commissioner is advised by the rehabilitation development co-ordinating committee, which is made up of representatives of the relevant Government Departments and voluntary agencies. Services are aimed at integrating handicapped people into the community, with the objective of enabling them to develop their physical, mental and social capabilities to the full.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report the population of the satellite towns of Yuen Long, Tuen Mun, Tai Po, Sha Tin and Tsuen Wan in the New Territories at the latest date.

Mr. Renton: The latest population figures for the satellite towns in the New Territories are contained in the Hong Kong 1986 by-census and as at 11 March 1986 were:

	Figure
Yuen Long	75,740
Tuen Mun	262,458
Tai Po	119,679
Sha Tin	355,810
Tsuen Wan (including Kwai Chung and Tsing Yi)	645,603

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Hong Kong Government have for extending the mass transit railway to the satellite towns in the New Territories of Sha Tin, Tuen Mun, Tai Po and Yuen Long; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: There are no plans at present to extend the mass transit railway to Sha Tin. However, Sha Tin and Tai Po new towns are at present served by the Kowloon Canton railway, which provides a full, electric service.

A light rail transit system is being constructed by the Kowloon Canton Railway Corporation to serve Tuen Mun and Yuen Long in the Western New Territories, and will be operational in the latter half of 1988. Both the Kowloon Canton Railway Corporation and the Mass Transit Railway Corporation are investigating the possibility of constructing a rail link to join the Tuen Mun-Yuen Long light rail system with the existing mass transit railway terminal at Tsuen Wan, thereby providing a direct rail link with the urban area.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the rights of trade unions in Hong Kong after 1997.

Mr. Renton: The "Joint Declaration on the Question of Hong Kong" provides that the rights and freedoms as provided for by the laws previously in force in Hong Kong shall be maintained in the Special Administrative Region. These provisions include reference to the freedom to form and join trade unions.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the working of the basic law consultative committee on the future of Hong Kong after 1997; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The drafting of the basic law for the future Hong Kong Special Administrative Region is a matter for the Chinese Government. A Basic Law Drafting Committee, comprising 59 members — 23 of them from Hong Kong — has been established to carry out this work. A Basic Law Consultative Committee also has been established in Hong Kong to reflect the views of the people of Hong Kong on the basic law. It has held several rounds of meetings and has been able to convey to the drafting committee a wide spectrum of views. We welcome this.

China (Reunification)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the peaceful reunification of China; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Since 1972 successive Governments have acknowledged the position of the Chinese Government that Taiwan is a province of the People's Republic of China. We consider that this matter is China's internal affair to be settled by the Chinese people themselves.

Bophuthatswana

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 23 October, Official Report, columns 973-74, he will list the official contacts since March 1983 with black leaders in South Africa generally and in homelands other than Bophuthatswana in particular.

Mrs. Chalker: Ministers and officials have had many official contacts with black leaders in South Africa since 1983. A comprehensive list is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 27 October, what evidence he has of a multiracial society in Bophuthatswana.

Mrs. Chalker: The policy of apartheid applied in other parts of South Africa does not appear to be applied within Bophuthatswana; but the latter's creation was itself an expression of the South African Government's policy of "grand apartheid".

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 27 October what are the latest figures he has of the actual financial dependence of Bophuthatswana on South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: I cannot add to the answer that I gave my hon. Friend on 29 October, at column 171.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs further to his answer to the hon.

Member for Ynys Môn of 27 October, what efforts he has made to inspect the budget of Bophuthatswana to discover the actual dependence of Bophuthatswana on South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: None.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 27 October, he will state the evidence to support his contention that the existence of Bophuthatswana is an expression of the practice of apartheid in South Africa as a whole.

Mrs. Chalker: Bophuthatswana was created by the South African Government to further their policy of separate development.

Tswana People

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the number of Tswana people in (i) South Africa and (ii) Botswana.

Mrs. Chalker: The information is as follows: (i) According to South African estimates there are approximately 1,522,000 Tswana in South Africa, excluding those resident in Bophuthatswana. In 1984 the population of Bophuthatswana was estimated at some 1,667,500, of whom the majority were Tswana.

(ii) the population of Botswana was estimated in 1984 as 1,047,000, of whom the majority are Tswana.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what account he takes in formulating his policy on Bophuthatswana of representations made in the past by representatives of Her Majesty's Government as to the right of the Tswana people in South Africa to self-determination.

Mrs. Chalker: We seek to take account of all relevant factors in formulating our policy towards Bophuthatswana, as to all parts of the Republic of South Africa.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 27 October, what evidence he has of the desire of the Tswana people for self-determination in the creation of Bophuthatswana.

Mrs. Chalker: None. Bophuthatswana was created without recourse to a referendum.

United Nations (Advancement of Women)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the non-Governmental organisations he has consulted prior to this week's discussion of the implications of the United Nations forward looking strategies for the advancement of women in the third committee of the General Assembly of the United Nations in New York.

Mr. Renton: We are in regular contact with NGOs, particularly through the Women's National Commission and the National Council of Voluntary Organisations, on the implications of the United Nations forward looking strategies for the advancement of women. Their views are taken into account when policy is formulated.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the call for a special session of the United Nations on women early in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: At the 31st session of the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women, the United Kingdom joined consensus on a resolution which called for the holding of a special session of the commission in 1987. We also joined consensus on the adoption of the agenda of this session, namely, the implications of the Nairobi forward looking strategies for the advancement of women for programme planning in the United Nations system, monitoring and review and appraisal of the implementation of the forward looking strategies, strengthening the Commission on the Status of Women, and the programme of future work and provisional agenda for the 33rd session of the commission. This resolution and decision were endorsed unanimously by the Economic and Social Council, of which the United Kingdom is a member. We hope the meeting will be able to conclude successfully all the work in its agenda.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his answer of 29 October, Official Report, column 318, he will publish details of approaches made (a) to the International Red Cross and (b) the Argentine Government concerning visits to the Falkland Islands by Argentine families.

Mr. Renton: We remain ready to accept a suitably prepared visit by a bona fide group of close relatives under arrangements made and supervised by the International Committee of the Red Cross. We have made our position clear on a number of occasions to, among others, Parliament, the press and the ICRC. We have informed the Argentine Government directly on a number of occasions. Details of such communications are of course confidential. We still await a positive response fron Argentina.

Mr. Vanunu (Kidnapping)

Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will instruct Her Majesty's ambassador in Tel Aviv to press the Israeli Government for clarification about the involvement of the Israeli intelligence service in the alleged kidnapping of Mr. Vanunu in London and his subsequent illegal removal from Britain.

Mr. Renton: In the absence of evidence that any crime has been committed or that Mr. Vanunu was removed from Britain against his will, we have no grounds for intervening with the Israeli authorities.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Car Parks (Privatisation)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the result of the consideration by the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) of the further privatisation of car parks operated by that Department; what factors preclude the privatisation of all such car parks rather than a proportion of them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The Department has undertaken an assessment of the cost-effectiveness of privatisation of car parks outside Belfast which has established that it is desirable to offer car parks in groups to provide a profitable basis for testing the market.

The current programme provides for a significant increase in the extension of the charging system in provincial towns in the course of the next year. This will permit groups of car parks to be offered for management by the private sector in line with the Department's objective to privatise this activity where it is considered cost effective to do so.

Castlereagh Borough Councillors

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to the total of (a) attendance allowances, (b) expenses and (c) travelling allowances paid to members of Castlereagh borough council in each month in 1985 and in 1986 to 30 October.

Mr. Needham: The information is not available in the form requested.

The total amounts paid to members in the financial year 1985-86 are as follows:

Attendance allowances	9,332
Expenses	1,668
Travelling allowances	3,478

Diplock Trials

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the introduction of three judge courts into Diplock trials is to be discussed at the meeting of the Anglo-Irish Conference on 31 October.

Mr. Scott: The meeting which took place on 31 October was a special meeting within the framework of the conference concentrating on cross-border security co-operation.

At the last full meeting of the Intergovernmental Conference on 6 October, both sides agreed that the next regular meeting of the conference would consider legal matters, including the administration of justice.

WALES

Employment and Industry (EC Report)

43. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's report to the European Commission on Her Majesty's Government's assumptions about employment and industry until 1990 as it affects Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The United Kingdom regional development programme 1986-90 is the latest United Kingdom document in a series required of all member Governments of the Community as the basis for applications for European Regional Development Fund assistance. Because of Community requirements, the programme contains assumptions about the number of unemployed claimants in each region of the United Kingdom in 1990, but in common with earlier documents in this series, no forecasts of unemployment have been made. The assumptions are based upon the national unemployment assumption from the 1986 Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9207) covering the period 1986-87 to 1988-89. The 1990 figure was derived by repeating the assumption for 1988-89 a further year. The national assumption was allocated to regions in proportion to 1985 regional unemployment to reach regional assumptions. No specific assumption about industry was made but in some cases the programme document refers to possible trends.

AIDS

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will publish in the Official Report for each health authority the number of persons receiving treatment for acquired immune deficiency syndrome for each of the past five years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: In Wales, nine individuals have so far been diagnosed as having AIDS, of whom seven have died. So as not to compromise medical confidentiality, it is not our Department's practice to state where individual patients are being treated.

Population (Facility Statistics)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information his Department collect on (i) the percentage of the population having access to a post office in their vicinity, (ii) the percentage of the population having access to a dental surgery in their vicinity, (iii) the percentage of the population having access to a public transport stop in their vicinity, and (iv) the percentage of the population having access to a store satisfying daily needs in their vicinity.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not collected centrally.

Holiday Homes

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the houses classed as second homes or holiday homes in Wales are unfit or are lacking one or more of the basic amenities; and what are the corresponding statistics for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: It was estimated in the 1981 census that there were about 23,000 second and holiday homes in Wales. The results of the 1979 Welsh housing and dwelling survey suggested that about one sixth of second and holiday homes in Wales were unfit. The proportion lacking one or more of the basic amenities is not known. No relevant statistics are yet available for years since 1979.

Research and Development

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent by his Department during the last year for which figures are available on research and development.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The Department's expenditure in 1985-86 was £2 million.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was allocated to projects in each of the Welsh counties by the European regional development fund during the last year for which figures are available; and for each year since 1979.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information requested is as follows:

(a) European Regional Development Fund (Quota) Allocations

County	1985	1984	1983	1982	1981	1980	1979
Clwyd	18·7	4·8	10·1	5·9	2·8	6·5	3·6
Dyfed	14·7	3·9	3·7	4·6	0·8	2·2	2·7
Gwent	3·4	8·8	10·6	22·6	6·9	5·5	0·3
Gwynedd	3·8	1·5	1·8	1·5	1·9	1·1	2·1
Mid Glamorgan	3·8	18·6	6·5	3·8	1·4	1·4	2·1
Powys	1·3	1·5	nil	0·4	0·6	1·0	0·1
South Glamorgan	2·8	22·9	6·5	5·4	6·5	13·9	11·0
West Glamorgan	8·4	2·3	7·1	2·0	3·2	1·5	3·8
All Wales Total	56·9	65·6	47·3	50·7	25·5	33·1	25·7

Notes:

(1) All figures have been independently rounded.

(2) The all-Wales figures for 1982, 1983 and 1984 include commitments on projects which cannot be allocated on a county basis. Projects where actual expenditure is definable to a single county may also benefit a much wider area.

(3) Figures represent gross commitments approved by the European Commission each year. Commitments in each year therefore depend in part on the level of schemes being undertaken by local and public authorities which are eligible for ERDF support, and fulfil the Community's priorities for such assistance.

In addition to commitments under the fund's main stream "quota" a further £18 million has been allocated under special "non quota" provisions for areas affected by the rundown in the steel industry, broken down as follows:

(b) European Regional Development Fund (Non-Quota) Allocations

County	1984	1982
Clwyd	1·8	2·7
Dyfed	0·7	—
Gwent	2·0	2·7
South Glamorgan	0·7	2·7
West Glamorgan	2·0	2·7
All Wales Total	7·2	10·0

Notes:

(1) All figures are independently rounded.

(2) The allocation to Dyfed in 1984 is in respect of the Llanelli travel to work area only; the allocation to West Glamorgan in 1984 is for disbursement in an area comprising the county of West Glamorgan and that part of the former Port Talbot travel to work area which lies in Mid Glamorgan.

Out-of-town Shopping Centres

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of current outstanding planning applications for out-of-town shopping centres in Wales, giving the total square footage of each application.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of current planning appeals relating to out-of-town shopping centres in Wales, giving the total square footage of each.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The current planning appeals relating to out-of-town shopping centres in Wales are:

1. 65,000 sq ft: superstore, petrol filling station at Skewfields, New Inn, Pontypool, Gwent.
2. 45,000 sq ft: retail development, Plasmarl Industrial Estate, Swansea.
3. 12,900 sq ft: retail store at New Hedges, Tenby, Dyfed.
4. Area not known: four retail units, Upper Boat, Pontypridd, Mid Glamorgan.
5. 95,000 sq ft: retail warehouse units, Wern Industrial Estate, Rogerstone, Gwent.
6. 30,350 sq ft: retail store, Mill Parade, Newport, Gwent.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Research and Development (Expenditure)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was spent by his Department on research and development during the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion was spent in Wales.

Mr. Donald Thompson: During the financial year 1985-86 my Department spent £124·1 million on research and development. Of this amount, £68·6 million was spent externally, mainly with the Agricultural and Food Research Council, of which approximately £2·7 million was spent in Wales with the council's Welsh plant breeding station and with other contractors. The balance of £55·5 million was spent on in-house research and development mainly by the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service. A good deal of ADAS' research and development is of relevance to farming conditions in Wales and approximately £2·2 million of this work was carried out in the Principality for the benefit of farming in Wales and the west of Britain. The in-house figure also includes nearly £0·5 million spent on research and development in the fisheries experiment station at Conwy.

Intervention Stocks

Mr. Ashley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the extent of public involvement with the company Trent Grain which holds intervention stocks of agricultural produce, stating (a) whether any public money is likely to be lost, (b) whether there is evidence of any stock loss, (c) when officials first appreciated the nature of the firm's problems,

(d) what action was subsequently taken to limit the extent of possible public financial loss and (e) whether officials studied the company reports of the last three years.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 420]: The first indication of the financial difficulties of Trent Grain was noted in the summer of last year. A volumetric analysis, of the kind used regularly by the board for monitoring purposes, was then carried out and indicated a possible stock loss. There followed a further analysis which tended to confirm this suspicion, no further deliveries were made and, to facilitate checkweighing, grain was sold from the store as quickly as possible. In May 1986 it was learnt that a grain trader had secured a charge on the company's assets. Cargo superintendents were appointed to guard the store and to prevent a removal of intervention grain. Check-weighing has confirmed a shortfall; action is in hand aimed at recovering the loss. The company's report for 1983 and 1984 were studied by officials, but the 1985 report has not yet been submitted to Companies House.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing vessels have left the fleets in England, Wales and Scotland due to factors other than decommissioning in the period since 1981.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 28 October 1986, c. 85]: Precise records are not available, but it is estimated that in the order of 1,000 fishing vessels over 10m in length based in England, Wales and Scotland have been deleted from their respective fleet registers since 1981 due to factors other than decommissioning. However, some of these will have joined a fleet elsewhere in the United Kingdom and so still form part of the overall United Kingdom fleet. The reasons for the other deletions include vessels being sold abroad, being sunk or wrecked, or being judged by local fisheries offices as no longer fishing commercially.

EMPLOYMENT

Wages Inspectorate

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will outline by what methods the Wages Inspectorate distinguishes between workers aged over and under 21 years for the purposes of enforcing the Wages Act 1986; and what is the additional inspection time allocated for this new check.

Mr. Lee: If, in the course of a check, it appears to the inspector that an employer may be paying a young worker less than the statutory minimum, verification of the worker's date of birth is sought from the employer. Where appropriate the date is confirmed by interviewing the worker. This is not a new check and no additional work is involved. Inspectors have always checked dates of birth to confirm compliance with wages orders which specify age-related minimum rates of pay.

Employment Measures

Mr. Prescott asked the Paymaster General on what date Link Recruitment Ltd. was operating as Joblink, approved by the Manpower Services Commission as a recruitment agent for community programme sponsors and managing agents; what are the maximum allowable costs charged by Joblink to advertise community programme vacancies; and what is the maximum placement fee paid by the Manpower Services Commission to Joblink for recruiting to community programme vacancies.

Mr. Lee: MSC approval is not required for recruitment agencies submitting applicants for posts on the community programme. Vacancies for managers, supervisors and certain specialist workers within the community programme are advertised by professional and executive recruitment.

Under an agreement reached with the Federation of Personnel Services on 1 October 1983 any private recruitment agency may submit candidates for these posts. A placement fee of £257 is paid to the agency submitting the successful candidate.

Unemployment Benefit

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Paymaster General (1) how many recipients of unemployment benefit were disbarred under the trial scheme operating in the Crewe and Nantwich travel-to-work area;

(2) how many recipients of unemployment benefit were interviewed in the new trial scheme operated in the Crewe and Nantwich constituency;

(3) how many recipients of unemployment benefit were temporarily deprived of payment, and how many subsequently had their entitlement confirmed, under the trial scheme recently operating in the Crewe and Nantwich constituency.

Mr. Lee: Information is not available in the form asked. Crewe unemployment benefit office was one of 12 offices taking part in availability testing experiments in questioning more closely whether claimants were available for work. Between 16 June 1986 and 19 September 1986 all claimants at the Crewe office reaching their sixth week of unemployment were asked to complete a questionnaire. Questionnaires were issued to 770 claimants and this resulted in 138 claims being referred to the independent adjudicating authorities. Of these, 20 were disallowed on availability grounds and 118 were allowed.

Instant Muscle Limited

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Paymaster General whether he will take steps to increase the funding of Instant Muscle Limited under the Voluntary Projects Programme for 1987-88; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The voluntary projects programme budget for 1987-88 has not been finalised. Decision on the level of resources available to individual organisations will take account of the overall budget allocated to the programme.

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to how many jobs have been created by Instant Muscle Limited; and at what cost to public funds per job.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to my replies to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Mr. Steel) on 30 October at column 216.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Spencer asked the Paymaster General if he will publish an estimate of the increase in the number of businesses registered for value added tax in Leicestershire between the end of 1979 and the last date for which figures are available.

Mr. Trippier: The number of businesses registered for value added tax in Leicestershire is estimated to have increased by around 2,000 between the end of 1979 and the end of 1983.

Health and Safety Executive

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General how many staff at the Health and Safety Executive are engaged soley on the enforcement of industrial air pollution regulations; what is the average length of time between notification of nuisance and action by the firm responsible to remedy it; and what actions are taken by the Health and Safety Executive to abate such nuisance.

Mr. Trippier: There are 33 industrial air pollution inspectors in the field and seven at the inspectorate's London headquarters.

Inspectors enforce the air pollution control provisions of the Health and Safety at Work etc Act 1974 and associated legislation at "prescribed" premises. Such premises are required to satisfy the "best practicable means" requirements of the industrial air pollution inspectorate to the control of atmosphere emissions. Where the "best practicable means" requirements are not complied with, the inspectorate takes appropriate enforcement action.

The time allowed to firms to rectify failures in emission control will depend on the nature of the substances emitted and the degree of remedial work necessary to achieve effective control.

Restart Scheme

Mr. Marlow asked the Paymaster General what are the latest figures available for each economic region of the United Kingdom of the numbers invited to attend restart interviews; how many have attended interviews so far in each region; and how many of those invited have ceased to claim benefit in each region.

Mr. Trippier: Figures are available only for Manpower Services Commission administrative regions. The information requested is given in the table and relates to the period 12 May to 9 October 1986.

	Numbers invited to attend	Numbers attending	Numbers invited ceasing to claim benefit
South East	44,038	28,647	9,594
London	77,100	46,530	7,822
South West	24,239	16,925	4,975
West Midlands	52,672	38,778	6,429
East Midlands	39,394	26,336	7,586
Yorkshire and Humberside	49,884	34,359	8,703
North West	99,877	74,134	15,993
Northern	45,404	34,469	8,161
Wales	31,219	22,049	6,943
Scotland	58,841	44,224	10,005
TOTAL	522,668	366,451	86,211

The numbers invited ceasing to claim benefit will include a proportion who would have ceased to claim benefit in any case.

Small and Medium Sized Enterprises

Mr. Hayward asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the European Commission action programme for small and medium sized enterprises.

Mr. Lee: My hon. Friend the Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry, in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Wirral, South (Mr. Porter) on 23 October 1986 at columns 936-37, announced the adoption on 20 October by the EC Industry Council of a resolution approving the broad strategy of the European Commission's action programme for small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs). The aims of the programme are the creation of a favourable environment for SMEs, including control and reduction of administrative burdens on business and specific assistance to improve their flexibility and access to capital. The programme should in due course be of significant benefit to the United Kingdom. Fuller details are in the explanatory memorandum in document 8992/86. Unfortunately the Commission's action programme did not become available until after the House went into recess, and the related resolution reached the Industry Council before the Select Committee on European Legislation had had an opportunity to consider it. The Select Committee has since done so and made no recommendation for further consideration by the House.

In the Government's view it would have been prejudicial to the interests of the United Kingdom to have withheld agreement, on account of the absence of parliamentary scrutiny, to the resolution in question at the Industry Council. In reaching this decision, the Government took into account both that the action programme was in part a response to a United Kingdom initiative and that our position as President of the Community requires us to do everything possible to facilitate the taking forward of Community business. It was also the case that the resolution sought agreement only to the broad strategy of the Commission's action programme. Individual measures arising therefore, other than those which the European Commission can implement administratively, will depend on specific proposals being put forward by the Commission and will, of course, be subject to parliamentary scrutiny in the normal way.

I regret that the normal parliamentary procedure was not followed on this occasion but in the circumstances I hope that the House will understand why it was felt necessary, in the overall United Kingdom interest, to act in this way.

Race Relations

Mr. Knox asked the Paymaster General when his Department will be appointing an adviser on race relations.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: There was a strong field of applicants for this appointment. Unfortunately, none of the suitable candidates combined sufficient industrial or business experience with other qualities to satisfy all the needs of the job as I should have hoped to see it develop. No appointment will therefore be made. However, we are inviting two of the candidates to be members of the Department's race relations employment advisory group, to which I am sure they could make a valuable contribution.

Work Availability Test

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will list all those Department of Employment offices in which the new work availability test has been introduced;

(2) if he will list for each region and for each Department of Employment office in the region the date at which the new work availability test will be introduced.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 3 November 1986 at column 329]: The new availability for work test has been introduced at Yeovil, Alloa, Camberley, Farnborough, Erith, Bournemouth, Christchurch, Poole, Salisbury, Weymouth, Winton, Devonport, Paignton, Plymouth 'A', 'B' and 'C', Torquay, Redruth, Alnwick, Amble, Ashington, Bedlington, Berwick, Blyth, Cramlington, Gosforth, Morpeth, North Shields, Wallsend, West Moor, Whitley Bay, Blaydon-on-Tyne, Hexham, Newcastle 'A' and 'C', Newcastle-upon-Tyne East, Dalkeith, Edinburgh 'C' and 'D', Eyemouth, Galashiels, Leith, Loanhead, Musselburgh, Portobello, Irvine, Kilbirnie, Ayr 'B', Cumbernauld, Grangemouth, Kilsyth, Canterbury, Gillingham, Ramsgate, Sheerness, Sittingbourne, Aldershot, Epsom, Horsham, Redhill, Weybridge, Woking, Maidenhead, Newbury, Winchester, Dover, Folkestone, Streatham, Tooting 'B', Wimbledon and Dartford unemployment benefit offices.

The test is being introduced progressively in all unemployment benefit offices during the next few months; the dates for individual offices will be determined locally according to resources and other operational issues.

SCOTLAND

Regional Aid

41. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will reconsider the current arrangements for regional aid, with specific reference to restoring full regional development status to the entire area covered within the boundaries of the Highland region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The present assisted area structure was established less than two years ago after a comprehensive review of regional policy and the assisted area map. It is important to achieve some stability in the present arrangements and I do not believe that the time is yet ripe for considering any changes of status. Highland region as a whole continues to benefit from the extensive powers of the Highlands and Islands Development Board, and from access to the European regional development fund.

Employment and Industry (EC Report)

42. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his Department's report to the European Commission on Her Majesty's Government's assumptions about employment and industry until 1990 as it affects Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The United Kingdom regional development programme 1986-90 is the latest United Kingdom document in a series required of all EEC member states as the basis for applications for assistance from the European regional development fund. Because of community requirements, the programme contains assumptions about the number of unemployed claimants in each region of the United Kingdom in 1990. These are based on the national unemployment assumption from the 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9207) covering the period 1986-87 to 1988-89. They are not forecasts. The 1990 figure was derived by repeating the assumption 1988-89 a further year. The national assumption was allocated to regions in proportion to 1985 regional unemployment to reach regional assumptions. No specific assumption about industry in Scotland was made, although in some cases the programme document refers to possible trends.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to arrange for right hon. and hon. Members whose constituencies contain nuclear power stations to receive copies of the emergency handbook used by the station operators and managers and the emergency services plan for emergencies at that power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The operators of civil nuclear installations in Scotland have agreed to make available to the public copies of their site emergency plans, edited only to remove sensitive details such as the names and telephone numbers of personnel. These will replace the summaries of the plans which have been generally available for some eight years.

I am pleased to record that UKAEA has already done this in respect of its nuclear power development establishment at Dounreay, and has sent copies to the hon. Members for Caithness and Sutherland, (Mr. Maclennan) and for the adjacent constituencies of Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy), and Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace). Copies are also being placed in the Libraries here and in the other place. SSEB and BNFL will be taking comparable action as soon as practicable.

Whether the operational plans prepared by the emergency services of local authorities or health boards are made available as suggested is a matter for local decision in each case.

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate has made as to whether the management and staff at Torness power station have the necessary training, experience and qualifications to deal with fault conditions which may occur during the commissioning and operation of the reactor equipment; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate have any plans to require the management and staff at Torness power station to undergo training and proficiency testing with simulator equipment, including simulation of fault situations, before further commissioning of the reactors is approved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The conditions of the Torness nuclear site licence granted by Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate require the South of Scotland Electricity Board to appoint suitably qualified and experienced persons to operate the plant. HMNII must be notified of the names, qualifications and experience of those persons and it has the power to prevent individual appointments if it considers them to be inappropriate.

Both management and staff at Torness are undergoing training with simulators which represent advance gas cooled reactor behaviour, including fault conditions, and the standards achieved under training are assessed by the instructors. Such training is a continuing commitment throughout the commissioning and operation of a reactor. HMNII inspectors have been informed of the training arrangements and are satisfied with the progress of this training.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bankruptcies

10. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will indicate how many bankruptcies there have been in the last 12 months.

Mr. Butcher: The provisional estimate is 7,097 bankruptcies in England and Wales in the 12 months to September.

Takeovers

12. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many takeovers have occurred in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: During the 12 months to end-June 1986, 506 companies were acquired.

Manufacturing Output

16. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the most recent figure for output in manufacturing industry; and how this compares with the figure for the same month seven years ago.

Mr. Pattie: The hon. Member will appreciate that monthly data can be erratic. However, since the trough of the recession in 1981 manufacturing output has increased by 12 per cent. to reach a level of 104.1 in August 1986, based on 1980 equal to 100. This was some 2½ per cent. lower than the level of output in August 1979.

Austin Rover

17. Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has had any recent discussions with the new head of Austin Rover concerning employment levels and future investment policies.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend and I meet Mr. Day, the Chairman of Austin Rover and of the Rover Group from time to time to discuss matters of mutual interest: my right hon. Friend last met him on 4 November.

Research and Development Funding

18. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current situation for research and development funding from his Department.

Mr. Pattie: My Department plans to spend £415 million in 1986-87 on support for research and development.

Textile and Clothing Industries

20. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what help his Department is giving to the British textile and clothing industries.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Some £300 million was received or offered over the last five years to textile and clothing firms (together with footwear firms) in the United Kingdom largely by way of regional assistance. Earlier this year my right hon. Friend announced a £4½ million scheme for assisting universities and colleges to buy advanced textile equipment in order to improve training facilities for the industry. We also intend, subject to parliamentary approval, to make a grant available to the British Fashion Council to help it to promote United Kingdom fashions.

Consumer Protection

21. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any further proposals for the promotion of consumer protection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The Government intend to legislate, when parliamentary time permits, on product liability and misleading price indications and to introduce a general safety requirement. We also intend to lay before Parliament regulations implementing the European Community directive on misleading advertising.

My hon. and learned Friend, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Corporate and Consumer Affairs, chaired a meeting of the Council of Ministers on 29 October at which progress was made towards Community action on a number of consumer issues.

My Department's review of the legislation on pyramid selling has been completed and I expect to issue a consultation paper on this before the end of the year.

Stock Exchange (Deregulation)

22. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to progress with the deregulation of the stock exchange.

Mr. Channon: Minimum commissions for dealings on the stock exchange were removed by The Stock Exchange Council on 27 October.

Northern Region

23. Mr. Dormand asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further proposals he has to attract industry to the northern region.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall continue to pursue an active regional policy to create investment and jobs, backed up by national policies to encourage jobs through wealth creation. I support the region's own initiative in creating the Northern Development Company.

Space Policy

24. Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what formal representations he has received from the British National Space Centre concerning the future of the United Kingdom space policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: I have received the United Kingdom National Space Plan from the Director General of the British National Space Centre. The Government are currently considering their response to the proposals, and I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Greek Cement Imports

25. Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on the response so far to the representations by the Minister for Trade, the hon. Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Clark), to the European Commission regarding Greek cement imports into the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Commission has indicated that it appreciates the potential threat to the United Kingdom industry and has taken the matter up with Greek Ministers.

Manufacturing Investment

26. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current level of investment in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Pattie: Investment in manufacturing rose by nearly 6 per cent. in 1985, and was 25 per cent. higher than in 1983; further growth is expected for 1986. The underlying determinants of manufacturing investment — continuing growth in the economy, buoyant profits, improved profitability and a low rate of inflation — remain favourable.

28. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the Trades Union Congress to discuss investment in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. Friend meets the TUC regularly at the National Economic Development Council, where matters relevant to improving the United Kingdom's industrial performance are discussed. He has no plans for a separate meeting on this subject.

National Infrastructure (Investment)

27. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is having any discussions with the Confederation of British Industry about investment in the national infrastructure.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend meets the CBI regularly at the National Economic Development Council where infrastructure investment has been discussed. He has no plans for a separate meeting with the CBI on this subject.

Interest Rates (Manufacturing Industry)

29. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the implications of the latest increase in interest rates for the output of manufacturing industry.

Mr. Pattie: An increase in interest rates of 1 percentage point costs industry £250 million a year, compared with the cost of a similar increase in wages of £1 billion a year. Since the Budget, however, interest rates have fallen by 1·5 percentage points. This can only benefit manufacturing output and investment.

Rural Postal Services

30. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, when he next meets the chairman of the Post Office, he will discuss the rural postal services.

Mr. Pattie: I meet the chairman of the Post Office from time to time to discuss matters of current interest. But I am not aware of any developments affecting rural postal services generally which I need to raise with him.

EEC (Trade Balance)

31. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the surplus or deficit in trade in manufactures with the European Economic Community and the rest of the world, respectively, over the most recent 12 month period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the 12 months ending September there was a deficit of £10 billion on our trade with the Community and a surplus of £5¼ billion on our trade with the rest of the world, on the balance of payments basis.

Rolls-Royce plc

32. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the major trade unions representing the staff of Rolls-Royce plc.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present for such a meeting. I will, however, be meeting a delegation (on 2 December) to discuss the Government's privatisation proposals.

Motor Fuel Prices

33. Mr. Pollock asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will direct the Director General of Fair Trading, under section 13 of the Competition Act 1980, to inquire into and report on the differentials in respect of motor fuel prices between densely populated areas and the remote rural areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: As part of his duties under the Fair Trading Act, the Director General of Fair Trading monitors competition in the motor fuel market. He has found no evidence of anti-competitive practices which would justify action under the competition legislation at this time.

The powers under section 13 of the Competition Act to investigate prices of major public concern have never been used; and it would be inappropriate to use them other than in the most exceptional circumstances. It is not clear that such circumstances exist at present in the motor fuel market.

I nevertheless remain willing to consider taking action if circumstances change.

Leicester

34. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to promote the growth of the traditional industries of the city of Leicester.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My Department continues to provide its nationally available schemes of assistance. Firms in Leicester including those in the traditional industries have made good use of these.

Rover Group plc

35. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of Rover Group plc.

Mr. Channon: Mr. Day's review of the group is continuing. I expect to receive his conclusions in due course.

38. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to meet the chairman of the Rover Group to discuss Government support for the motor industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend last met Mr. Day on 4 November when they discussed a number of issues of mutual interest.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

36. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the conclusion of negotiations on the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: It was agreed on 1 August by the signatories of the multi-fibre arrangement that it should be extended for a further five-year period. The Community has been negotiating the renewal of its bilateral agreements under the arrangement and 25 new agreements have now been initialled. The detailed quota levels which have been negotiated will be published in a Community regulation after all the negotiations are completed.

The new protocol and the agreements which have been negotiated meet the United Kingdom objectives that we outlined to the House in May 1985 and February 1986 and further details on these are given in a written answer on 21 October to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) at column 779-80.

Manufactured Goods (Trade Deficit)

37. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the Confederation of British Industry to discuss the trade deficit in manufactured goods.

Mr. Channon: I meet the CBI regularly at the National Economic Development Council and on other occasions. At present I have no plans for a separate meeting on this subject.

UK-Irish Republic (Postal Charges)

39. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what notice Her Majesty's Government have received from the Government of the Irish Republic of changes in the charges made for postage between the United Kingdom and the Republic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: None. The charges made for mail between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland are a matter for the Post Office and the Republic's postal authorities.

Regional Aid

40. Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the total amount of money paid out by his Department on regional aid in each of the last five financial years at 1986 values.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Given that responsibility for regional development grants expenditure in Scotland and Wales transferred from my Department for the Scottish and Welsh Offices respectively on 29 November 1984 the answer to the question as set does not provide a consistent run of figures. For consistency, expenditure on regional aid at 1985-86 prices by Department and by the Scottish and Welsh Offices on Regional Development Grants after 29 November 1984 was as follows:

Expenditure[1] at 1985-86 prices[2]

	£ million
1981-82	822·0
1982-83	861·5
1983-84	538·6
1984-85	487·4
1985-86[3]	407·8

If expenditure on regional development grants by the Scottish and Welsh Offices is excluded from the above table the figures are as follows:

Expenditure[1] at 1985-86 prices[2]

	£ million
1981-82	822·0
1982-83	861·5
1983-84	538·6
1984-85	405·5
1985-86[3]	215·9

Notes:

The items included in the expenditure are regional selective assistance under section 7 of the Industrial Development Act 1982 and regional development grants (both old-style and new-style).

[1] All figures are gross and include payments to nationalised industries.

[2] Expenditure on a 1985-86 price basis for each year is calculated by applying the appropriate deflator to expenditure at current prices.

[3] Figures for 1985-86 are provisional estimates.

South Korea

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has about recent steps taken by the Government of South Korea to remove barriers to the import of British textile goods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government and our European Community partners have expressed concern at the immediate imposition of import surveillance and a low quota, following the liberalisation of wollen textiles on 1 July this year. The Korean Trade and Industry Vice Minister has assured me that Korea intends to raise the quota progressively to achieve full liberalisation by the end of 1987

Bathroom Fittings (Imports)

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what representations he has received from the Armitage Shanks Group Ltd., concerning the effects of imports upon the British bathroom fitting industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: My officials, together with an official of the Deparment of the Environment, held a meeting recently with representatives of Armitage Shanks Group Ltd. to discuss their concern. My Department is now considering what steps might be taken as a result of those discussions.

Research and Development

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by his Department on research and development during the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion was spent in Wales.

Mr. Butcher: The provisional estimate of expenditure on research and development by the Department of Trade and Industry during 1985-86 was £367 million. Expenditure in Wales is not recorded separately.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the National Economic Development Council to discuss research and development funding.

Mr. Butcher: My hon. Friend the Minister of State attended a meeting of the National Economic Development Council this morning. The Council has from time to time discussed R and D funding and I anticipate that it will be discussed at future meetings since R and D is an issue which is of great importance to improving the United Kingdom's industrial performance.

South Africa

Mrs. Shields asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the value of imports from South Africa in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The value of imports from South Africa for the first nine months of the current year was £642 million.

North-east England

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's report to the European Commission on Her Majesty's Government's assumptions about employment and industry until 1990 as it affects north-east England.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The United Kingdom's regional development programme 1986-1990 was submitted to the European Commission as a basis for applying for funds from the European regional development fund. The regional profile on the north-east referred to various constraining factors on prospects for the regional economy in the short term, but also describd development objectives and measures, including measures of assistance to industry.

CIVIL SERVICE

Assisted Areas

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Minister for the Civil Service what current proposals exist for Government Departments to transfer Civil Service employment from assisted to non-assisted areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Departmental proposals to relocate existing work or to locate new work involve consultative procedures designed to ensure that regional and urban interests are taken fully into account. A move from an assisted to a non-assisted area would take place only exceptionally and would need to be justified by reasons of operational and cost efficiency. Of the proposals currently under consideration, a few include options for moves from assisted to non-assisted areas, but none has reached a stage where it can be regarded as firm.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will consider removing value added tax from products such as burglar alarms and safety locks and bolts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: While householders and businesses should take reasonable precautions to protect their property from theft, reliefs from VAT have to be strictly limited and cannot be introduced for every item of expenditure for which a social justification may be claimed.

Exchange Controls

Mr. Galley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the new employment generated in the United Kingdom as a result of outward investment since the abolition of exchange controls.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986]: Employment in the United Kingdom depends on real wages and profitability in the United Kingdom. Since the abolition of exchange controls net overseas assets have increased more than sixfold to £80½ billion and are generating income of over £4 billion a year for the benefit of the United Kingdom economy, and direct investment overseas by British companies is often designed to provide suppliers' orders and distribution for goods manufactured in the United Kingdom. It is not possible to quantify the impact of these factors on employment.

Betting

Mr. Charles Morrison asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the revenue from (a) off-course betting duty and (b) on-course betting duty for 1985-86; and what was the change from the previous year;

(2) what information he has on the betting turnover (a) off-course and (b) on-course for 1985-86; and what was the change from the previous year;

(3) what information he has on the betting turnover (a) off-course and (b) on-course for the six months, 5 April 1986 to 5 October 1986; and what was the change from the corresponding period for the previous year;

(4) what was the revenue from (a) off-course betting duty and (b) on-course betting duty for the six months 5 April to 5 October 1986; and what was the change from the corresponding period the previous year.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986]: Following is the information:

	Duty		Taxed stakes
	Off-course	On-course[1]	Off-course	On-course[1]
1985-86 (£ million)	296·6	20·0	3,707·8	499·6
Change from 1984-85 (£ million)	+22·0	+1·5	+275·4	+38·3
Change from 1984-85 (Percentage)	+8·0	+8·3	+8·0	+8·3
April-September 1986[2] [3] (£ million)	177·2	11·5	2,214·6	282·7
Change from April-September 1985 (£ million)	+11·6	−0·6	+145·0	−15·1
Change from April-September 1985 (Percentage)	+7·0	−5·0	+7·0	−5·0

[1] On-course figures include Totalisators.
[2] Figures cover period 1 April to 30 September.

ENERGY

Private Coal Mines

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will take steps to introduce greater competition into the coalmining industry by extending the opportunities for operators of private mines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: This would require a change in legislation for which I have no plans.

British Gas (Flotation)

Mr. Blair asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will provide information, in the same form as the answer of 24 May 1985 in relation to British Telecom, about all fees and commissions so far paid, or to be paid, to primary underwriters, sub-underwriters, financial advisers, legal advisers, auditors and stockbrokers in connection with the flotation of British Gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The aggregate cost of the British Gas sale will be published after the flotation, as soon as the information is available.

Research and Development (Expenditure)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much was spent by his Department on research and development during the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion was spent in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The Department's spend on projects based in Wales represents some 2 per cent. of its non-nuclear Research and Development expenditure, which is provisionally estimated to be £40 million in 1985-86. While it is not possible to identify all cases of public sector energy Research and Development in Wales, expenditure on Research and Development by the public sector fuel industries there is substantial and includes some £6·8 million by British Coal on the Point of Ayr project.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Housing Benefit

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is his estimate of the number of retirement pensioners who will lose housing benefit as a result of the changes announced on 22 October, of the average loss to pensioners and of how many pensioners will lose (a) up to £1 a week, (b) over £1 and up to £2 a week, (c) over £2 and up to £3 a week, (d) over £3 and up to £4 a week and (e) more than £4 a week;

(2) what is his estimate of the number of retirement pensioners who will lose all entitlement to housing benefit as a result of the changes announced on 22 October;

(3) how many of those retirement pensioners who will lose (a) some housing benefit and (b) all housing benefit as a result of the changes announced on 22 October he estimates are (i) local authority tenants and (ii) private tenants.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let my hon. Friend have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the number of retirement pensioners who will lose housing benefit supplement as a result of the changes to supplementary benefit arrangements announced on 22 October.

Mr. Lyell: The number of retirement pensioners affected is too small for a reliable estimate to be made. In such cases the reduction as result of these changes will not in general exceed 10 pence a week.

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the percentage increases in non-dependant deductions from housing benefit for rent and rates which will take effect in April 1987.

Mr. Lyell: Non-dependant deductions are normally uprated in line with the housing element of the Retail Price Index. The increases announced on 22 October are in line with the 2·9 per cent. movement in this element between January and September 1986.

Waiting Times (Waltham Forest)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans have been prepared by the North East Thames regional health authority to reduce hospital waiting times in Waltham Forest.

Mrs. Currie: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked all regional chairmen to lead their districts in a drive to reduce waiting lists and waiting times. We are currently studying their reports closely. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the regional health authority for detailed information of local proposals.

National Insurance (Self-employment)

Mr. David Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now review the rules for establishing the status of self-employment for national insurance contribution purposes, in the light of Her Majesty's Government's policy for promoting self-employment.

Mr. Lyell: Officials of the Department are reviewing the procedures for establishing whether people are self-employed for National Insurance purposes. The aims of this review include ensuring that advice is readily available at an early stage in cases of doubt and that the criteria of establishing self-employed status are consistently applied.

Mersey Regional Health Authority

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the funding available to the Crewe district health authority for the years 1979-80 to 1985-86 inclusive as a percentage of the funding available to the Mersey regional health authority.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested for the years 1982-83 to 1985-86 is as follows:

Year	per cent.
1982-83	14·4
1983-84	14·2
1984-85	14·2
1985-86	14·2

The figures are based on net revenue expenditure as shown in health authorities' summarised accounts. I regret that information on district-level expenditure is not available centrally for the years prior to 1982-83.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many doctors and nurses there were in the Mersey region; and what percentage of these were in the Crewe district health authority for each year from 1979-80 to 1985-86 inclusive.

Mrs. Currie: Such information as is available centrally is shown in the table; I am sorry that I am unable to provide all of the information requested.

Figures for doctors and dentists in Crewe district health authority, which formed part of Cheshire area health authority before the NHS reorganisation, are not centrally available prior to 1982. From 1982 we have figures for all doctors employed in the district health authority except for senior registrars and consultants, whose contracts are held by the regional health authority. The district health authorities where these staff work cannot be identified centrally. There will therefore be more doctors actually working in the Crewe district health authority than are accounted for in the table.

Figures for non-medical staff are not available prior to 1982 on a comparable basis with those for later years, due to the effects of the 1982 National Health Service reorganisation on the Cheshire area health authority.

The available information is shown in the table.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the funding for acute units in the Mersey regional health authority for each year from 1979-80 to 1985-86 inclusive.

Mrs. Currie: The annual cost returns submitted to the Department show the following expenditure for the authorities in the Mersey region:

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what facilities are immediately available to replace the physiotherapy unit at Oakmere rehabilitation centre in the Crewe district health authority; and what would be the cost of that replacement.

Mrs. Currie: Planning and associated costs involved in the proposed closure of Oakmere rehabilitation centre are the responsibility of Crewe health authority. The hon. Member may therefore wish to contact the district chairman.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the funding for the Mersey regional health authority for each year from 1979-80 to 1985-86, inclusive.

Mrs. Currie: The net revenue expenditure of Mersey regional health authority, as shown in the authority's accounts, was as follows:

Year	£ million
1979-80	286·4
1980-81	367·3
1981-82	405·1
1982-83	433·9
1983-84	453·8
1984-85	480·5
1985-86	504·3

Hospital Funding (East Hertfordshire)

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent discussions he has had with East Hertfordshire health authority regarding its level of hospital funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: No recent discussions have taken place between Ministers and East Hertfordshire health authority about hospital funding. Financial allocations to district health authorities are a matter for the relevant regional health authority to determine.

Research

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much was spent by his Department on research during the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion was spent in Wales.

Mrs. Currie: The Department spent over £18 million on research and development in 1985-86, of which about 3·4 per cent. was spent in Wales. In addition much of the Department's programme carried out in England benefits Welsh services.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has yet reached a decision about the future of his Department's small grants scheme for consideration of spontaneous applications for the support of research; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: Following the appointment of the Department's new chief scientist, the future of the small grants scheme has been considered by the recently formed Departmental Research Committee. I have accepted the committee's recommendations that the scheme should be discontinued, having regard to the increasing proportion of the funds available for commissioning new research which it has consumed in recent years, and the fact that the temporary suspension of fresh grants announced in a reply given by my predecessor to my hon. Friend the Member for Loughborough (Mr. Dorrell) on 24 June at columns 154-55 has created no difficulties in the administration of the Department's research programme. Projects already receiving support will be carried through to their conclusion. Spontaneous applications for new research grants will still be considered by the Department, but will be dealt with in the context of the overall research programme and priorities.

Elderly Persons (Heating)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice and assistance his Department is giving to elderly people other than those in receipt of supplementary pension-benefit about heating and keeping warm during the cold winter period.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Heating Additions

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what level of financial provision is being made for heating additions in the current winter; and what provision was made in each of the last four years.

Mr. Lyell: Weekly heating additions are payable throughout the year, and not just in winter months. For current rates of heating I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the right hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Stewart) on 28 October at Columns 124-25.

Estimated expenditure on heating additions in 1982-83 was £339 million, and in 1983-84 £396 million. The provisional estimate for 1984-85 is about £400 million. Information for 1985-86 is not available.

Amrinone

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what requests were made to his Department about licensing the medical drug Amrinone; what replies he sent; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what requests his Department received about a clinical trials certificate with oral Amrinone; what reply was sent; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what trials have been conducted in National Health Service hospitals with the medical drug Amrinone; how many patients suffered serious side effects; and if he will make a statement;

(4) on how many occasions Dr. Wilmshurst requested his Department to investigate the pharmaceutical company Sterling-Winthrop under the Medicines Act 1968, for its actions on Amrinone; what replies he sent; and if he will make a statement;

(5) if he will publish the evidence received in the course of his inquiries into the activities of the pharmaceutical company Sterling-Winthrop regarding its activities with the medical drug Amrinone; and if he will make a statement;

(6) if he will hold an immediate inquiry into the pharmaceutical firm Sterling-Winthrop in respect of its activities relating to the medical drug Amrinone;

(7) what adverse reactions from the medical drug Amrinone were reported to his Department; and if he will investigate the interpretation of the data provided by Sterling-Winthrop.

Mrs. Currie: I shall let the right hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Manchester

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make an urgent official visit to the regional health authority in the north-west and district health authorities in Manchester to hear about their funding problems, and in particular, the closure of hospital wards and the shortage of nursing staff.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Hypothermia

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people have died from hypothermia in Portsmouth from the period 1 November 1985 to the latest available date.

Mrs. Currie: The provisional number of deaths to usual residents of Portsmouth county district, with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, irrespective of whether it did or did not appear as the underlying cause of death, registered in the period 1 November 1985 to 30 September 1986 inclusive, is seven.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps his Department has taken to ensure the maximum possible uptake of unemployment benefit.

Mr. Lyell: People who are out of work and are looking for a job will usually approach one of the 1,000 jobcentres or 1,180 unemployment benefit offices throughout the country. Details of unemployment benefit and who can qualify are given in leaflets available at those offices. Leaflets are also available in DHSS local offices and at Post Offices. No information is available to show how many people who have paid national insurance contributions and qualify for benefit fail to make a claim but unemployment benefit is a long established and well known contributory benefit and I have no reason to think that the number who fail to claim this benefit when entitled is in any way significant.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 6 November 1986

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

War Pensions (Appeals)

Mr. Steen asked the Attorney-General what is the average time taken from the date of notification to the date of disposal of appeals against decisions not to increase war pensions; what is the longest time for which a current appeal has been outstanding; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: For assessment cases heard and determined during the first nine months of 1986, the average interval between the receipt of the notice of appeal at the pensions appeal tribunals' office and the written confirmation of the tribunal's decision was 207 days.

The longest time for which a current assessment appeal has been outstanding is five years and 10 months. This is an exceptional case which has required repeated adjournments. If the hon. Member is concerned about any particular case before the pensions appeal tribunals, the Lord Chancellor will examine the matter accordingly.

Parrot Corporation Ltd.

Mr. Abse asked the Attorney-General when the Director of Public Prosecutions received a final report from the Gwent constabulary about its investigation into the affairs of the Parrot Corporation Ltd.; what are the reasons for the delay in taking a decision as to whether any criminal proceedings are to be commenced; and whether he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: A final report was received by the Crown Prosecution Service fraud investigation group from Gwent constabulary on 20 October 1986. It is currently being considered by the fraud investigation group in consultation with leading counsel, and a decision will be made in due course.

PRIME MINISTER

Civil Servants (Select Committees)

Q78. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what representations she has received from trade unions representing civil servants about the Government's decision to instruct civil servants appearing before Select Committees not to answer questions about the conduct of individual officials; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: None.

Southend Hospital

Q87. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to visit the cancer treatment unit at Southend hospital.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Stoneleigh, Kenilworth

Q102. Mr. Pawsey asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to visit Stoneleigh, near Kenilworth.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Libya

Mr. Deakins asked the Prime Minister if allegations that United States intelligence reports about Libyan involvement in terrorism were part of a dis-information campaign have led to re-examination of the evidence provided to her before she authorised the use of United States air bases in the United Kingdom for the attack on Libya.

The Prime Minister: No.

EC (Council Meetings)

Mr. Deakins asked the Prime Minister if she will take steps to ensure that Ministers reporting to the House on the outcome of European Economic Community Council meetings continue to do so by a full statement in the Official Report rather than by referring to press statements.

The Prime Minister: It is for Ministers attending each Council to decide how best to inform Parliament of the results. I would expect that they would normally find that a full statement in the Official Report is the most appropriate way of doing this. Different arrangements may, however, be appropriate for Councils which take place during the recess—as was the case in the instance which I understand the hon. Member has in mind.

Falkland Islands

Dr. Godman asked the Prime Minister if it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to second Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food or DAFS fisheries protection service personnel to the Falkland Islands Government in order to assist the latter in the establishment of a fisheries protection service.

The Prime Minister: Three inspectors of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's sea fisheries inspectorate will be seconded to the Falkland Islands Government to assist in the establishment and initial operation of the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone.

Prisoners of War

Mr. Wigley asked the Prime Minister when she received letters from Mr. Arthur Christie of Bryncir, Garndolbenmaen, Gwynedd, dated 24 September and 26 Octoer, concerning the plight of former Japanese prisoners of war who suffered experimentation at unit 731 during their captivity; and if she will now reply to these letters.

The Prime Minister: The letters which Mr. Arthur Christie wrote on 24 September and 24 October concerning former Japanese prisoners of war were received on 30 September and 28 October respectively, and their receipt acknowledged by my office. Both letters were referred to the Ministry of Defence, which has been investigating this matter. This has necessarily been a time-consuming task involving the examination of records and research into the events of over 40 years ago. However, these inquiries are now nearly complete and the Ministry of Defence expects to reply shortly.

Official Functions

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister how many official conferences, receptions, dinners, lunches and other gatherings have taken place in the United Kingdom in consequence of the British presidency of the EEC; where these events have taken place; what has been the cost to public funds; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As of 4 November, 50 official meetings (of which nine at ministerial level), four receptions, 18 dinners and 57 lunches have taken place in the United Kingdom in consequence of our presidency of the EC. The majority have taken place in London. Meetings have also taken place in Hertfordshire, the Lake District, Somerset, Oxford, Glasgow, Surrey, Edinburgh, Broadway and Gleneagles. The additional costs to public funds of these events on the basis of accounts settled so far is estimated at approximately £323,000.

Engagements

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

Mr. Wallace asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

Mr. Dixon asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

Mr. Beith asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

Mr. Flannery asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 November.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Parental Leave

Mr. Welsh asked the Prime Minister why the United Kingdom Government again blocked the passage of the European Communities directive on parental leave.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Erith and Crayford (Mr. Evennett) on 18 December 1985, at column 188, and to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman) on 25 June 1986, at columns 157-58.

TRANSPORT

Severn and Wye Crossings

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport when tenders were invited for the major contract for repair work on the Severn bridge and Wye bridge; what is the closing date for applications; when the work is likely to commence; and by what date it is expected that the work will be completed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Tenders for the major strengthening contract for the Severn crossing were invited on 17 October 1986. The closing date for return of tenders is 9 February 1987.

Work is likely to begin in April-May 1987. The tender specifies the works are to be completed two years after the date of their commencement. This strengthening work will be followed by complete resurfacing of the crossing, which is expected to be spread over a further two years.

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport when tenders are to be invited for the building of a second Severn crossing.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Many detailed investigations and consultations still have to be carried out before construction tenders can be invited. It is too early to fix a date for inviting tenders. We wish to be in a position to provide the second Severn crossing by the mid-1990s, if the build-up of traffic needs it and Parliament so decides.

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he proposes to ensure that local firms and local labour are fully utilised in the contract work (a) for the major repair work on the existing crossing over the Wye and Severn and (b) for the construction of a second Severn crossing.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: When tenders for any major road contract are invited, the Department issues notices in the technical press giving brief details of the nature of the works, to inform potential subcontractors or material suppliers. This is being done in the case of the major contract for strengthening the Severn crossing. It is too early to do this for the construction of the second Severn crossing. The final selection of subcontractors, labour, material suppliers and so on is a matter for the decision of the tenderers.

Inter-City Services

Mr. Snape asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will discuss, at his next meeting with the chairman of British Rail, the punctuality of Inter-City rail services, with particular reference to the London Euston-Birmingham New Street services; and if he will ensure that British Rail makes available detailed statistics regarding the above.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. We have asked British Rail to report performance against the punctuality standards for Inter-City services in its next annual report and accounts.

Fishing Industry

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received concerning the carrying of immersion suits on United Kingdom registered fishing vessels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am not aware of any specific representations recently. The carriage of immersion suits on United Kingdom fishing vessels was of course one of a number of safety requirements put forward by hon. Members during the passage of what is now the Safety at Sea Act 1986, but not included in the Act. Nevertheless, the carriage of lifesaving appliances on fishing vessels is currently under examination by the Department in consultation with the fishing industry as part of the review of the Fishing Vessel (Safety Provisions) Rules 1975.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many United Kingdom registered fishing vessels were lost in (a) 1982, (b) 1983, (c) 1984, (d) 1985 and (e) the first six months of the current year.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The number and nature of casualties to fishing vessels are published in the Department's annual return "Casualties to Vessels and Accidents to Men". The following table sets out the figures of total losses of fishing vessels for the years 1982 to 1985 and also includes a provisional figure for the first six months of 1986.

Fishing Vessels
Total lost

Year	Number
1982	50
1983	43
1984	41
1985	40
1986	7

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many fishermen lost their lives whilst employed on United Kingdom registered fishing vessels in (a) 1982, (b) 1983, (c) 1984, (d) 1985 and (e) the first six months of 1986.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The following table sets out the information required for the years 1982-85 and also includes the first six months of 1986.

Fishing Vessels

	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986
Deaths from Casualties to Vessels	0	14	10	15	3
Deaths from Other Causes except disease	17	7	3	7	2
Total	17	21	13	22	5

Manchester (Bus Deregulation)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he or any of the Ministers in his Department will make an official visit to Manchester to see at first hand the effects of bus deregulation on passengers in the conurbation.

Mr. Moore: My colleagues and I have no immediate plans to visit Manchester, though I visited the area recently and my hon. Friend the Minister of State will be meeting representatives of the passenger transport authority shortly.

A1 (Road Works)

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Transport why the northbound carriageway of the A1 from Felton to Deanmoor remained closed by cones on the afternoon of Friday 31 October when the carriageway was entirely unobstructed by maintenance works or vehicles.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The carriageway remained closed on 31 October to allow the reinstatement of cats eyes and white lining, which was essential before the carriageway could be safely reopened to traffic. These works were required following the resurfacing of the carriageway. The northbound carriageway is now open. The whole contract is expected to be completed about one month ahead of schedule.

Road Accident Remedial Work

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, following the recent seminar on road accident remedial work organised by his Department's Greater London roads and traffic division, his other regional offices have any plans to organise similar events.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Following the success of the recent seminar on road accident remedial work held in London, a similar event will be held in the west midlands early next year.

Traffic Flows, Islington

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the traffic flow figures for (a) northbound and (b) southbound traffic day and night for (i) Archway road, (ii) upper Holloway road and (iii) St. Paul's road for the latest available date; and what were the equivalent figures for (x) 1985, (y) 1984 and (z) 1983.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I am investigating whether this information can be extracted for the hon. Member.

East London Road Assessment Study

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation there will be with (a) local authorities and (b) local groups after the publication of the east London road assessment study.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: They will be able to obtain copies of the first stage report when it has been published and to offer their comments.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport when the east London road assessment study will be published.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Greenwich (Mr. Barnett) on 27 October, at column 40.

Ridgeway (Berkshire)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received any representation from the Countryside Commission to make a traffic regulation order banning motor vehicles from the byway section of the Ridgeway west of Streatley in Berkshire.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. My right hon. Friend is currently considering its request to him to exercise his powers under section 22 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 to prohibit certain classes of motor traffic from parts of the Ridgeway on Sundays and bank holidays from 1 May to 31 October each year. He is currently considering whether to make an order. Should he decide to do so, the proposals would be advertised in the usual way inviting views.

Passenger Transport Undertakings

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to require all passenger transport undertakings to publish timetables and make copies available to the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I do not believe that it would be appropriate to introduce further legislation, since county councils and passenger transport authorities (through passenger transport executives) already have powers under the Transport Act 1985 to publish timetables, and take other steps they consider appropriate to promote the availability of public transport services in their area. It is also in the interests of transport operators to make sure that the public know of the services they are providing.

Mr. Thurhnam asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to permit him to institute an inquiry into whether a passenger transport undertaking is providing a full and proper passenger transport service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. It is for bus operators in both the public and the private sector to take their own decisions about what services they wish to provide on a commercial basis. In addition to that, local authorities, including passenger transport authorities, have a duty to secure the provision of additional services when they believe that they are in the public interest.

Motorway Rest and Picnic Areas

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration has been given to the provision of motorway rest and picnic areas, in addition to motorway service areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Consideration has been given to providing separate rest and picnic facilities. The costs are high and are unlikely to be offset by income from traders. It is preferable to provide full motorway service areas, with facilities for rest and picnics, at about 30-mile intervals. Our programme is for 20 new MSAs in addition to the 40 already opened.

A3 Guildford

Mr. David Howell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to introduce acoustic walls along (a) upgraded trunk routes in general or (b) the A3 where it passes by Guildford; if he will make it his policy to install such walls where the road in question passes within 100ft of a dwelling; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: It will continue to be my Department's policy to take appropriate noise protection measures where traffic on newly constructed or improved roads will cause traffic noise to rise above specified levels.

In the case of the new section of the A3 at Guildford opened in 1981 substantial lengths of earth mounds were constructed on both sides, and acoustic secondary glazing was provided for the dwellings which qualified. I have no plans for further barriers at Guildford.

It would be unrealistic to expect that financial resources will be available to meet all demands for ameliorative works on roads which have become more intensively used.

Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many local authorities have exercised a right of appeal to him pursuant to section 39(5) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984; and if he will list them and the outcome of the appeal.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In the last 12 months, four authorities have exercised their right of appeal:

Authority appealing	Authority whose decision appealed against	Outcome
Reading Borough Council	Berkshire County Council	Not yet decided
Winchester City Council	Hampshire County Council	Not yet decided
West Wiltshire District Council	Wiltshire County Council	Not yet decided
Wirral Borough Council	Merseyside County Council	Appeal allowed by Secretary of State

NORTHERN IRELAND

Special Protection Areas

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many areas have been listed as special protection areas in Northern Ireland under article 4 of the European Community directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds; and how many additional areas in the Province have been identified as meeting criteria for listing under the directive.

Mr. Needham: None.

Mr. Archer asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many areas have been listed to date in Northern Ireland under the Ramsar convention; and how many additional areas have been identified as meeting criteria for listing under that convention.

Mr. Needham: One area has been listed; Lough Neagh-Lough Beg. Two additional areas have been identified; Lough Foyle and Strangford Lough.

WALES

Historic Monuments

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many scheduled monument consent applications have been received by Cadw (Welsh Historic Monuments) since they came into existence; and how many of these have been determined;

(2) what is the estimated average length of time for the determination of scheduled monument consent applications by Cadw (Welsh Historic Monuments) since its formation.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Since the formation of Cadw, 154 applications for scheduled monument consent have been received, of which 110 have been finalised. The estimated average time taken to determine those applications was 23 weeks. Following the provision of additional staffing resources in Cadw, the average time taken to determine such applications in 1986 has been 14 weeks.

Planning Applications

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will detail those individual planning applications refused by the Dinefwr borough council that have later been approved by himself after an inquiry, in each of the past five years.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Planning appeals allowed following public local inquiries in Dinefwr borough during each of the past five years are:

1982 Nil
1983 Light Industrial Use, Valcon Furniture Centre, Betws
1984 Off-road Driving Tuition Centre, Ffarmers, Llanwrda
1985 Motel and Restaurant, 45-56A High Street, Ammanford
1985 Light fabrication and welding unit, Dyffryn Pool, Ammanford
1985 Light Industrial Use, Lloyd Street, Ammanford
1985 6 caravans, The Fairground, Station Road, Brynamman
January-November 1986 Nil.

These cases were each decided by an inspector appointed by the Secretary of State.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the Government's plans for expenditure on education and science from 1987-88 to 1989-90.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: 1. As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in his statement today, provision for education and science in 1987-88 will be £16,599 million. This total is £2,280 million higher than the plans for 1986-87 published in the 1986 Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702).

LOCAL AUTHORITY CURRENT EXPENDITURE

2. The Total provided for local authority current expenditure on education in 1987-88 in the Government's plans is £12,850 million, 18·8 per cent. more in cash than the plans for 1986-87 set out in Cmnd. 9702. These figures include the sum of £460 million for England which the Government are ready to add to planned expenditure in 1987-88 in return for a salary structure and a definition of duties for school teachers which meet the requirements set out in my statement of 30 October. This total represents what local education authorities are expected to spend if they maintain their present policies and keep increases in their costs, other than school teacher pay, to the level of cost increases in the economy as a whole.

3. There remain many opportunities to raise the efficiency of the service. The Government believe that, if these were seized, LEAs could make good progress with national and local policies for improving the quality of education at a lower level of expenditure. The total used for determining the education component of the grant related expenditure (GRE) has therefore been set at £500 million lower than the total for expenditure provision. The margin between the two totals is allocated to education in the Government's plans, but is not carried through to the control totals for the GRE.

4. With the inclusion of the planned additions for teacher pay, the Government is planning for an increase of 1·5 per cent. in real terms in local authority spending on education in 1988-89, and broadly level funding in 1989-90. Within the totals planned for local authority expenditure as a whole in each year, the Government will in 1987 review the distribution of expenditure between services (including education) in the light of local authorities' budgets for 1987-88, the Government's priorities and other factors.

Schools

5. Overall, school rolls continue to fall. Local education authorities are on course to achieve the target of removing 1,125,000 surplus school places by March 1987. The next few years offer a unique opportunity to rationalise and improve the pattern of secondary schools. The Government expect authorities to remove just over half a million surplus places in the three years 1987-88 to 1989-90, mainly from the secondary sector. My Department will issue towards the end of the year fresh guidance on the opportunities for further improving the quality of provision.

6. The plans assume that authorities will secure a further reduction in the number of school teachers they employ, but that the overall pupil-teacher ratio, currently at its best ever level, will continue to improve each year.

7. The Government attach importance to an improvement in the condition of school buildings and to a better supply of books and equipment in the classroom. Accordingly, the plans allow for a higher programme of repairs and maintenance, and increased expenditure on the purchase of books and equipment. The task of equipping schools for the new examination for the General Certificate of Secondary Education has been fully allowed for. As a contribution to greater efficiency, the Government expect authorities to cut the net costs of the school meals service and the costs of caretaking and cleaning, and to moderate the cost of their own administration.

Non-advanced further education

8. The Government's plans should enable authorities to respond to changes in demand for NAFE provision and in the nature of the student population. There are uncertainties about future student numbers, particularly in later years, but the plans allow for a higher proportion of 16 to 19-year-olds, in particular, to attend college.

9. The overall student-staff ration (SSR) for NAFE tightened slightly between 1984-85 and 1985-86, from 8·6:1 to 8·8:1, something over 2 per cent. I look for further tightening in the interests of greater efficiency; the plans imply that the SSR figure will be raised by around a further 3 per cent. between 1985-86 and 1987-88, reaching 9:1 in the 1987-88 academic year. The Government's expenditure plans assume that the number of lecturers in NAFE will continue to reduce by 3 per cent. annually, to reach an SSR of 9·4:1 or 9·5:1 in 1989-90, depending on student numbers. SSR targets for the longer term are, however, under review in a joint study with the local authority associations.

In-service training

10. Following the passage of the Education (No. 2) Act

1986, the plans provide for a new scheme for in-service training of teachers and lecturers to support expenditure of up to £200 million in 1987-88. The scheme will support national and local priorities. Included in the former is training for the GCSE. The new arrangements should help to promote expansion and more systematic and purposeful planning of in-service training. They will be evaluated to ascertain how far training programmes contribute to the more effective and efficient delivery of the education service.

Education Support Grants (ESGs)

11. The education support grants programme enters its third year in 1987-88. In that year there will be a programme of 20 activities of national priority at a cost of £92 million, to be supported by grant of £64 million. This year, as last, all LEAs have accepted te invitation to bid and I hope to announce allocations for individual LEAs in December. The programme includes support for schemes for the supervision of school pupils at midday (£39 million of expenditure) and for the provision of books and equipment for the GCSE (£10 million).

Advanced Further Education

12. Following consultation with the local authority associations I intend to determine the basic quantum of advanced further education (AFE) expenditure within the predetermined pool in 1987-88 at £701·5 million, including £1·5 million for recurrent expenditure by local authority institutions taking part in the engineering and technology programme. This figure has been set so as to sustain access to AFE at its present level. I have made available a further £15 million for selective allocation in support of initiatives of high priority, including measures to improve the supply of teachers in mathematics, physics and technology. With this addition the total represents an increase of £55·5 million over the 1986-87 quantum.

13. The plans for 1987-88 assume the achievement of a student to staff ratio of 12:1 and allow for some increase in provision for non-teaching costs compared to 1986-87.

14. The National Advisory Body is considering how the basic quantum should be distributed between authorities and how the £15 million addition should be deployed. I shall decide on the allocation of both elements of the quantum later in the year, in the light of the NAB's advice.

VOTE EXPENDITURE

15. Vote expenditure in 1987-88 is planned to be £3,749 million, £245 million higher than the plans for 1986-87 published in Cmnd. 9702. Within this total, recurrent grant to the universities will increase by £95 million and the science budget by £39 million between 1986-87 and 1987-88. The Government's plans also include increases in provision for local authority and voluntary school capital expenditure, for the assisted places scheme as it builds up to its planned size, and for the funding of the initial costs of city technology colleges.

Universities

16. On 20 May (Official Report, c. 179-80) my right hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-East (Sir K. Joseph) said that the Government's willingness to provide additional funding for the universities would depend crucially on evidence of real progress in the development of the policy of selectivity, the rationalisation of small departments, better financial management and improved standards of teaching. I have now been able to agree with the University Grants Committee and the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals a major programme of work in these areas. Details are set out in letters from the chairmen of the two organisations which I am publishing today in the Official Report. I shall expect individual universities to co-operate fully and positively in this programme. Progress will be closely monitored, and the future funding of the universities will depend significantly upon its implementation year by year.

17. In the light of that agreement, the Government have decided to provided an additional £61 million for recurrent and equipment grant for the universities in the financial year 1987-88, compared with previously planned expenditure, and a corresponding addition of £71 million in 1988-89. Between the financial years 1986-87 and 1987-88 recurrent grant will increase in cash by £95 million or 7·2 per cent.

18. Subject to parliamentary approval, recurrent grant for the universities on the UGC list for the 1987-88 academic year will be £1,432 million. To the extent that the 1987-88 academic year falls partly in the 1988-89 financial year the grant is subject to review in the normal way. Recurrent grant for the 1986-87 academic year will be increased from £1,341 million to £1,365 million. The new level of grant for the Open University will be announced shortly.

19. General equipment grant for the universities for the academic year 1987-88 will be £111·6 million — an increase of £6·5 million over 1986-87. This now includes the separate provision of £10 million made in earlier years for the selective enhancement of research equipment, which has been consolidated into the general equipment grant.

20. Within the increased amounts of recurrent grant I expect the UGC to make provision for a number of particular improvements, including:

- redundancy and premature retirement and other costs to facilitate rationalisation and the recruitment of new, young academic staff;
- essential repairs and maintenance of plant and buildings;
- increases in library purchasing;
- special initiatives in teacher training to help deal with the teacher shortfall in mathematics, physics and technology; and
- the expansion of continuing education.

21. I have welcomed the universities' proposals for changes in the structure of academic pay. I shall be willing to provide some further additional funding for pay restructuring if structural improvements can be agreed at a cost that can be afforded, and I shall be initiating discussions to that end accordingly.

Science

22. The science budget, from which the research councils receive their grants in aid, will be £654 million in 1987-88, an increase of £39 million over provision in 1986-87. The figure is £24 million higher than the plans for 1987-88 published in cmnd 9702. The science budget in 1988-89 will be £664 million, an increase over previous plans of £20 million, and in 1989-90 £680 million. These sums will be distributed following advice from the ABRC.

Voluntary Colleges

23. Following consultations with the Voluntary Sector Consultative Council I have determined the quantum of AFE expenditure at voluntary colleges grant-aided solely by my Department at £48·85 million, an increase of £3·45 million over that for 1986-87. As with maintained AFE, this will allow the voluntary colleges to participate in the initiative to establish new courses for teachers of shortage subjects. I shall decide its distribution between the colleges later this year in the light of the NAB's advice.

Student Awards

24. Provision for student awards allows for a small increase in the number of mandatory award-holders. Details of new rates of award and revised contribution scales will be announced later. Provision is also made for the basic tuition fee for courses eligible for mandatory awards to increase from £536 to £556 in line with the Government's forecast of general inflation. A comprehensive review of all aspects of financial support for students studying at first degree or equivalent level is in progress.

Local Authority and Voluntary School Capital Expenditure

25. Provision for local authority capital expenditure on education in 1987-88 will be £364 million, an increase of £56 million over the plans for 1986-87 published in Cmnd. 9702. The Department will be writing to local education authorities to inform them of their allocations for capital expenditure within the education block. In addition to those allocations, which will be in total at the same level as in 1986-87, local authorities have spending power derived from capital receipts; that spending power is increasing and will enable gross expenditure on education to be substantially greater than the level of allocations. The total available for allocations to local education authorities for 1988-89 and 1989-90 will be considered in the light of later estimates of spending power from receipts and other factors.

26. Provision for capital grants in 1987-88 to voluntary-aided and special agreement schools, which have no supplementary spending powers, has been increased by about £8·5 million compared with previous plans.

City Technology Colleges

27. My plans provide for the establishment of city technology colleges. The promoters will be expected to meet all, or a substantial part, of the capital costs but will receive a grant related to the number of pupils and sufficient to meet all items of current expenditure which would fall on an LEA for a school which it maintains.

Letters from the CVCP and UGC

28. The texts of the letters from the CVCP and UGC referred to above are as follows:

From the Chairman of the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals

5 November 1986

Dear Secretary of State

1. The acute difficulties of the universities result from the stark fact that the recurrent grant has fallen by one fifth in real terms since 1980-81 and that if existing policies were to be continued further substantial reductions would lie ahead. My Committee therefore welcomed your predecessor's announcement on 20 May, which you later endorsed, that the Government was ready to consider with the UGC and ourselves some further financial provision for the universities in 1987-88 and the following years. Sir Keith Joseph also said that the Government's willingness to make such provision depended on evidence of progress in implementing and building on the changes which he believed were needed. Particular areas which he mentioned were selectivity, rationalisation, better financial management and improved standards of teaching.

2. After the discussions that have taken place during the summer, it has been agreed that both the Chairman of the UGC and myself as Chairman of the CVCP, should write to you about action which has already been taken or is in contemplation. The division of labour in our complementary letters is a natural one, given our different roles. Consultation between the two bodies is close but some of the areas at issue are clearly the primary concern of the UGC. Others, for example, staff development and appraisal, mainly lie with the CVCP. The Committee has already taken action on most of these issues; the other matters dealt with in this letter are under consideration.

Academic Quality and Standards

3. The maintenance of high academic standards is central to the operation of all universities. The CVCP established in 1983 a group under the chairmanship of Professor Philip Reynolds which was charged with the task of offering advice and guidance to the universities on the maintenance and monitoring of academic quality and standards. The resulting paper "Academic Standards in Universities" has recently been published and commended by the CVCP to all universities. It stressed that quality and standards are best ensured when institutions carry the greatest possible responsibility themselves for these matters, a view that has been endorsed by the Government in its welcome for the report. "Accademic Standards in Universities" includes:

(i) codes of practice on
- external examining
- postgraduate training and research admissions, supervision and examinations
- appeals procedure at postgraduate research degree level

(ii) a paper on external involvement in the maintenance and monitoring of academic standards

(iii) a paper on university internal procedures for the maintenance and monitoring of academic standards.

4. The CVCP also accepts the Reynolds' conclusion that assurance about quality and standards requires close, detailed and continuous scrutiny. To this end it has already stated its intention to keep under review the implementation of the codes and papers outlined above with a view to issuing from time to time further reports and advice. The aim is to publish a report by July 1987 based on information from individual universities on the extent to which they are following practice consistent with that advice and how they intend to modify their practice if necessary, in the light of the advice offered. A further report will be published by July 1988 on the changes that have been made. If it appeared necessary, further advice on guidance identifying best practices, particularly to ensure the effective review of the standards of courses, would then be issued to universities in the course of the following year. Comparisons of teaching quality across and within institutions are not easily made. Systems of staff appraisal and development (considered below) can however help considerably in the establishment and maintenance of the high academic quality of which universities are justifiably proud.

Staff Performance and Development

5. The Committee circulated in April 1986 a draft code of practice on academic staff development and training. Comments from universities are to be collected by December 1986 with a view to revising and promulgating the code by July 1987. The Committee will ask universities, not later than the summer of 1988, about the extent to which they have implemented the code and whether they would wish to see any further development or extension of it. The findings will be published. In its further advice on academic standards the Committee will also seek to identify best practice in teaching policies, including such matters as the range of teaching and learning methods used, the arrangements for teachers to appraise and improve their teaching skills, and methods of assessment and feedback to enable policy to be monitored and reviewed.

6. The CVCP is already committed to the principle of performance appraisal for academic and academic-related staff. Discussions are taking place in the context of negotiations with the AUT on a new pay structure, and preliminary agreement has already been reached on the principles and purposes which should underlie a scheme of staff appraisal. Some universities have already introduced such schemes. It is the firm intention of the CVCP to consult universities during the coming academic year regarding draft model guidelines for staff appraisal. After the consultation, guidelines will be published and commended to institutions during the course of 1987. The Committee will then ask universities during the first half of 1988 for information about the extent to which appraisal systems have been introduced by them. A report on its findings will be published by July 1988.

7. A Staff Development Policy Committee, consisting of vice-chancellors, has been established to encourage and co-ordinate the work which is already in hand on staff training and development, and on apppraisal.

Selectivity and Rationalisation

8. These are matters which lie predominantly in the province of the UGC and individual universities, but consideration of principles and policies concerning them naturally form part of the consultations between the CVCP and the UGC. But the Committee plays no part in the implementation of these policies, above all as they affect individual universities.

9. Planning in universities is based on the assumption that the UGC will maintain a policy of selective research funding and that it will be reprting to ministers from time to time on the response of individual universities to selectivity and the extent to which they have deployed their own finances on a selective basis.

10. The UGC's prospective agenda for rationalisation seems likely to go beyond the consideration of small departments alone; the Committee would expect to be consulted. Meanwhile, some universities have already arranged for the transfer of staff and departments and other forms of rationalisation, and most are initiating such schemes.

Better Management

11. The Steering Committee for Efficiency Studies in Universities, under the chairmanship of Sir Alex Jarratt, reported to the CVCP and UGC in March 1985. The UGC has asked universities for a detailed account of the action that they have taken or intend to take on the Jarratt Report and has stated separately to you the further steps which it intends to take.

12. There was also published by the Committee in March 1985 "Guidance on Recommended Accounting Practice in UK Universities" with a view to the achievement of clear, comparable and consistent statements of university accounts. This initiative was supported by the Accounting Standards Committee which looked forward to the issuing of a "franked" statement of recommended practice after two years of practical experience with the present guidance and further studies on particular aspects of accounting practice. It is clear from replies to an enquiry made by the Committee earlier this year that universities have already changed the form of their annual accounts where necessary in order to conform to the guidance.

13. As a way of encouraging and assisting universities to improve their methods of financial management the Committee has recently established a group which includes members with experience of accountancy, banking, and the public service. It has the following terms of reference:

> "To consider the strategic planning and financial management procedures desirable to maximise the effectiveness and efficiency of university operations, noting current best practice, and to make recommendations."

The work of the group will be an important part of the Committee's activities over the coming year and it is intended to issue a report before the end of the 1986-87 session.

14. A joint working party of the Committee and the UGC has recently produced a report on the use of performance indicators relating to both inputs and outputs in teaching and research. The report has been accepted by both Committees. The objects are to aid management, to improve accountability and to provide means of making comparisons both within and between institutions. An initial range of performance indicators has already been identified. They will be implemented during the academic year 1986-87 with regular publication covering all universities beginning before the end of 1987. Representatives of the Department of Education and Science and the Advisory Board for the Research Councils will be invited to attend meetings of a Technical Committee which is being established to effect the implementation of these indicators.

Tenure

15. The Government has recently confirmed to the CVCP its intention to introduce legislation to limit tenure when the Parliamentary time-table allows. Meanwhile the Committee has itself embarked on an investigation of the nature of appointments currently being made, and the nature of the grounds which universities see as relevant to the exercising of their powers of dismissal for "good cause". We will be reporting by December 1986. We have agreed with the UGC that during the first three months of 1987 we will consider with them how best to review with universities their policies for the terms of appointing new staff with the aim of ensuring that staff are not initially appointed with tenure in its strongest form where this can be avoided.

University salaries

16. You will know that universities face serious problems in recruiting, retaining and motivating staff. Proposals for restructuring and improving salaries to overcome these problems have been submitted to you separately.

Funding

17. In "The Future of the Universities" we stated that, "The universities accept that the very great support they now receive from taxation, and the key role which they have come to play in national development, impose duties and obligations upon them." Those obligations are primarily discharged by the maintenance of standards of excellence in teaching and research but, as this letter indicates, we also accept that they include ensuring and demonstrating that universities are run efficiently. But the Government, in its turn, must accept the obligation to keep a major national asset in good order. That obligation was clearly set out in the recommendations directed to the Government in the Report of the Jarratt Committee. Additional resources, and on a substantial scale, are required now if the country is to continue to enjoy the benefits of a university system of the highest quality.

Yours sincerely
Maurice Shock

From the Chairman of the University Grants Committee
4 November 1986

Dear Secretary of State

On 20 May your predecessor told the House of Commons that the Government was ready to consider with the UGC and the CVCP some further financial provision for the universities in 1987/88 and the following years; but that the Government's willingness to make such provision depended crucially on evidence of real progress in implementing and building upon the changes that are needed. The particular areas that he identified were selectivity, the rationalisation and, where appropriate, the closure of small departments, better financial management and improved standards of teaching. He also referred to the conditions for a new structure for academic pay. You endorsed your predecessor's statement when answering Questions in the House of Commons on 10 June.

2. You have subsequently discussed with representatives of the Committee and the CVCP the financial needs of the universities and the initiatives that are being taken. The Committee has stressed to you that both the present and the planned level of university funding as set out in this year's Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702) were inadequate and that restructuring and reshaping the system would involve additional costs. I am now writing to describe the action which the UGC is taking or plans to take in some of the areas mentioned above and also in regard to academic tenure. The Chairman of the CVCP is writing a complementary letter about other areas.

Academic Quality and Standards

Staff Performance and Development

3. You and your predecessor have both endorsed the conclusion in the CVCP Reynolds Report on "Academic Standards in Universities" that quality and standards depend on close, detailed and continuous scrutiny. The UGC supports the steps which the CVCP is taking to encourage improved arrangements for assessment of teaching quality, for academic staff training and development and for the introduction of staff appraisal.

Selectivity in Research Funding

4. The UGC intends to maintain its selective approach to the allocation of research funding, irrespective of the level of overall public support for the universities, when it makes its distribution of grant for 1987-88 to 1989-90 early next year. Universities individually need to draw up and carry out plans for the selective distribution of the resources they devote to research. The UGC will monitor their arrangements for this and will report to Ministers annually on their implementation. During the coming year the Committee will, in conjunction with the research councils, examine further the criteria used in the selective distribution of research funding. It will aim to advise Ministers on this by the end of 1987.

5. The Committee accepts that the Government will look for evidence that selective research funding, combined with the policies of the research councils, leads to better research through greater concentration of effort in strong departments. It will consider and advise Ministers by the end of 1989 on the scope for further development of its policy of selectivity in 1990-91 and thereafter.

Rationalisation

6. The Committee argued the general case for the rationalisation of small departments in its Strategy Advice in 1984. Last year it issued a letter setting out criteria on which universities should judge the effectiveness of their small departments and giving advice on the minimum size of departments in particular areas. It will continue to urge universities to review their provision and, if need be, to rationalise it. The exercises being carried out by the University of London and now by the University of Wales are major examples of internal rationalisation already undertaken on the initiative of individual institutions.

7. The Committee for its part has identified a considerable number of subject areas where, viewed in the national perspective, there is a case for a concentration of provision to strengthen teaching and research, particularly where departments are small and vulnerable and student demand is modest; or in some cases where a reduction of provision is needed to reflect limited manpower needs. It has already completed reviews of five of these areas and specific proposals for rationalisation have been or are being implemented (Pharmacy, Agriculture, Oceanography, Italian and Scandinavian Studies). Reviews of 13 more areas have been completed recently or are now in progress (Architecture, Town and Country Planning, Celtic Studies, Oriental and African Studies, Dutch, Hispanics, Classics, Economic and Social History, Librarianship and Information Studies, Drama, Earth Sciences, Material Sciences, and Teacher Education in Wales in co-operation with the WAB). There are a further 8 specific areas in which the Committee hopes to launch new reviews in the current academic year (Veterinary Studies, History and Philosophy of Science, Dentistry, small Accountancy departments, Music, Palaeontography, Archaeology and small Physics and Chemistry departments) and it plans to extend the programme thereafter. Once the Committee has completed a review it will set a timetable for the implementation of its conclusions by the institutions concerned. The rationalisation process will normally take at least five years from start to finish, largely because even after it has been agreed that a course should be closed it has to be allowed to run on until the present students have graduated.

8. In our discussions you have made it clear that the Government fully supports the UGC's plans for rationalisation even though it recognises that these will sometimes have painful consequences for institutions and individual members of staff. You have also recognised that progress in launching reviews and implementing their recommendations will depend to a large extent on the future level of recurrent grant — because, as in business, rationalisation involves extra expenditure initially—and on the level of UGC's budget for its own staff and running costs.

Better management

9. The UGC has asked universities to give a detailed account this autumn of the action they have taken or intend to take on the Jarratt Report on "Efficiency Studies in Universities" and the associated special studies, in respect of:

the roles of Councils, Senates and Vice-Chancellors management and planning structures activities covered by the Jarratt special studies on, for example, purchasing and building and plant maintenance.

The Committee will by July 1987 submit to Ministers a report and commentary on universities' responses and will say what action it intends to take in any cases where these appear to be unsatisfactory. It will also ask universities to submit annual reports, starting in July 1988, on the efficiency gains they have achieved.

10. The Chairman of the CVCP will be dealing with other aspects of better management in which our two bodies have been and will be working together. These include the establishment of a working party on financial management in the universities, the follow-up of the report of a joint working party on the use of performance indicators and the issue of a code of guidance on university accounting practice. The UGC will expect all universities to adhere to this code.

11. Improved financial management and accounting in universities needs to be matched by a greater capacity for financial monitoring in the UGC. Steps are being taken to ensure that the Secretariat has the necessary professional expertise for this.

Tenure

12. In our discussions you have expressed your concern that tenure continues to handicap the ability of universities to match staffing to changes in demand and to the requirements of rationalisation and research selectivity and you have confirmed that the Government plans to introduce legislation to limit tenure when the Parliamentary timetable allows. You have also explained that, although the Government recognises the difficulty which universities individually face in seeking themselves to limit tenure, it believes that, pending legislation, there is scope for more appointments to be made without grant of tenure.

13. The CVCP will be reporting by December 1986 on current practice in granting tenure university by university. When their report is available the UGC will consider with the CVCP whether and to what extent it would be appropriate to take steps to ensure that wherever possible staff are appointed without tenure and will give you its advice on this by March 1987.

Yours Sincerely

Peter Swinnerton-Dyer

School Closures

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the announced school closures for 1985, 1986 and 1987.

Mr. Dunn: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools with fewer than 20 students on roll remains open.

Mr. Dunn: The number of maintained schools in England in January 1986 with fewer than 20 pupils on roll was 128.

Nursery Classes (Avon)

Mr. Aspinwall asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools in each sector within the county of Avon do not have provision for nursery classes.

Mr. Dunn: The number of maintained primary schools in each sector in Avon in January 1986 which did not have provision for nursery classes was:

	Number of schools
Infants	65
Junior with Infants	181

Junior	85
Total	331

Marbury Primary School

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the annual capital and revenue costs of maintaining and staffing the Marbury primary school for 1979-80, 1980-81, 1981-82, 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1985-86, and as to the capital and revenue funding for these years received from the local education authority and from his Department, respectively.

Mr. Dunn: The annual revenue costs since 1979-80 were as follows:

1979-80	21,840
1980-81	28,987
1981-82	31,847
1982-83	36,491
1983-84	35,416
1984-85	41,044
1985-86	38,416

These costs were met by Cheshire LEA: the DES does not make direct payments to schools. There were no capital costs in the years shown above.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any information about the cost savings that will result from the closure of Marbury primary school at the end of the current year.

Mr. Dunn: If the proposal to close Marbury primary school is approved, the Cheshire LEA expects to make the following savings over the next four financial years:

Year	£
[1]1987-88	6,083
1988-89	22,945
1989-90	33,850
1990-91	38,044

[1] (part year)

Village Schools

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will instigate a special grant to maintain village schools in rural development areas.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has no proposals to introduce a special grant to maintain village schools in rural development areas. The extra cost of schooling in sparsely populated areas is already taken into account in allocating block grant to local authorities. In addition my right hon. Friend is currently providing educational support grants to 14 local education authorities for a pilot project to explore educational and cost-effective ways of enriching the curriculum provided in small rural primary schools.

Universities (Finance)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the progress of discussions with university vice-chancellors on the action plan designed to deal with the distribution of resources to universities, with special reference to the university of Salford.

Mr. Walden: On the question of overall university funding, I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend's reply today to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key). The distribution between institutions of the increased funds being made available is a matter for the University Grants Committee.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the total Government expenditure on Dundee university from University Grants Committee grants in each year since 1981-82; what is the estimated expenditure for each year for the period 1986 to 1990; and if he will express each of these figures at constant prices.

Mr. Walden: The total of all University Grants Committee grants to Dundee university in each year since 1981-82 are shown in the table:

£'000

Financial Years	Cash	1986-87 prices
1981-82	14,292	18,365
1982-83	17,219	20,634
1983-84	18,142	20,806
1984-85	17,167	18,880
1985-86	17,759	18,425

The grants include a cash total of over £2·5 million provided over the financial years 1982-83, 1983-84 and 1984-85 specifically to meet staff redundancy costs.

Total grants in the current financial year are likely to be in the region of £18·5 million.

Grants in future years will depend on both total future provision for the universities and the University Grants Committee's grant allocations to individual universities.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations have been received from the University of Oxford concerning the financing of students during the past year; what has been the nature of those representations; what his response has been; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Thirty representations have been received this year, counting letters from the vice-chancellor, heads of colleges, and university staff, about the financing of students. They covered a wide range of issues, and received appropriate replies.

Brent Education Authority

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish his correspondence with Brent local education authority.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is not the Department's normal practice to publish correspondence with individual local education authorities. I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning the effect upon the education of school children in Brent of the two-day strike by teachers in that borough; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations. I am glad, in the interests of the children, that Brent council has decided to reinstate Miss McGoldrick, as it was asked to do by my right hon. Friend.

Teachers (Pensions)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to introduce legislation to enable the dependants of married women teachers, single women teachers and single men teachers to receive the same pension benefits as the dependants of married men teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Although a death gratuity is payable in respect of all members of the teachers superannuation scheme, family pensions, subject to completion of a minimum qualifying period, are payable automatically only on the death of a male teacher. They comprise pensions for widows or surviving children, or both. Pensions are payable to widowers, or other dependants, only if the Department has previously accepted dependency nominations in respect of them.

My right hon. Friend accepts that in family pensions as in all other aspects of teachers' superannuation there are strong arguments for equality of treatment. The Social Security Act 1986 will require him to introduce at least minimum provision for widowers' pensions. But there are cost implications. Discussion of the subject is expected to resume in the teachers superannuation working party, on which both teachers and local authorities are represented, when it meets next month.

Religious Education

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy regarding the teaching of Christian-based and biblical instruction in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: Within the statutory framework for religious education laid down in the Education Act 1944 an introduction to the Christian tradition remains central to the religious education provided in our schools. Many of the central values of our society and culture are derived from religion and from Christianity in particular. A knowledge and understanding of Christian belief and practice, including biblical study, is therefore essential to an understanding of our society and its values.

ENVIRONMENT

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he plans any changes in his public expenditure programme.

Mr. Ridley: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has announced the Government's public expenditure plans for the next three years. The table below gives details of the major changes in my Department's programmes. Increased receipts have enabled me to provide for carefully targeted increases in gross investment on some vital programmes at relatively small net cost.

Housing

For housing, there is a substantial increase in the gross provision for capital expenditure in 1987-88. This will now be £451 million (14 per cent.) higher than previously planned, at £3,661 million. That figure is £225 million more than the estimated outturn for 1986-87. An increase on this scale has been made possible by the success of the right to buy. Over the next three years receipts are now expected to yield some £950 million more than previously forecast.

The gross provision for local authority capital expenditure in 1987-88 will be £2,922 million an increase of £231 million over the estimated outturn for 1986-87. In using their increased resources, I look to local authorities to give first priority to the renovation and maintenance of their housing stock.

In determining the total for housing allocations to local authorities I shall take account of their growing spending power from receipts. I shall honour the assurances given by my predecessors that initial housing allocations to individual authorities for 1987-88 would be not less than 80 per cent. of their initial allocations for 1985-86.

In addition I shall be able to make significant increases to the amounts allocated to local authorities to revitalise rundown estates under schemes developed in conjunction with my Department's urban housing renewal unit. I shall also be able to increase the gross provision for the Housing corporation, particularly to support housing association schemes financed primarily by the private sector. We shall make further announcements about these shortly.

Housing investment by new towns is now increasingly confined to the servicing of sites for development by the private sector, and gross provision in 1987-88 will be more than covered by the forecast capital receipts from sales of housing and land for housing.

Provision for current expenditure in the housing programme has been increased by £131 million for 1987-88. This mainly reflects increased provision for rate fund contributions by local authorities to their housing revenue accounts, which forms part of the rate support grant settlement, and revised estimates of the cost of housing subsidy. The extra provision will also allow scope for significant new initiatives on agency services for home improvement and on housing management training.

Overall, the net housing programme for 1987-88, covering both capital and current expenditure, will increase by £361 million to £3,204 million.

For 1988-89 and 1989-90, the continuing success of the right to buy will enable further substantial increases on previously planned gross provision for capital investment. Private sector housing investment will also continue to increase. Current provision for the two years is increased for the same reasons as the increase in 1987-88. The overall net housing programme total for 1988-89 is now £3,016 million, an increase of £129 million on previous plans, and for 1989-90 is £3,091 million.

Other Environmental Services (OES)

In the other environmental services programme, provision for gross expenditure on local authority local environmental services capital in 1987-88 has been increased by £50 million to £609 million. £380 million of this is expected to be offset by capital receipts. The increase in provision will enable me to make appropriate capital allocations to local authorities, honouring the assurances given by my predecessors, while allowing authorities to use the steadily growing spending power available to them from capital receipts.

I attach high priority to tackling inner city problems. Provision for the urban group programmes is increased by £40 million a year. For 1987-88, £15 million of this will go to establish the four new urban development corporations in Greater Manchester, Teesside, Tyne and Wear and the Black Country; and there is £25 million extra to enable LDDC to build on its success in regenerating London's docklands, which has generated nearly £1·5 billion in private sector investment commitments, and to embark on a new local road network. At the same time the resources for the other programmes in the group — the urban programme itself and derelict land reclamation — will continue at the planned level in 1987-88 and will then be kept at that level in 1988-89 and 1989-90. Resources for the introduction of urban regeneration grant will be provided within the urban programme.

I am also increasing the resources for our environmental and heritage programmes — specifically, the protection of natural habitats through the Wildlife and Countryside Act, the programmes for improving access to the countryside and providing conservation advice to farmers, landowners and voluntary groups, the provision of workshops and employment in rural areas, and repair grants for historic buildings, including churches.

The various additions to provision outlined above are partly met by increases in the capital receipts, totalling some £100 million over the three years, which we now expect from the disposal of property and development land in new towns. New investment in the new towns is fully maintained at the previously planned level. Private sector developers are taking on a larger proportion of it: the public sector resources thereby released have been retained and reallocated within the OES programme.

The English water authorities' external financing limit for 1987-88 has been increased by £14 million, to sustain the increased level of capital investment achieved in 1986-87 while keeping the cost in water charges to a reasonable level. The British Waterways Board EFL remains as planned at £45 million for 1987-88.

PSA

An additional £40 million a year is provided for the Property Services Agency for major new works, unavoidable increases in rents, and maintenance and estate rationalisation.

Overall Local Authority Expenditure in England — All Services

As regards overall local authority current expenditure, I proposed on 22 July that provision for local authority relevant current expenditure in 1987-88 be increased by £2·92 billion to £25·2 billion, and that aggregate Exchequer grant be increased by over £1 billion to £12·84 billion. I have consulted local government about my proposals for the 1987-88 rate support grant settlement and will take decisions shortly.

Additional provision of £460 million and grant of £183 million will be available in 1987-88 for a teachers' pay settlement which meets the requirements set out in the statement of 30 October by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

For 1988-89 and 1989-90, provision for local authority current spending shows annual increases of 4 per cent. and 2½ per cent. respectively, allowing for the phasing-in of additional provision for teachers' pay.

As regards capital expenditure, the growth in accumulated receipts on all the services covered by the main cash limit continues to present serious problems of control. In recent years, some allowance has been made for the spending power from receipts in determining the total available for allocations, but in the event the allowance has proved inadequate and we have had repeated overspending. My colleagues and I find that unacceptable. This year, a more realistic allowance has been made for receipts which has constrained the amount available for allocations. But this will be more than offset by the growth in spending power from receipts. Overall, we have increased gross provision on the main cash limit by £660 million across the five service blocks (housing, education, transport, personal social services and other services). The revised plans allow for spending against the cash limit of almost £5 billion, an increase of £600 million on provision for 1986-87.

Notes:

[1]Excluding Urban Programme Current expenditure (£50 million a year).

[2]Negative baseline because disposal receipts now exceed the gross investment needs of the new towns programme.

[3]Reduced figure reflects the fact that an increased proportion of development expenditure in the new towns is being carried out by the private sector, reducing the public sector resource requirement.

[4]Regional Water Authorities, England, excluding MAFF drainage grants; British Waterways Board.

[5]Negative baseline because Departments' market-rent payments to PSA for accommodation exceeds PSA's costs of provision, because of properties held on Crown freehold or at low historic rent.

[6]Subject to final decisions on RSG settlement, and teachers' pay.

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to make any changes to the cash limit for class X, vote 4, Department of the Environment — other environmental services: Royal Palaces and Ancient Monuments etc.

Mr. Waldegrave: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class X, vote 4 will be increased by £1·1 million from £81,901,000 to £83,001,000. The increase will be charged to the Reserve, so it will not add to the planning total of public expenditure. The increase is the minimum necessary to cover a shortfall in receipts, due to a drop in the number of overseas visitors to the royal palaces and so on, and emergency expenditure of £100,000 following the Hampton Court palace fire.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment for each county and district authority, what is the amount of rate support grant given in 1986-87, the amount it is intended to give for 1987-88 and the percentage difference.

Mr. Chope: The change in grant depends on the expenditure decision by each authority in 1986-87 and 1987-88.

I have placed in the Library figures showing the changes between provisional 1986-87 1st supplementary report grant entitlements and the 1987-88 grant entitlements implied by the provisional 1987-88 RSG settlement if (a) all authorities increase current expenditure in line with forecast inflation, that is 3·75 per cent., and (b) authorities subject to rate and precept limitation spend at their expenditure levels and all other authorities increase current expenditure by 5·25 per cent.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what county and district local authorities in 1986-87 were protected from the effects of grant loss by the imposition of a safety net; in each instance how much that safety net was; and what percentage of the total rate support grant it formed of each relevant local authority.

Mr. Chope: I have arranged for the figures to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, for each county of district local authority, what is the effect on the rate support grant for 1987-88 of the removal of any safety net that was imposed in 1985.

Mr. Chope: Safety net multipliers determined for 1985-86 were removed in 1986-87, subject to a further safety net of 5p. There were three further stages of safety nets in 1986-87. Under the proposals published on 3 October the overall safety net multiplier determined for each authority in 1986-87 will be removed in 1987-88, subject to a 12p safety net on this and other changes in grant. Given the interaction of these various stages, it is not possible to separate out the grant effects in 1987-88 of the removal of safety nets for 1985-86.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when local authorities were told of the decision to impose a safety net in the rate support grant system in the current year; what local authorities it affects; and what is the consequence of the rate support grant settlement of each relevant authority;

(2) how the safety net which is being introduced for 1987-88 for county and district councils is calculated; and when it was decided to introduce such a safety net;

(3) how local authorities were made aware of the proposed safety netting arrangements for 1987-88 on or before 22 July 1986.

Mr. Chope: The Secretary of State's proposals for an RSG safety net were announced in his consultation paper issued on 3 October, which was sent to all authorities. The detailed arrangements for implementing the proposed net are set out in paragraph 21 of that paper, a copy of which is in the Library.

Within the fixed total of block grant available, the decision to set a safety net to protect authorities from excessive grant losses affects the grant entitlements of all local authorities. These grant entitlements, as adjusted by the safety net, are set out in the tables attached to the consultation paper.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, for each county and district local authority, assuming that each spends at the settlement assumption for 1987-88 and taking no account of possible transfers from balances, what is the estimated amount for each one of the percentage increase or decrease in the amount that needs to be raised from ratepayers.

Mr. Chope: The change in revenue to be raised from ratepayers depends on the expenditure decisions by each authority in 1986-87 and 1987-88 and the use of reserves in each year.

I have placed in the Library figures showing the change in the 1986-87 revenue to raise implied by the provisional 1986-87 1st supplementary report, and the 1987-88 revenue to raise implied by the provisional 1987-88 RSG settlement if (a) all authorities increase current expenditure in line with forecast inflation that is 3·75 per cent., and (b) authorities subject to rate and precept limitation spend at their expenditure levels and all other authorities increase current expenditure by 5·25 per cent. In areas where rateable resources are increasing, these figures overstate the implied increase in the rate poundage.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes there are for 1987-88 in the methodology of calculating grant related expenditure for county and district local authorities.

Mr. Chope: Paragraphs 13, 14 and 15 of the consultation paper issued to local authorities on 3 October contain my right hon. Friend's proposal for changes in the method of calculating grant related expenditure for 1987-88. Copies of the paper are in the Library.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, for each year since 1981 what was (i) Oxfordshire county council's net expenditure, (ii) block grant received and (iii) block grant as a percentage of net expenditure; and, in each instance, what were the mean figures for all county councils.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Bathroom Fittings Industry

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Armitage Shanks Group Ltd. concerning the effects of present water byelaws on the bathroom fittings industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I have received no representations from the Armitage Shanks Group Ltd. concerning water byelaws.

Council House Sales

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make an announcement about new discount levels on the sale of council houses to sitting tenants.

Mr. John Patten: The Housing and Planning Bill provides for higher discount on flats sold under the right to buy. There is no current proposal for a higher discount scale for houses. An increase in the £25,000 limit on discount is being considered, but no decision has been made.

Basildon (Housing)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many housing starts there have been in Basildon by the New Towns Commission and its predecessor the Basildon development corporation for each year over the past five years.

Mr. John Patten: The numbers of housebuilding starts in 1981 to 1983 reported by Basildon development corporation appear in issue 73 of "Local Housing Statistics", which is available in the Library. The corporation and the commission have reported that no starts have been made for them since 1983.

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the statistics on the number of local authority houses that are in Basildon, and the number of people on waiting lists for those houses; what information he has as to how many of these are single people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Basildon district council's housing investment programme return shows that the council owned 6,052 dwellings at 1 April 1986 and that there were 4,405 households on the waiting list at that time. Statistics about the categories of people on the list are not collected by my Department. The new town housing stock was about 15,000 in April.

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authority houses have been sold to their occupiers in Basildon since the sales programme was introduced.

Mr. John Patten: Basildon district council and development corporation reported, respectively, 834 and 734 right-to-buy sales up to March 1986. In addition, they reported, respectively, 513 and 3,085 other sales to sitting tenants from April 1980 to March 1986.

Sports Council

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will express the annual sums made available to sporting organisations in the United Kingdom by the Sports Council in per capita terms relating to the estimated number of active participants in the sports concerned.

Mr. Tracey: The cost of obtaining the information in the form requested would be disproportionate. The Sports Council's annual report gives details of all grants made to governing bodies of sport. To express this in terms of per capita expenditure would not in any event be meaningful. In reaching decisions on applications for grant-aid from a recognised governing body of sport, the council is guided by the extent to which the proposals and activities concerned correspond to its own objectives, and the demonstration of need.

Rates

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the proportion of rates in Manchester, Birmingham, Sheffield, Plymouth and Epsom, which were borne by business and commercial ratepayers, in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Dr. Boyson: Information for 1956, 1960 and 1970 is not readily available. Following is the available information for 1975, 1980 and 1986.

Business Rate Income as a Percentage of Total Rate Income

	1975-76	1980-81	1986-87

Sheffield	52	49	49
Birmingham	52	50	50
Plymouth	37	34	32
Epsom & Ewell	27	25	27

Family Expenditure

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish a table setting out the proportion of average income of a married couple with two children taken up by average local authority rates in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980 and the latest date for which figures are available;

(2) if he will publish a table setting out the proportion of average income of a married couple with two children, taken up by average council house rents in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Dr. Boyson: Information for 1956 and 1960 is not available.

The following are the available estimates of income and of rent and rates due on local authority dwellings occupied by households comprising a man, a woman and two children.

One Man, One Woman, Two Children Households
Local Authority Tenants[1] United Kingdom

	Average gross weekly income	Average unrebated weekly rent and rates	as per cent of income

Bed and Breakfast Accommodation

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the total number of families in bed and breakfast for each London borough for October and the equivalent date for (a) 1985, (b) 1984 and (c) 1983.

Mr. Tracey: The available information is shown in the table.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, when his Department will have completed its research into the use of bed and breakfast accommodation for the homeless; and when he intends to publish the findings and recommendations.

Mr. Tracey: Results of the Department's study of the operation by local authorities of part III of the Housing Act 1985 will become available during 1987. Publication will follow as appropriate.

Tenants' Rights

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has considered the conclusion of the housing research group's report on "The 1980 Tenants' Rights in Practice", a copy of which has been sent to him; what is his Department's response to the report's findings; and what is his Department's response to the report's recommendations for action by central Government to seek to ensure more effective implementation of the Housing Act 1980 tenants' charter.

Mr. Tracey: The housing research group of the City University carried out the research reported in its new book, "The 1980 Tenants' Rights in Practice" under contract to the Department during 1981-83. We have considered the researchers' main conclusion: that local authorities' poor implementation has limited the impact of these rights. Since the research was completed three years ago we have continued to inform tenants of their rights (and extended them in the Housing and Building Control Act 1984) and we have revised and reprinted our booklet about the tenants' charter, which is made freely available to tenants. We are also promoting among local authorities more responsive, locally based approaches to housing management involving greater tenant participation.

Pollution

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to determine the appeal by Downton Tannery Ltd. under section 39 of the Control of Pollution Act lodged on 24 June 1985.

Mr. Waldegrave: The appeal is still under consideration by my right hon. Friend, but a decision will be announced as soon as possible.

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to introduce legislation requiring all petrol stations to supply lead-free petrol.

Mr. Waldegrave: As I explained in answer to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Lincoln (Mr. Carlisle) on 23 June, at column 3, the Government intend that there should be at least a minimum network at petrol stations offering unleaded petrol in 1987, building up to wider availability by October 1989.

Since then unleaded petrol has become available at over 170 petrol stations across the country. This is a good start, and the Government hope that this growth will continue by voluntary action by the industry, but we have not ruled out taking measures to require the provision of unleaded petrol in garages above a particular size if this proves necessary.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he proposes to take to ensure that the covenant of the former Greater London council remains marketable and enforceable on the expiry of the function of the London residuary body in the context of fully repairing and insuring leases and rent guarantees.

Mr. Chope: The London residuary body is required to make proposals to the Secretary of State by 1 April 1990, in accordance with section 67 of the Local Government Act 1985, as to the completion of its work and as to the transfer or disposal of its remaining functions, property, rights and liabilities.

Houses (Multiple Occupation)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the conclusions of the physical and social survey of sample houses in multiple occupation carried out on behalf of his Department.

Mr. Tracey: We hope to publish the report around the end of this year.

Thamesdown Borough Council

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why the grant-related expenditure for Thamesdown borough council was reduced by 1·9 per cent. between 1986-87 and 1987-88.

Mr. Chope: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

New Towns (Finance)

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes any adjustment to the new towns cash limit in 1986-87.

Mr. John Patten: The cash limit is currently £−85·7 million and is being adjusted to £−95·7 million in the light of an increase in the receipts which are forecast for this year.

Grant-related Expenditure

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish (a) the total current expenditure and (b) total capital expenditure of each residuary body in 1986-87

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 392]: Information about residuary bodies' actual income and expenditure will not be available until after the end of the financial year. I shall in due course issue directions to residuary bodies concerning their statements of accounts for 1986-87. These statements must be submitted to me and I shall lay them before Parliament in accordance with part VIII of the Local Government Act 1985.

The estimated rate-borne expenditure of the residuary bodies as notified to rating authorities for the purpose of the 1986-87 levies is as follows:

Residuary Body	£000
London	48,171
Greater Manchester	8,438
Merseyside	7,000
South Yorkshire	4,000
Tyne and Wear	2,500
West Midlands	2,647
West Yorkshire	2,262

In addition, certain items of revenue expenditure, notably on compensation for staff made redundant at abolition, may be financed from inherited revenue balances or capital receipts.

For the most part, residuary bodies incur capital expenditure on discharging contractual liabilities inherited from the abolished councils. Their estimated gross capital expenditure, as notified to my Department on the capital estimates and commitments return 1986-87 at the beginning of the year is as follows:

Residuary Body	£000
London	69,631
Greater Manchester	650
Merseyside	2,819
South Yorkshire	708
Tyne and Wear	3,150
West Midlands
West Yorkshire	600

These estimates do not take into account the effect of off-setting capital receipts which cannot reliably be estimated, or of transfers during the year to successor authorities of undischarged liabilities.

Dr Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the relevant, total, current and grant-related expenditure of local authorities in total at plan-budget and at all later stages in each year from 1981-82 to 1987-88 (est).

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 392]: The information is as follows:

Council House Sales

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department is carrying out on council tenants' attitudes towards the right to buy in its preparation for national publicity on the increased discounts which will be available for sitting tenants to buy their council home if the Housing and Planning Bill becomes law; whether he intends to publish the findings and recommendations; what is his Department's budget for this research, and for this national publicity.

Mr. Tracey The Department has commissioned an independent research company to conduct a brief study into the level of awareness of the right to buy among council tenants in different parts of the country. The study is limited in scope and is designed to assist the Department to inform tenants as effectively as possible of their new rights once the Housing and Planning Bill has become law early next year. As such, the findings of the survey will not be of general interest and there is presently no intention to publish them. The current estimated cost of the study is just under £40,000. Details of our proposed campaign to inform tenants of the changes in the law have not yet been fully worked out, but the budget for the exercise is likely to be in the region of £0·5 million.

THE ARTS

Value Added Tax

Mr. Andrew Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received from members of the Museums and Galleries Commission and the National Art Collections Fund in respect of harmonisation of value added tax in the European Economic Community as applied to works of art; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I have received representations from a number of sources, including the chairman of the Museums and Galleries Commission, the director of the National Art Collections Fund and representatives of the fine arts trade, on the draft seventh directive on harmonisation of VAT in the European Community. Questions relating to VAT are, of course, a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the first instance. I should, however, like to reassure the hon. Member that no decisions on new Community measures in respect of VAT and works of art are imminent.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

11. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to review the administration of mortgage interest tax relief.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The administration of mortgage tax relief by the Inland Revenue was the subject of a report by the National Audit Office last April, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Monetary Policy

12. Mr. Allen Adams asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress of United Kingdom monetary policy.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Our policy continues to be to maintain monetary conditions that exert steady downward pressure on inflation.

The Economy (Management)

15. Mr. Canavan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the management of the economy following his recent Mansion House speech.

Mr. Lawson: The usual variety.

Keith Report

16. Mr. Stern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to implement any further proposals of the Keith report, relating to enforcement powers for the Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Mr. Brooke: This matter is under careful consideration following recent consultations.

Furnished Property (Landlords)

17. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward proposals to amend the treatment for capital and income tax purposes of landlords who let and dispose of furnished property; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: We have at present no plans to do so.

Exchange Rates

18. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current sterling exchange rate.

Mr. Lawson: At noon today the sterling index stood at 69·4.

29. Mr. Alton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his financial policy includes a target range for sterling against the United States dollar and the deutschmark; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: No.

52. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure the stability of the sterling exchange rate.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend will continue to pursue prudent economic policies, designed to achieve stable, non-inflationary growth, and encourage other countries to do the same.

53. Mr. Hardy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what proportion the value of the pound sterling has fallen against that of the United States dollar, the West German deutschmark, the French franc and the Italian lira in the last 12 months.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The percentage change in the value of sterling between end-October 1985 and end-October 1986 against other currencies was as follows:

	Per cent.
US dollar	−2·5
Deutschmark	−23·1
French franc	−17·6
Italian lira	−21·1

34. Mr. Livsey asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has for producing greater stability for exchange rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend will continue to pursue prudent economic policies, designed to achieve stable non-inflationary growth, and encourage other countries to do the same.

Value Added Tax

19. Mr. Heddle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the Government's defence in respect of the infraction proceedings under the European Economic Community sixth directive on value added tax on new building.

Mr. Brooke: No. In accordance with the normal practice in infraction proceedings we do not propose to publish our defence in the zero rates case.

22. Mr. Thurnham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about the collection of value added tax from small businesses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: We have received a number of representations covering the whole range of value added tax. I welcome the recent publication by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of a consultation paper "VAT: Small Business Review" which contains a package of proposals to help small businesses.

I am anxious to press on with these proposals and am therefore asking for all comments to be sent to Customs by 31 December so that decisions can be taken in good time for the 1987 Finance Bill.

24. Mr. Patchett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the operation of the penalties contained in the Finance Act 1985 concerning value added tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Yes. The White Paper "Building Businesses . . . Not Barriers" (Cmnd. 9794) contains a commitment to review the penalties before the 1988 Budget, after a full year's practical experience.

33. Mr. Madden asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress he has made in securing more flexibility in setting the value added tax threshold.

Mr. Brooke: On 9 October 1986, the European Commission submitted to the Council of Ministers a draft directive proposing a VAT scheme to apply to small and medium sized businesses. One of the proposals in the directive is for an optional maximum threshold of 35,000 ecu (about £25,000).

Unemployment

20. Mr. O'Neill asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to the Exchequer of unemployment based on the latest unemployment figures.

Mr. MacGregor: The overall cost to the Exchequer of unemployment and supplementary benefit paid to the unemployed is estimated to be £5·6 billion in 1986-87. In addition it is estimated that £1·15 billion will be paid in housing benefit, a benefit which can continue to be paid if the claimant finds employment.

39. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to include a forecast of the level of unemployment in 1987-88 in his next Budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist).

44. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has made any recent study of the comparative effects on unemployment of tax cuts and increased public expenditure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: There are considerable limitations on such estimates, which depend on the definitions and assumptions used, as well as the time scale chosen.

Public and Private Investment

21. Mr. Hirst asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of public and private investment in the current financial year; how this compares with the respective totals in 1985-86; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Investment was at an all-time high in 1985 and I expect it to reach a new record level again this year.

Interest Rates

23. Mr. Fisher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Base rates are 11 per cent.

36. Mr. Dubs asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect the recent rise in interest rates will have on (a) inflation and (b) Government expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: The recent rise in interest rates was necessary to maintain steady downward pressure on inflation. The level of interest rates is only one of a number of factors that are taken into account in the public expenditure survey, the outcome of which will be announced in the Autumn Statement.

Charities

25. Mr. Leigh asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the growth of tax-relieved giving to charities between 1978 and 1985.

32. Mr. Merchant asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the effect of his policies to facilitate charitable giving on the level of giving to charities in real terms between 1978 and 1985.

Mr. Ian Stewart: After allowing for inflation, covenanted giving increased by nearly 60 per cent. from 1978 to 1985 and bequests to charities increased by 140 per cent.

51. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he intends to introduce regulations governing payroll giving to charities, in accordance with the Finance Act 1986.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The regulations were published in draft on 28 October. Comments on the draft have been invited by 19 November. The Government intend to lay the regulations as soon as possible thereafter, once we have taken account of these comments.

54. Mr. Maclean asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the operation of his tax incentive scheme for charities.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Tax relief for payroll giving to charities starts in April 1987. The other new reliefs in this year's Finance Act to encourage charitable giving are already in operation and I hope that donors and charities will take full advantage of them.

Public Sector Pay

26. Mr. John Townend asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what percentage public sector pay has increased in the last 12 months.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Average earnings in the whole economy increased at an underlying rate of 7½ per cent. in the 12 months to August. Separate figures for the public sector are not published.

Consumer Expenditure

27. Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current levels of consumer expenditure.

47. Mr. Rogers asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has about current levels of consumer expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: Consumers' expenditure is estimated to have totalled £113·4 billion in the first half of 1986.

Income Tax

28. Mr. Yeo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what study his Department has conducted on the effect of reducing top marginal rates of income tax on tax yield.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Cutting marginal tax rates undoubtedly gives a stimulus to enterprise and effort, but I know of no recent studies into the effect of reducing top marginal rates in the United Kingdom.

37. Mr. Penhaligon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate what would be the effect on Treasury revenues of reintroducing the 1979 higher rate income tax scales.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The 1979 tax structure for the basic rate limit and higher rates and thresholds, if indexed to 1986-87 and applied to current levels of income, would yield about £1·7 billion more than the present tax regime. This makes no allowance for any possible change to income levels from introducing the proposed tax structure.

46. Mr. Nicholls asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect the reduction in higher rate tax bands has had on the proportion of the income tax yield that is provided by higher rate taxpayers.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In 1978-79 when higher rates of income tax were 40 per cent. to 83 per cent., about 3½ per cent. of taxpayers (counting a married couple as one) paid tax at higher rates. They contributed 20 per cent. of the total income tax yield. Since then, higher rates of tax have been reduced to 40 per cent. to 60 per cent., the threshold for higher rates has been increased in real terms, the basic rate has been reduced, and incomes of higher rate taxpayers have increased more quickly than for other taxpayers. In 1986-87, about 5 per cent. of taxpayers pay at higher rates and they contribute 27 per cent. of the yield.

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people had incomes below the level which makes them liable to the standard rate of income tax in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Nurses (Tax Relief)

Mr. Dobson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to enable nurses to set against tax their compulsory initial and recurrent registration fees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Inland Revenue has already agreed the tax relief is allowable from 1 January 1987 for the recurrent registration fees payable by nurses to the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting, under existing legislation dealing with fees and subscriptions payable to professional bodies. No relief is allowable, however, under these provisions for initial registration fees. This follows the general principle of the schedule E expenses rules that relief is not given for expenses incurred to put a person in a position to perform the duties of an employment, and I do not think it would be appropriate to make a special exception for nurses.

Household Indebtedness

30. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he currently makes of the year-on-year increase in household indebtedness.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The best available statistics for the debt of the personal sector, which includes unincorporated businesses and non-profit making bodies as well as households, are shown in table 14.4 of "Financial Statistics", October 1986.

European Monetary System

31. Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next proposes to have discussions with the European Community Council of Ministers about the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave him on 15 May 1986 at column 842.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will indicate what he considers to be the appropriate conditions for the United Kingdom membership of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A number of factors and their interaction need to be taken into account.

Wage Increases

35. Mr. Baldry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the present average rate of wage increases in the United Kingdom; and what information he has as to how this compares with the United States of America, West Germany and Japan.

Mr. MacGregor: In the United Kingdom, underlying average earnings increased by 7¼ per cent. in the year to August 1986. The most recent figures show earnings rising by 1·9 per cent. on a year earlier in the United States, by 1·7 per cent. in West Germany and by 2·1 per cent. in Japan.

Share Ownership

38. Mr. Fallon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the current level of direct ownership of shares in the United Kingdom.

43. Mrs. Roe asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the impact of the Trustee Savings Bank's sale on direct ownership of equities by individuals in the United Kingdom.

45. Mr. Butterfill asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has about the total level of direct shareholdings by individuals since the flotation of the Trustee Savings Bank.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates vary, but it is generally accepted that the number of individual shareholders has roughly doubled since 1979. The TSB flotation has provided a further boost to individual share ownership. There were over 3 million successful applications for shares, and a recent National Opinion Poll survey suggests that the issue may have attracted a million people who have never owned shares before.

42. Mr. Sackville asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the extension of share ownership.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend has received numerous representations welcoming the measures he has introduced, such as the personal equity plan scheme, to encourage the extension of share ownership by individuals.

Building Societies Act 1986

40. Mr. Eastham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet the Building Societies Association to discuss the operation of the Building Societies Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to my reply earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. McCrindle). My right hon. Friend has no present plans to meet the Building Societies Association.

Civil Servants (Select Committees)

41. Mr. Dalyell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for his Department's relationship with the Committee of Public Accounts of the Government's decision to instruct civil servants not to answer questions from Select Committees about the conduct of individual officials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The Committee of Public Accounts takes evidence from accounting officers appointed by the Treasury. The Committee has been specifically assured by my Department that the Government's response to the Defence Committee is not intended to alter in any way the accounting officers' relationship with them.

Sub-contractors' Tax Certificates

48. Mr. Pollock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to improve the administrative efficiency of the system of sub-contractors' tax certificates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The certificates are being redesigned to improve security and reduce the possibility of misuse, and will come into operation today. There are no plans to make other changes.

Works of Art (Taxation)

49. Mr. Jessel asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Government have had any recent discussions with European Community finance Ministers on taxation of works of art for auction.

Mr. Brooke: No, but the Government are paying close attention to recent developments on EC Commission proposals.

Medium-term financial strategy

50. Mr. Duffy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the present policy on the medium-term financial strategy.

Mr. MacGregor: The medium-term financial strategy provides the framework for economic policy which has successfully reduced inflation to 3 per cent. and created the conditions for over five years of growth.

Christmas Parties (Taxation)

Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to harmonise the practice of the Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise with regard to the tax treatment of expenditure on Christmas parties for employees, in so far as it relates, on the one hand, to the non-charging to income tax of such expenditure as a benefit in kind, within modest limits, and the extent to which those costs can be offset against the company's value added tax liability, on the other.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Given the differences in purpose and scope between the taxes administered by Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, I am not aware of any respects in which the practices of the two Departments in relation to the treatment of expenditure by employers on annual parties for their employees need to be harmonised, but if my hon. Friend knows of difficulties in this area perhaps he will write to me.

Public Expenditure

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the proportion of public expenditure taken up by rent rebates, rate rebates, and housing benefit, in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Inland Revenue

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were employed in the Inland Revenue in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The following table gives the number of staff in post at 1 April

Year	Number
1956	[1]51,559
1960	[1]56,093
1970	68,632
1975	74,196
1980	78,312

[1] Includes casual staff, not identified separately before 1967.

The number of staff in post at 1 October 1986 was 69,026.

Systime plc

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the occasions on which his Department was involved with United States customs, in relation to the United States investigation and fine of Systime plc; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Systime plc was the subject of informal discussions between United Kingdom and United States Customs between 1982 and 1985. The United States investigation and the fine on Systime plc were not discussed.

EC (Agricultural Expenditure)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what were the factors responsible for the conclusion of the European Economic Community Commissioners, reported to the October meeting of the Economic and Finance Council, that there would be a substantial overrun of agricultural expenditure in 1987; to what extent such extra expenditure would constitute a breach of the budgetary discipline agreement; and if he will make a statement;

(2) to what extent the European Economic Community Council's draft budget for 1987 takes account of the European Economic Community Commission's assessment that there will be a substantial overrun of agricultural expenditure in 1987.

Mr. Brooke: The Council's draft budget for 1987 makes provision for agricultural expenditure at the level of the budget discipline guideline; what happened at the October ECOFIN Council was that the Commission warned that, unless action is taken, actual expenditure is likely substantially to exceed the guideline figure. This assessment took a number of factors into account, including a further fall in the value of the United States dollar and recent agrimonetary changes. The next steps are for the Agriculture Council to take decisions on the Commission's existing proposals and for the Commission itself to put forward further proposals. Whether any additional expenditure would involve a breach of budget discipline would depend on whether there were genuinely exceptional circumstances which made such expenditure necessary.

EC (Finance Council)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the reservations expressed in the October

European Economic Community Finance Council by the German, Greek and Danish delegations on the matter of his Presidency conclusions at that meeting.

Mr. Brooke: Reservations were expressed that the solution to the problems of redirecting the common agricultural policy needed to take account, in addition, of political and social aspects. One delegation questioned whether it was right to approach these problems from a budgetary point of view and entered a general reserve on these grounds.

Inflation

Mr. Parry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current rate of inflation.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the member for Berkshire, East (Mr. MacKay).

Central Office of Information

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is proposing any change to the Central Office of Information cash limit for 1986-87.

Mr. Brooke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class XIX vote 1 will be increased by £27,000,000 from £70,977,000 to £97,977,000. The increase will be offset by reimbursements by the clients of the Central Office of Information and will not therefore add to the planning total of public expenditure.

EMPLOYMENT

Restart Scheme

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General if he will publish the latest estimate of the number of interviews carried out under the restart scheme together with the results of these interviews in placing people into jobs, the community programme, jobclubs, enterprise allowance scheme, restart courses, training courses, voluntary projects programmes, and other outcomes.

Mr. Lee: By 9 October, 366,451 people had been counselled under restart:

2,547	were placed in jobs
9,757	were placed on the community programme
2,890	were placed in jobclubs
1,585	were placed on the enterprise allowance scheme
31,012	started restart courses
5,488	started training courses
672	joined the voluntary projects programme or began other voluntary work
104	started a course at an employment rehabilitation centre

The above placings reflect only those arising from referrals made at the restart interview. They do not reflect people who find jobs, or other solutions to their unemployment, wholly or partly as a result of advice given by counselling staff or restart courses. The Manpower Services Commission does not follow the progress of individuals once they have been counselled under restart.

Unemployed (Job Training)

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General (1) whether the training being offered to the six-month unemployed and the required certificate or qualification is going to be linked to other established schemes and lead to established qualifications;

(2) what types of training are to be covered in the pilot scheme for job training for the six-month unemployed;

(3) what criteria, apart from age, the restart counsellor will be using to decide whether an interviewee is eligible for the pilot scheme for job training for the six-month unemployed;

(4) how many places are on the pilot schemes for job training for the six-month unemployed;

(5) how long he expects interviewees to wait before joining the new job training scheme for the six-month unemployed if the restart counsellor thinks he or she is suitable;

(6) what consultations he has had with the CBI regarding the new job training scheme for the six-month unemployed; and if he will make a statement;

(7) what submission he has had from the trade unions and interested groups regarding the job training scheme for the six-month unemployed;

(8) what are the criteria for assessment before, during and at the end of the pilot job training scheme for the six-month unemployed.

Mr. Trippier: The pilot training programme for the six-month unemployed will be operated by managing agents in collaboration with the Manpower Services Commission; it will be for each managing agent to draw as appropriate on existing courses and on new tailor-made provision to meet the particular training needs of individuals on the programme. Vocational qualifications will be made available to trainees wherever possible.

Each managing agent is expected to provide participants with initial assessment, training in occupational skills supported by relevant practical experience and an element of training in job seeking skills. They must also offer training in information technology and self-employment skills.

The programme will be open to adults in the pilot areas who have been unemployed for six months or more, as one of the aims is to establish how much demand for training there is amongst this group. It is not yet possible to say how many training places will be made available. Each managing agent will be responsible for making his own arrangements for placing individuals on the programme with the minimum possible delay. Plans for the programme were discussed by the Manpower Services Commission, on which both CBI and TUC are represented, at their meeting on 21 October.

Assessment will take place at the beginning of the programme, to establish which training elements individuals should then pursue; during the programme to review progress; and at or near the end of the programme to award qualifications and helping individuals find jobs.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General how many and what percentage of those who participated in the restart scheme have gone on to permanent employment.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: By 9 October 366,451 people had been interviewed under restart. 30,218 of them (8·2 per cent.) are known to have ceased claiming unemployment benefit but we have no means of measuring exactly how many of these are now in permanent employment. An early survey conducted by the Manpower Services

Commission in the pilot areas indicated that approximately 60 per cent. of these people will have gone into employment but we are still considering the basis and the reliability of that survey.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General what criteria were used when choosing the pilot areas for restart.

Mr. Lee: The nine pilot areas were chosen to reflect a wide range of labour market conditions and to provide a wide geographical spread throughout Great Britain.

Training Schemes

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General why details of the number of people on special work or training schemes have been dropped from his Department's monthly press release details.

Mr. Lee: Since May we have arranged for the numbers of people assisted by employment measures and YTS to be published monthly in the Employment Gazette which is available in the Library.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report tables showing the date and nature of each change made since 1979 in the method of calculating total unemployment statistics, showing the effect of each change in each region in the subsequent monthly figure.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We have made only three changes in the method of calculating unemployment statistics since 1979. The major one follows the decision in October 1982 to cease compulsory registration at jobcentres. The previous count of registrants at jobcentres became incomplete and it was necessary to move counting claimants at unemployment benefit offices. We have also delayed the compilation of the figures to correct over-recording, and made a minor change in Northern Ireland again because of over-recording. There have also been several administrative changes which have inevitably affected the coverage of the count. Only three have been significant.

The following are the average monthly affects of each change in method of calculation at the time they occurred in each region:

Changes affecting the unemployment count

Region	Registrant to claimant count October 1982	Reconciliation of benefit records in Northern Ireland July 1985	Reduction of over-recording March 1986
South East	−54,000	—	−18,420
Greater London	−29,000	—	−9,820
East Anglia	−4,000	—	−1,430
South West	−8,000	—	−4,300
West Midlands	−20,000	—	−3,910
East Midlands	−8,000	—	−2,590
Yorks and Humberside	−14,000	—	−3,690
North West	−32,000	—	−5,380
North	−10,000	—	−2,180
Wales	−10,000	—	−1,990
Scotland	−22,000	—	−4,570
Great Britain	−182,000	—	−48,460
Northern Ireland	−8,000	−5,000	−1,540
United Kingdom	−190,000	−5,000	−50,000

These effects cannot simply be added together to give a cumulative effect on subsequent unemployment figures, because the effects tend to vary over time.

Gas Installation

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Paymaster General if he will publish in the Official Report (a) the financial costs for the training and registration of gas installers under the Confederation of Registered Gas Installers for the years 1980 to 1985, inclusive, (b) the contribution made by the British Gas Corporation to those financial costs and (c) the number of incidents recorded as a result of faulty gas installation in the years 1980 to 1985, inclusive.

Mr. Trippier: Between 1980-85 the Confederation for the registration of Gas Installers was funded by the British Gas Corporation and its financial arrangements were a matter for the corporation.

Figures are not available for the number of incidents resulting specifically from faulty gas installation. The following table gives the number of fires, explosions and carbon monoxide poisonings caused by piped gas:

	Number
1980	226
1981	257
1982	255
1983	210
1984	214
1985	288

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Paymaster General if he will ensure that the new gas supply company will continue to be responsible for funding the training of installers and the provision of a competent installation service through the successor organisation to the Confederation of Registered Gas Installers.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have asked the Health and Safety Commission and the Council of the Confederation of Registered Gas Installers to develop proposals for a new, independent and representative body to promote safety in gas installation. These proposals, which will include funding, are awaited.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Wareing asked the Paymaster General what information about the adaptations to premises and equipment scheme, and other help extended by the Manpower Services Commission to employers and disabled employees is given to employers whenever they apply for a permit to employ a non-disabled person when they are under quota.

Mr. Lee: The Manpower Services Commission's programme to promote the adoption and implementation of constructive policies and practices towards the employment of people with disabilities has, amongst its aims, that of keeping employers generally aware of the services and support available, including the adaptations to premises and equipment scheme. In addition, where an employer applies for a permit to engage non-disabled people, it is the Manpower Services Commission's policy that information about help that is available for the adaptation of premises and equipment, together with other relevant services, is presented to the employer when he is asked to consider people with disabilities who may be available for such vacancies.

Health and Safety

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General what is the Government's policy on enforcement action against employers who breach the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act, the Offices, Shops and Railway Premises Act and regulations made under them.

Mr. Trippier: Under section 18 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act, enforcement policy is primarily the responsibility of the Health and Safety Executive and local authorities, subject to guidance issued from time to time by the Health and Safety Commission.

Inspectors appointed under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act will use the powers of enforcement available to them under the Act when in their judgment such action provides the best means of protecting the health and safety of people at work and/or the public.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General (1) for each of the years 1979 to 1985, inclusive, what proportion of premises registered with the Factory Inspectorate were or are subject to planned inspections by factory inspectors;

(2) for each of the years 1979 to 1986, inclusive, how many premises were registered with the Factory Inspectorate in each of the following categories of inspection rating total: (a) 0-5, (b) 6-10, (c) 11-15, (d) 16-20, (e) 21-25, (f) 26-30, (g) 31-35, (h) 36-40, (i) 41-45, (j) 46-50 and (k) 51-55;

(3) for each Health and Safety Executive inspection rating total between 0 and 55, what is Her Majesty's Factory Inspectorate's intended frequency of planned inspection; and what the actual frequency of planned inspection has been for each of the years 1979 to 1985, for each of the inspection ratings totals between 0 and 55;

(4) how many fatal accidents and major injuries occurred in premises in each of the following categories of Health and Safety Executives inspection rating total: (a) 0-5, (b) 6-10, (c) 11-15, (d) 16-20, (e) 21-25, (f) 26-30, (g) 31-35, (h) 36-40, (i) 41-45, (j) 46-50, (k) 51-55 and (l) for each of the years 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Trippier: A comprehensive central record of the information requested is not kept and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General how the number of factory inspectors in the field differs from the number of factory inspectors employed in Her Majesty's Factory Inspectorate.

Mr. Trippier: On 1 November 566 factory inspectors were employed in Her Majesty's factory inspectorate, 544 of whom work in the field.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General, for each of the years 1978 to 1986, how many factory inspectors are or were employed in each of the following categories: Her Majesty's factory inspectorate total, Health and Safety Executive factory inspectorate division and factory inspectors in the field.

Mr. Trippier: The information is as follows. The figures exclude specialist inspectors who formerly worked in Her Majesty's factory inspectorate but now form part of the Health and Safety Executive's technology and air pollution division.

1 April	Factory Inspectors in HSE as a whole	Factory Inspectors in HM Factory Inspectorate	Factory Inspectors in HMFI (Field only)
1978	695	642	619
1979	742	688	656
1980	759	702	664
1981	735	682	638
1982	678	620	594
1983	654	589	563
1984	627	564	539
1985	652	589	559
1986	623	560	540

All factory inspectors employed in the Health and Safety Executive's factory and agricultural inspectorate divisions work in Her Majesty's factory inspectorate. A number of factory inspectors work in other divisions of the executive, mainly on policy development.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General how many factory inspectors in the field are intended to be in post in December 1986, 1987 and 1988, at each of the following grades (a) principal inspector, (b) grade 1B inspector, (c) grade 1A inspector and (d) grade 2 inspector.

Mr. Trippier: On 1 November there were 25 principal inspectors (national) (generally known as deputy superintending inspectors), 119 principal inspectors (class 1A), 294 inspectors class 1B, and 86 class II inspectors in the field organisation of Her Majesty's factory inspectorate. There were also 20 more factory inspectors in senior management positions.

It is not possible to give precise estimates of future staffing.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General how many visits were made by factory inspectors in 1985; and what percentage change this represents over 1980 to 1984.

Mr. Trippier: A total of 190,546 visits were paid by factory inspectors in 1985; 11·8 per cent. fewer visits were paid in 1985 than in 1980.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General, for each of the employment sectors in the standard industrial classification, what specific initiatives have been taken in each of the last five years by the Health and Safety Executive to discuss with managements and unions the underlying causes of accidents and ill health and what can be done to reduce them.

Mr. Trippier: Initiatives mounted by the Health and Safety Executive in each of the last five years are described in the annual published reports of the Health and Safety Commission and the Health and Safety Executive. I have arranged for the hon. Member to receive copies of the latest published reports.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General if he will list the main additional areas of enforcement responsibility which Her Majesty's factory inspectorate took on in each of the years between 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Trippier: The main additional areas of enforcement responsibility taken by Her Majesty's factory inspectorate since 1979 are as follows:

1981

The notification of Accidents and Dangerous occurrences regulations.

The Health and Safety (dangerous pathogens) regulations.

The control of lead at work regulations.

The diving operations at work regulations.

1982

The Dangerous Substances (Conveyance by Road in road tankers and tank containers) regulations.

The notification of new substances regulations.

1983

The Notification of Installations Handling hazardous substances regulations.

1984

The asbestos licensing regulations.

The classification packaging and labelling regulations.

1985

The Gas Safety Regulations.

The control of industrial major accident hazards regulations.

Mr. Michie asked the Paymaster General, for each of the years 1979 to 1985, what was the number of staff days per year spent by factory inspectors, on each of the following areas (a) gas safety, (b) asbestos licensing and (c) work arising out of and in preparation for the coming into force of the control of industrial major accident hazard regulations.

Mr. Trippier: The figures are not available for years before 1985. The number of staff days spent by factory inspectors in the HSE areas in the period April 1985 to March 1986 on work in the areas specified were recorded as follows:

	Days
Gas Safety	558
Asbestos Licensing	3,202
Major hazards	2,584

Job Losses

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General how many jobs were lost in manufacturing for each month since 1956.

Mr. Lee: Information about job gains and losses is not available from the Department's statistics, but an indication of the net changes can be seen by comparing levels of employment at different dates.

Estimates of the numbers of employees in employment in manufacturing industries in Great Britain are available on a consistent basis from June 1959. They are available for June each year from June 1959 to June 1977, quarterly from September 1977 to December 1981 and monthly from January 1982 to August 1986.

The available estimates for June 1959 to June 1971, analysed according to the 1968 standard industrial classification (SIC), were published on page 196 of the March 1975 issue of the Department of Employment Gazette. The available estimates for June 1971 to June 1977, analysed according to the 1980 SIC, may be found in table 1·2 of Historical Supplement No 1 published with the April 1985 issue of Employment Gazette. Both publications are in the Library.

The following tables give the available information for June 1977 to August 1986. The estimates on which the comparisons are based are unadjusted for seasonable variation.

Action for Jobs (Advertising Campaign)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Paymaster General how much has been spent on the "Action for Jobs" advertising campaign, nationally and regionally; how he expects to assess its effects; and what effects he expects it to have.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 30 October 1986, c. 215]: There was an error in the information contained in my previous reply. About £6·5 million has been spent so far on "Action for Jobs" advertising. This represents 0·2 per cent. of the total expenditure of £3 billion this year on more than 30 employment, enterprise and training measures described in the "Action for Jobs" booklet.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis about allegations of corruption involving certain officers of the Metropolitan police and Mr. Roy Garner and others; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has appointed the chief constable of South Yorkshire, Mr. Peter Wright, to investigate these allegations. The investigation will be supervised by the Police Complaints Authority, which has approved Mr. Wright's appointment.

Airey Neave (Murder)

Mr. J. Enoch Powell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands as to the circumstances in which, on or before October 1985, two detective constables represented themselves as having murdered the late Airey Neave.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The right hon. Member's question relates to criminal proceedings now before the courts. It would not be right to comment.

Immigration

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information and evidence available to immigration officers at United Kingdom ports of entry when considering the bona fides of intending visitors from Pakistan will not be available to entry clearance officers in Pakistan.

Mr. Waddington: Information from official records here is available to entry clearance officers abroad, though less readily than to immigration officers at United Kingdom ports. Entry clearance officers consider all evidence submitted by or obtained from applicants. The Immigration Act 1971 gives immigration officers, but not entry clearance officers, powers to search and to examine documents found on search.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many people from (a) Bangladesh, (b) Pakistan, (c) India, (d) Ghana and (e) Nigeria have been held at West Laingeton detention centre; and why they have been forced to wear prison clothing.

Mr. Waddington: The information relates to passengers from the five countries detained in HM detention centre, Blantyre house, Cranbrook and Erlestoke youth custody centre, Lavington, Devizes, and at midnight 2 November, was as follows:

Nationality	Number detained
Bangladesh	43
Ghana	1
India	15
Nigeria	0
Pakistan	3

Persons detained at these establishments under the Immigration Act 1971 are not required to wear prison clothing.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of applicants for (a) entry clearance and (b) visas from (i) India, (ii) Bangladesh, (iii) Pakistan, (iv) Ghana and (v) Nigeria as of 30 October, or the nearest date available; and what is the equivalent figure for entry clearance for the same date in 1985 and 1984.

Mr. Waddington: The latest complete information currently available centrally on entry clearance applications outstanding in the Indian sub-continent relates to end June 1986 and is given in the table. Corresponding information for Ghana and Nigeria is not available. Citizens of these countries whose application is granted are issued with an entry certificate or visa, depending on the requirements in operation at the time of issue.

[1] Including both applications for settlement and for temporary purposes.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are made for (a) dietary needs, (b) child care and (c) translation for arrivals at all entry ports in the United Kingdom; and if he will publish the instruction for guidance notes issued by his Department to the immigration service.

Mr. Waddington: The information given relates to those detention centres for which the immigration service is responsible. The dietary needs of detainees are as far as possible met by the wide range of meals available. Children are not normally detained unless accompanied by one or both parents, or a female relative; when a child is detained a female member of staff is always in attendance. House rules setting out the domestic arrangements are prominently displayed in a variety of languages in each centre. Arrangements are well advanced to increase the range of translations and to issue individual copies to all detainees. A copy of the code of practice covering standards for immigration detention centres has already been placed in the Library.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people arriving in the United Kingdom from (a) India, (b) Bangladesh, (c) Pakistan, (d) Ghana and (e) Nigeria since 1 October who tried to enter as visitors were subsequently returned despite hon. Members' requests that they not be sent back.

Mr. Waddington: Those referred to in the reply given to the question by the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 27 October, except that four passengers, not five, were sent back on 19 October when a right hon. or hon. Member had expressed an interest in the case prior to a decision to refuse entry. All the passengers concerned were from Bangladesh.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors from (a) India, (b) Bangladesh, (c) Pakistan, (d) Ghana and (e) Nigeria have been (i) held and (ii) are still being held by the Immigration Service since 1 October.

Mr. Waddington: The information readily available relates to passengers of the five nationalities detained at midnight on 2 November in immigration service detention centres at Gatwick, Heathrow and Harmondsworth, HM detention centre, Blantyre house and Erlestoke youth custody centre:

Nationality	Number Currently detained
Bangladesh	47
Ghana	6
India	18
Nigeria	4
Pakistan	6

Mr. Vanunu (Kidnapping)

Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Mr. Mordechai Vanunu left the United Kingdom through the normal departure channels.

Mr. Waddington: I have nothing that I can add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow) on 3 November at column 326.

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the arrival of Mr. Vanunu within the United Kingdom was registered on his Department's computer.

Mr. Waddington: No.

Dogs

Mr. John Hunt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has yet been able to assess the results of the pilot scheme, initiated in September 1985, to test the effectiveness of the model byelaws designed to reduce the problem of dogs fouling in public places; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have not yet completed our consideration of the results of the pilot scheme, but expect to do so, and to make an announcement, fairly shortly.

National Sunday

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions the Metropolitan police have had with the National Front concerning its participation in Remembrance Sunday.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The National Front will take no part in the national service of remembrance on 9 November. However, I understand from the commissioner that notification has been received from the National Front of its intention, as in the previous 18 years, to hold a procession to the cenotaph later that afternoon. Metropolitan police officers have discussed the proposed arrangements with the procession organisers on two occasions.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are used by the Metropolitan police in deciding the order of marching to the Cenotaph on Remembrance Sunday.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Where two organisations wish to hold a public procession at the same place at the same time, and alternative arrangements cannot be agreed in discussion, the commissioner takes into account the risk of confusion and disorder, and whether the procession has been held in previous years. Under section 3 of the Public Order Act 1936 the commissioner has power to issue directions to those organising or participating in a procession if he has reasonable grounds for apprehending that it may occasion serious public disorder.

Detained Persons

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were held in police cells on remand in England and Wales on 24 September and each succeeding day to the latest date available.

Mr. Mellor: The number of prisoners, most of whom are likely to have been untried, held in police cells in England and Wales was as follows:

Date	Number
September
24-25	94
25-26	105
26-27	80

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of persons held in prisons in England and Wales at the latest available date.

Mr. Mellor: On 31 October 1986 the total number of persons held in Prison Department custody in England and Wales was 47,414.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of persons held on remand in prison in the south-east region of the Prison Department for the most recent date available; and what was the comparable figure for each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: The information, which excludes those held in police cells, is as follows:

Untried and convicted unsentenced population of establishments in the South East Region of the Prison Department

At 30 September	Number of Persons
1981	2,650
1982	2,490
1983	2,860

1986	4,030

Marches

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration has been given to allowing chief constables the power to request the banning of a march or marches to the Home Secretary without the approval of the local council concerned.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to paragraph 50 of the Green Paper "Review of the Public Order Act and related legislation" (Cmnd. 7891), which canvassed this option, and to paragraph 4.15 of the White Paper "Review of Public Order" (Cmnd. 9510) which records the result of that consideration. Clause 13 of the Public Order Bill, which has just completed its parliamentary passage, retains the existing procedure for banning marches.

Prisoners (Correspondence)

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will investigate why letters addressed by a prisoner in Guernsey to the hon. Members for Battersea; for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes); for Plymouth, Drake (Miss Fookes); and to Lord Elton at the time he was a Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Home Office were withheld.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: If the hon. Member provides me with details, I will make inquiries and write to him.

Magistrates' Courts

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make a statement on future policy with regard to the professional qualifications required of magistrates' court clerks.

Mr. Mellor: I hope to do so within the next few weeks.

Passports

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home department if he will now take steps to ensure that the Welsh language can be officially recognised on passports relating to residents of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Birthplaces in Wales can be entered in passports in Welsh on request. There are no plans to go beyond this.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the status of a person bearing an Isle of Man passport in relation to the EEC; and what effect the development of a Europassport will have on citizens of the Isle of Man.

Mr. Waddington: The majority, but not all, of British citizens holding British passports issued in the Isle of Man are entitled to European community benefits relating to employment and establishment. Where they are not, this is indicated in their passports.

British citizens from the Isle of Man will be granted the new British passport in the EC common format when it is introduced in the United Kingdom. As at present, the passport will be suitably endorsed if the holder is not entitled to EC benefits.

The Isle of Man authorities have yet to indicate how they wish to adapt the format of the passport that they issue.

Leg Irons

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the use of leg irons to restrain persons in custody, and towards the length of time for which such people should remain so restrained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Leg irons are not used in prison establishments in England and Wales. A leather ankle strap may, however, be employed where a prisoner resorts to kicking to resist his removal from one part of an establishment to another and it is necessary to restrain him to avoid his injuring himself or others. Staff are instructed that the strap is to be taken off as soon as the removal of the prisoner is completed.

I understand that leg irons are not used by any police force in England and Wales.

Little Ilford Estate, London

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the current arrangements for policing the Little Ilford estate in London, East 12; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No; but if the hon. Gentleman is concerned about a particular aspect of the policing of the estate perhaps he would let me know.

Royal Observer Corps

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what land and establishments are owned or leased by the Royal Observer Corps in Wales.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Royal Observer Corps does not own or lease land or property. It provides the field force for the United Kingdom warning and monitoring organisation, and in Wales mans 67 monitoring posts and two group controls.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Royal Observer Corps establishments, military establishments and local authorities were involved in exercise Warmon on 19 and 26 October.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are no Royal Observer Corps establishments as such, but Royal Observer Corps personnel provided the field force to man the United Kingdom warning and monitoring organisation which was activated for the exercise. A number of military and local authorities also participated but this information has not yet been collated. I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the manpower, full-time, part-time and volunteer, of the Royal Observer Corps in Wales; and whether it is at present at full strength.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In Wales, the full-time manpower of the Royal Observer Corps is four against an establishment of four; there are no part-time members; volunteer strength is 831, against an establishment of 947.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for developing the rôle of the Royal Observer Corps in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The role of the Royal Observer Corps is kept under regular consideration. There are no plans at present to develop the role of the Royal Observer Corps.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what figures he has for the numbers of violent attacks on women in the area of Greater London, for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 24 April at columns 182-83. Numbers of recorded offences of rape for each police force area are published annually in table S3/1 of volume 3 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables".

Irish Citizens

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to authorise the removal from the United Kingdom to the Irish Republic of any Irish citizen in respect of whom there is reason to believe that he has settled in the United Kingdom solely in order to obtain superior rates of benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: No.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Ashby asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans any changes in the criminal injuries compensation scheme.

Mr. Hurd: As announced in the White Paper "Criminal Justice: Plans for Legislation", we intend to put criminal injuries compensation on to a statutory basis; the report of the interdepartmental working party which has reviewed the scheme to this end is being published today. The Government broadly accept the working party's recommendations — in particular that compensation given to the innocent victims of violent crime should continue to be based on civil damages, subject to certain well-recognised exceptions — and propose to introduce legislation on this basis.

The Government have resolved to make available in future years considerable extra funds to enable current and future applications to be dealt with. The aim is to reduce the present backlog of work by about 5,000 cases a year. An additional £114 million will be made available over the period 1987-88 to 1989-90. For 1987-88 the increase is £33 million, which represents an increase of 65 per cent. over the previously planned provision. This allows for the necessary additional staff as well as increased numbers of payments.

In the course of settling upon the financial provision to be made available, we have considered whether it is necessary to revise the lower limit for compensation (at present £500 in cases of family violence and £400 in other cases). The limit needs to be revised periodically in order to allow resources to be concentrated on the more seriously injured. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have decided that when an injury is sustained on or after 7 November 1986 compensation will be payable under the scheme only if the injury is one for which compensation of at least £550 will be awarded. The new limit will apply also to injuries sustained before 7 November if the application is received by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board after 6 January 1987.

As a further step towards ensuring that the new resources are devoted to the maximum possible extent to the needs of victims, we are considering with the board whether further changes need to be made to the current scheme to enable cases to be dealt with more quickly and economically while not affecting the compensation to which the victim is entitled.

Charity Commission

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any changes to announce in the cash and running cost limits for the Charity Commission.

Mr. Hurd: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary Estimate, the cash limit on the Charity Commission's Vote will be raised by £187,000 from £5,124,000 to £5,311,000, necessitated by additional operational requirements net of costs which have been absorbed, and the running costs limit by £247,000 from £5,032,000 to £5,279,000. The cash limit increase will be charged to the Reserve, and will not therefore add to the planning total of public expenditure.

Immigration

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes are intended in the guidelines on the handling of representations by hon. Members in immigration cases; and when they are to take effect.

Mr. Hurd: The following change will be made to paragraph 3 of the guidelines in place of that announced in answer to the question by the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Norris) on 22 October and will apply to passengers arriving on or after 10 November 1986.

"Representations to the Minister

3(i) Where a passenger refused entry or a person acting on his behalf notifies the immigration officer that he intends to seek the assistance of a Member, removal will not take place for 24 hours or until the afternoon of the next working day if longer.

(ii) A Member wishing to submit representations in the case of a person refused entry may request the Minister's Private Office or, out of working hours, the Home Office Duty Officer, to arrange for the removal of the passenger to be deferred. If the passenger was refused entry because he did not have an entry clearance required under the Immigration Rules action to remove the passenger will only be deferred if at the time of intervention the Member demonstrates that there are exceptional and compelling circumstances (eg recent bereavement or sudden grave illness here in the immediate family). In such cases and in cases of refusal where no entry clearance was required action to remove the passenger will normally be deferred for a period of 12 working days to enable the Member to submit written representations.

Note

An entry clearance may take the form of a visa, an entry certificate (for non-visa Commonwealth citizens) or a letter of consent (for all other non-visa nationals). Visa nationals apart from citizens of Bangladesh, India, Pakistan, Ghana and Sri Lanka (and Nigeria when the visa requirement becomes operative) who are settled here or here for a limited time but long-term purpose, such as work or study, who have all been granted an exemption, require a visa whatever the purpose of their journey here. All other nationals require an entry clearance when coming for work, settlement, marriage leading to settlement, or as a dependant of one of these categories. Where there are genuine medical, family or other compelling compassionate circumstances British Diplomatic Posts abroad will give urgent consideration to visa applications."

Copies of the amendment have been placed in the Library and are being sent to all Members, together with a copy of the information leaflet which explains details of visa exemptions and how to obtain passport endorsements signifying exemption.

Visas

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he is making to issue multiple visas to regular visitors from (a) India, (b) Pakistan, (c) Bangladesh, and (d) Nigeria; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

Posts in these four countries have been instructed to issue multiple entry visas to regular bona fide visitors and are doing so, in large numbers.

Breathalyser

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is yet in a position to announce a decision on the continuation of the blood test option for drivers subjected to a Lion Intoximeter 3000 breathalyser test; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd [pursuant to the reply of 3 November, c. 225]: Experience since the publication of the Home Office forensic science service report on the monitoring of the evidential breath test machines confirms that the machines do not place subjects unjustly in jeopardy, and that they should continue to be the principal means of establishing the level of alcohol for the purposes of deciding on prosecution in drink drive cases.

The necessary improvements to the performance of the Lion Intoximeter's acetone detector identified by the report have been carried out, and the recommendation for a blood or urine test to be available in cases where the difference between the two breath samples is wide will be implemented by continuing to allow the option on a non-statutory basis in these cases.

The average take-up rate for the general non-statutory blood or urine option was 16 per cent. in 1985, with monthly figures of 14 per cent. and 15 per cent. in the second half of the year. The experience of those exercising the option will have been that the blood test result confirms the evidential breath test, when any necessary allowance is made for the passage of time between the two types of test. Accordingly, I expect confidence in the machines to continue to grow but I have decided to allow the option to continue for a further period to allow this confidence to be further consolidated. The option will be reviewed again in two years' time.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers in the Metropolitan police force of the rank (a) inspector, (b) sergeant, (c) constable, resigned from the Metropolitan police in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985

Mr. Douglas Hogg [pursuant to his reply, 23 October 1986, c. 958]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the number of inspectors, sergeants and constables who resigned from the Metropolitan police (including officers who resigned on transfer to other forces and those required to resign) from 1980 to 1985 is as follows:

	Inspectors	Sergeants	Constables
1980	2	29	783
1981	3	18	835
1982	3	16	744
1983	2	17	585
1984	1	15	458
1985	0	22	508

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Small Farmers

Mr. Colvin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his definition of a small farmer; and whether this definition correspondes to that used by the European Commission.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Farm business size is now measured by the financial potential of the holding in terms of the margins which might be expected from its crops and stock. The margins used are standard gross margins (SGM) at average 1978-80 values, quantified in the United Kingdom in British size units (BSU). Conventionally, a small farm is taken to be one in the range four to 16 BSU. The principles underlying the European Communities' system of farm classification are the same as those adopted in the United Kingdom. The maximum threshold for a small farm under the EC classification is, however, about half that adopted in the United Kingdom, reflecting the smaller average size of holdings in the EC overall.

Fish

Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the marketing and promotion of British fish products and British-caught fish.

Mr. Gummer: The Government are currently providing some £7·9 million towards a three-year seafish industry development programme for improving the marketing and consumption of fish. The possibility of further funding after 31 March 1987 is under active consideration.

Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether any further arrangements have been made for the monitoring of radiation in fish and fish products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: This Department has regularly and extensively monitored radioactivity in the United Kingdom aquatic environment, including its fish, for nearly 20 years, and regularly published the results. The two most recent reports, of which one dealt specifically with the impact of the Chernobyl accident, were published on 8 October. Copies were placed in the Library of the House in the normal way. These reports confirm that the levels of radioactivity in fish and other materials taken from waters around and within the United Kingdom pose no threat to safety. This monitoring will be maintained at an appropriate level and the results will continue to be published.

Illegal Fishing (Arrests)

Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many Spanish fishing vessels have been arrested for the offence of illegal fishing in United Kingdom territorial waters in 1985 and so far in 1986.

Mr. Gummer: In 1985, five Spanish vessels were arrested for unauthorised fishing within British fishery limits. In addition, 10 vessels were arrested for other offences, including the retention of undersized fish and failure to keep an accurate logbook. So far in 1986 six Spanish vessels have been arrested for unauthorised fishing and three for other offences.

Fishing Vessels

Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list in the Official Report (a) the number and type of fishing vessels built with financial assistance from the state and state-funded agencies in 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985 and (b) the number of these vessels built in Scottish shipyards.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is as follows:

Type	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	Total

Note:

The above figures relate to financial assistance approved by the Sea Fish Industry Authority (and its predecessors, the White Fish Authority and the Herring Industry Board, before October 1981) and by the Highlands and Islands Development Board. Construction of some of the vessels will not have been completed during the year shown.

Water Bailiffs

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information is available to him concerning the number of water bailiffs currently employed by each of the water authorities in England and Wales; and what total costs are so involved.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is not immediately available, but I am in touch with the water authorities and will write to my hon. Friend.

Council of Fisheries Ministers

Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Council of Fisheries Ministers meeting on 5 November.

Mr. Gummer: Together with my hon. Friend the Member for Argyll and Bute (Mr. MacKay) the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Council of Fisheries Ministers on 5 November, under the presidency of my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

I am delighted to report that the Council, by a qualified majority, reached a common position on a regulation designed to strengthen the arrangements for the enforcement of the common fisheries policy in the Community. This agreement will be formally endorsed when the views of the European Parliament are received.

In addition to a general strengthening of the arrangements for inspection, monitoring and the keeping of records, the regulation has two main features. First, it requires member states to provide the Commission inspectors with such access and means as they need to oversee national inspection and monitoring arrangements. This is a further important step in ensuring that enforcement in all member states is carried out on an effective but evenhanded basis. Secondly, the regulation empowers the Commission, after informing the member states concerned, to close a fishery when the total allowable catch is exhausted and it provides for member states which overfish their quotas to provide compensation to the other member states concerned. This is the first time that agreement has been reached to penalise overfishing and it will obviously strengthen the incentive to observe the quotas. The United Kingdom Government have been giving considerable priority to the strengthening of the control arrangements and we warmly welcome these measures.

The Council also received a progress report on the discussions about the Commission proposals on structures and had a useful and fairly detailed exchange of views. These proposals will be considered further at the next Council meeting on 3 December.

Lamb Exports

Mr. Foulkes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will raise at the next meeting of the Council of Ministers reports that the French customs authorities have given details to protestors regarding the import of British lamb; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: We have no evidence to support these reports. The French authorities have assured us that they are doing everything possible to prevent incidents involving interference with British lamb and have undertaken to pay compensation. We are, however, continuing to monitor the lamb trade most carefully and will not hesitate to press the French Government once more if consignments suffer unreasonable delay or interference.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the protection of animals kept for farming purposes in the light of the case of Roberts v. Rugiero, indicating if he plans any changes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Government's policy is to encourage farmers to adopt high standards of husbandry through compliance with part I of the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968 and with regulations and codes of recommendations made under it. We have no plans to change this policy following the private prosecution referred to. However, the Government set up the Farm Animal Welfare Council in 1979 to keep such matters under review, and we will consider introducing further measures where necessary in the light of the Council's advice and the views of interested parties.

EC (Food and Wine Sales)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report details of special sales of food agreed by the management committee of the European Economic Community; and if he will also detail the tonnages of various foodstuffs, the nations to which the sales have been made and the sale prices expressed in sterling per pound, over the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 27 October 1986, c. 48]: In any period, a large number of sales of food on to the internal market and outside the European Community are arranged through the various sectoral management committees of the European Community. These schemes tend to follow established procedures and there is not a recognised category of special sale. Illustratively, however, the following recent sales have distinguishing features:

Beef

(i) Regulation 2670/85 of 23 September 1985 (as amended)

This regulation makes available beef bought into intervention after 31 December 1983 and not less than three months before being taken over by the purchaser. Currently, purchase applications must be for a minimum of 15,000 tonnes (bone-in equivalent) and current prices are as follows:

	ecu/tonne	£/lb
Bone-in beef
Forequarters	1,150	0·32
Hindquarters	2,050	0·59
Boneless beef
Higher value cuts eligible for export refund	2,450	0·71
Lower value cuts eligible for export refund	1,410	0·41
Lower value cuts not eligible for export refund	475	0·14

Sales are to traders who must export the beef to one of the many destinations for which an export refund is fixed. Information on quantities sold is not available.

(ii) Regulation 1812/86 of 11 June 1986 (as amended)

This regulation makes available beef bought into intervention before 1 April 1986 for sale by trader for export to Brazil. Tenders must be for a minimum of 10,000 tonnes; at each adjudication 30 per cent. of the quantities sold must come from Italian stocks and the total must come from at least three member states. 200,000 tonnes have been contracted for so far, at the following prices:

Average sales price

	tonnes	ecu/tonne	£/lb
France	90,000	502	0·14
Germany	10,000	447	0·13

(iii) Regulation 765/86 of 14 March 1986

Tonnage of butter sold: 118,000 tonnes

Country of destination: USSR (the regulation provided for sales, so far unrealised, to India and Pakistan.)

Average sale price per lb: £0·60.

ENERGY

Nuclear Power

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Energy what information is available to his Department about the recent safety studies made of the graphite-moderated plutonium production nuclear reactors at Hanford, United States of America; what assessment he has made of the implications of these studies for the graphite-moderated plutonium production nuclear reactors operated by British Nuclear Fuels at Chapelcross and Calder Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: I understand that the executive summary, dated July 1986, of the United States Department of Energy's technical safety appraisal of the N-reactor at Hanford United States of America concludes that the reactor was being operated in a generally safe and cautious manner by experienced personnel, and outlines recommendations made, mainly to encourage the furtherance of excellence in aspects which it describes as already generally good. The N-reactor at Hanford is a water-cooled tube graphite-moderated reactor, and is therefore significantly different from any British reactor. When the full report is received it will be studied by Her Majesty's nuclear installations inspectorate.

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the safety record of the British nuclear power industry.

Mr. Goodlad: The Government and the British nuclear industry are fully conscious of the vital importance of both site and environmental safety, and the industry has an excellent safety record. There has never been a nuclear emergency at any of this country's civil nuclear installations.

Atomic Energy Authority (Police)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many people have been arrested for illegal possession of nuclear material off-site from a nuclear facility operated by (a) the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, (b) British Nuclear Fuels plc, (c) the Central Electricity Generating Board and (d) the South of Scotland Electricity Board by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary in each of the last three years.

Mr. Goodlad: None.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many people have been (a) detained and (b) arrested by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary since 1976;

(2) how many visitors to the British Nuclear Fuels plc Sellafield site have been detained by the United Kingdom

Atomic Energy Authority police as a result of contravening the site security regulations (a) May 1977 to May 1986 and (b) May 1986 to October 1986.

Mr. Goodlad: From 1976 up to and including October 1986 the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary have charged 197 individuals with minor theft and other offences. Since records of detention without charge have been required under section 50 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, no one has been so detained by the UKAEAC, and those records which are still held from before that date also show no detentions. Between May 1977 and May 1986 three minor site security incidents at Sellafield were investigated without the persons concerned being either detained or charged. There was one further such incident in the period May 1986 to October 1986 involving a party from a Humberside school, on which I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 31 October, column 267.

Plutonium

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) from which countries shipments of plutonium for civil purposes have come to the United Kingdom since 1979; on what dates they took place; and what was the mode of transport employed;

(2) how many shipments of plutonium for civil purposes have been made to the United Kingdom from other countries since 1979; and what was the quantity of plutonium in each shipment; in what form it was shipped; and to what purpose each shipment was put.

Mr. Goodlad: Some 230kg of separated plutonium have, since May 1979, been imported from the following countries in consignments larger than gram quantities:

Austria
Belgium
Federal Republic of Germany
France
Japan
Netherlands
Norway
Switzerland
United States of America

Detailed information relating to the quantities of plutonium received from individual countries, and the frequency and number of shipments, cannot be revealed for reasons of security and commercial sensitivity.

Plutonium is transported by air, sea, rail and road, in full compliance with the relevant national and international regulations.

Nearly all of this plutonium was in fuel pins imported for civil research purposes.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Energy what are the administrative procedures for authorising shipments to the United Kingdom of plutonium for civil purposes from other countries; and what changes have been made to the procedures since 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: All shipments into the United Kingdom of plutonium for civil nuclear purposes require an import licence under the Import of Goods (Control) Order 1954.

Intergovernmental assurances are, as appropriate, exchanged in line with the United Kingdom's international obligations on non-proliferation.

In November 1984 a standard format was introduced for plutonium trade within the European Community.

Sellafield (School Visit)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 31 October that film and video tapes were handed to unarmed members of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary, if he will state whether armed members of that constabulary dealt with the party at any stage.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised by British Nuclear Fuels plc that at no stage was the party dealt with by armed members of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority constabulary.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 31 October about schoolchildren at Sellafield, what instructions there are on visiting parties of children; and whether safety and reserve equipment is available to deal with children's sizes.

Mr. Goodlad: British Nuclear Fuels plc advises me that, in carrying out the duties laid on it by law to protect its workers and the public, all visitors to the Sellafield site are accompanied by trained personnel, follow safe routes, and are given individual identifiable film badges to check against the remote possibility of radioactive contamination. Children under 12 have not been allowed on to the site. Respirators are available throughout the site in a variety of sizes, and there are stocks of protective clothing.

Sizewell

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he now expects to receive the Layfield report on Sizewell; and how long after he receives it it will be published.

Mr. Peter Walker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given today to the hon. Member for Edmonton (Dr. Twinn). The report will be published; I shall decide on the date when I have seen and considered it.

Dr. Twinn asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the date when the report of the Sizewell inquiry will be submitted to him.

Mr. Peter Walker [pursuant to the replies, 19 November, 1985 c 101, and 13 March, 1986 c. 555]: I said in March that Sir Frank Layfield, the inspector, hoped to deliver his report on the Sizewell "B" public inquiry to me during September. The inspector has recently reviewed the position and has now informed me that he has not been able to finalise his report as soon as he had hoped. He now intends to deliver his report to me at the end of November or early in December.

As I said on 13 March, when I have received the inspector's report I intend to reach my decision as soon as I possibly can.

Coal Stocks

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Energy what was the total level of coal stocks in south Wales at the latest available date.

Mr. David Hunt: Stocks of undistributed deepmined coal held by British Coal in south Wales on 18 October 1986 were 2·07 million tonnes.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Falkland Islands

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, what advice has been given to the Falkland Islands Government concerning the purchase of civilian fisheries protection vessels;

(2) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, what is the total area, expressed in square kilometres, of the 200 miles fisheries limit around the Falkland Islands;

(3) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, what advice has been given to the Falkland Islands Government concerning the number and type of fisheries protection vessels to be used in the policing of the fisheries conservation zone;

(4) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, if the Falkland Islands Government have approached Her Majesty's Government with a request for the leasing of Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food or DAF(S) fisheries protection vessels;

(5) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, what consultations have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the Falkland Islands Government concerning the acquisition of civilian surveillance aircraft to be used in the policing of the fisheries conservation zone;

(6) what advice Her Majesty's Government have offered to the Falkland Islands Government concerning the policy on and mechanics of inspection and the boarding of fishing vessels operating or fishing inside the fishery conservation zone;

(7) if it is Her Majesty's Government's intention to provide advice to the Falkland Islands Government on the level of penalty appropriate to offences involving breaches of the law relating to fishing; and if he will make a statement;

(8) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, if it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to provide financial assistance to the Falkland Islands Council for the purchase of fisheries protection vessels; and if he will make a statement;

(9) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, what discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the Falkland Islands Government concerning the structure, management and financial costs of a fisheries protection service;

(10) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, if British personnel will crew the fisheries protection vessels to be used in the policing of the fisheries conservation zone;

(11) pursuant to the statement of 29 October, Official Report, column 323, what advice Her Majesty's Government have given to the Falkland Islands Government concerning the recruitment, selection, training and terms and conditions of employment of officers and crews of the fisheries protection vessels to be used in the policing of the fisheries conservation zone;

(12) if it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to employ vessels of the Royal Navy in conjunction with policing of the Falklands Island fisheries conservation zone from 1 February 1987; and if he will make a statement;

(13) what discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the Falkland Islands Government concerning the licensing and total allowable catch limits of fishing activities within the Falkland Islands fisheries conservation zone;

(14) what discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the Falkland Islands Government concerning the preferential licensing treatment for the fishing vessels of European Economic Community nations seeking to fish within the Falkland Islands fisheries conservation zone;

(15) which stocks of fish are currently most seriously threatened in the Falkland Islands fisheries conservation zone.

Mr. Eggar: We and the Falkland Islands Government have had close consultations on all aspects of the establishment of a Falkland Islands conservation zone, including the details of enforcement, revenue and licensing. Responsibility for administering the zone will lie with the Falkland Islands Government. The European Commission and the Governments of states interested in fishing within the zone will be approached on the arrangements for issuing licences once the Falkland Islands Government have passed the relevant legislation. Of the three main fish stocks, squid (illex) is under threat. The total sea area of the zone is approximately 65,000 square nautical miles (220,000 square kilometres). Enforcement will be carried out by the Falkland Islands Government using its own civilian fisheries protection vessels and a surveillance aircraft. As my right hon. and learned Friend told the House on 29 October, it is open to the Government to use, in appropriate circumstances, the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force assets currently on patrol in the zone. The two vessels, already earmarked, will be adapted stern freezer trawlers chartered commercially, with British crews, by the Falkland Islands Government using their own resources. The surveillance aircraft will also be chartered commercially. A team of Falkland Islands Government fisheries officers, initially seconded from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, will be responsible, under the Falkland Islands Government, for administering and enforcing the licensing regime. The powers of the Falkland Islands fisheries protection officers will be set out in the Falkland Islands Fisheries (Conservation and Management) Ordinance 1986. The ordinance will also set out appropriate penalties.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what replies or representations have been received from the Soviet Government on the question of the establishment of a Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone in reply to Her Majesty's Government's letter of 29 October and previous notifications of intent to establish the zone;

(2) what views the Soviet Government have expressed to Her Majesty's Government on Britain's claim to the right to extend fisheries limits around the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Eggar: The Soviet chargé d'affaires delivered a text on 3 November to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in connection with the Secretary of State's message to the Soviet Foreign Minister of 29 October. The contents of the statement are confidential.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions there were with the United States Government prior to the announcement of the new fisheries zone around the Falklands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The United States Government have been kept fully abreast of our increasing concern over the need for effective fisheries conservation measures in the south-west Atlantic. My right hon. and learned Friend sent a message to Secretary of State Shultz on 29 October.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the strength of the fisheries protection fleet planned for the Falklands; when it is expected to be on station; where the crew will be recruited from; what the arrangements will be for supply and relief; and to whom and how the fleet will be directly responsible.

Mr. Eggar: The Falkland Islands Government's fisheries protection resources will consist of two vessels and one surveillance aircraft, which will be in place before the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone comes into effect on 1 February 1987. These assets will be on commercial charter and will have British crews. Arrangements for rotation of crews will be covered in the charter contract. The fisheries protection assets will be under the control of the Falkland Islands Government.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions took place with Governments of member states of the European Community prior to the announcement of the Falklands fisheries zone.

Mr. Eggar: We had been in regular touch with our partners on the question of fisheries in the south-west Atlantic. My right hon. and learned Friend also sent personal messages to his European Community colleagues on 29 October.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the European Economic Community concerning the imposition of a fisheries limit around the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Eggar: We have been in regular touch with the Commission and with our partners on the question of fisheries in the south west Atlantic. My right hon. and learned Friend sent personal messages to his European Community colleagues and to the Fisheries Commissioner on 29 October.

Colombia

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Colombia concerning the repression of human rights in that country.

Mr. Eggar: Her Majesty's embassy in Bogota closely monitors the complex human rights situation in Colombia and approached the Colombian authorities directly about our concerns over human rights cases there last month. We have also made our strong views on human rights violations abundantly clear in the various United Nations human rights fora.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Colombia concerning the recent murder of British resident Mr. Heber Marin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Her Majesty's embassy in Bogota has expressed its concern to the Colombian authorities about the murder of Mr. Marin, whose death is still under investigation by the judge appointed to the case. Mr. Marin was formerly granted refugee and resident status in the United Kingdom, but renounced this before returning to Colombia in 1985.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's relations with Colombia.

Mr. Eggar: We enjoy warm relations with the democratic Government of Colombia. A representative of the Government attended the inauguration of President Barco in August 1986.

Visas

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff are employed solely on immigration duties in Her Majesty's Missions in (a) India, (b) Bangladesh, (c) Pakistan, (d) Ghana, (e) Nigeria and (f) Sri Lanka; what is the planned figure; and what are the equivalent figures for the same date of 1985, 1984 and 1983.

Mr. Eggar: The numbers of United Kingdom-based staff directly engaged in determining entry clearance applications are as follows:

	1983	1984	1985	31 October 1986
India	1 First Secretary 1 Second Secretary 11 Entry clearance officers	As 1983	1 First Secretary 1 Second Secretary 11 Entry clearance officers	1 First Secretary 1 Second Secretary 22 Entry clearance officers
Bangladesh	1 First Secretary 2 Second Secretaries 15 Entry clearance officers	As 1983	1 First Secretary 2 Second Secretaries 15 Entry clearance officers	1 First Secretary 3 Second Secretaries 20 Entry clearance officers
Pakistan	1 First Secretary 2 Second Secretaries 16 Entry clearance officers	As 1983	1 First Secretary 2 Second Secretaries 16 Entry clearance officers	1 First Secretary 4 Second Secretaries 28 Entry clearance officers
Ghana	1 Entry clearance officer	As 1983	As 1983 and 1984	2 Entry clearance officers
Nigeria	4 Entry clearance officers	As 1983	As 1983 and 1984	1 Second Secretary 11 Entry clearance officers
Sri Lanka	1 Entry clearance officer	As 1983	4 Entry clearance officers	1 Second Secretary 3 Entry clearance officers

The staffing levels are kept under constant review and are adjustable as changing circumstances may require.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements for (a) translation, (b) shelter and (c) refreshments are made for visitors to Her Majesty's mission in (a) Dacca, (b) Islamabad, (c) Delhi, (d) Calcutta, (e) Bombay and (f) Colombo who are seeking either visitor visas or entry clearance.

Mr. Eggar: Official interpreters are available to interpret and to translate applicants' documents where necessary at all the posts concerned. I shall write to the hon. Member about the shelter and refreshment facilities that are available.

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has decided on a new level of visa fees.

Mr. Eggar: A new level of fees is to be introduced with effect from 18 November 1986. The relevant Order in Council is now being printed. The principal fees will be as follows:

Single entry visa	20.00
Multiple entry visa	40.00
Settlement and other long-term entry clearance	50.00

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the assistance given by his Department to the British citizens recently expelled from Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Renton: The FCO has given all assistance requested to those British nationals who have had to leave Saudi Arabia recently. The majority left after their contracts with the military hospital had been terminated because they had failed to conform to Saudi customs and laws. We understand that this was a stipulation in their contracts.

In the case of the three British women and two British men who were arrested, consular visits were made while they were being held. The two men were deported on 4 November and the three women were deported on 6 November.

DNA Testing

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department is still proposing a pilot study using DNA testing techniques; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Yes. We hope to launch a pilot study soon.

North Atlantic Assembly

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made in the composition of the United Kingdom parliamentary delegation to the North Atlantic Assembly

Mr. Eggar: My hon. Friend the Member for Winchester (Mr. Browne) has replaced my hon. Friend the Member for Gosport (Mr. Viggers) as a full Member. My hon. Friend the Member for Hampshire, East (Mr. Mates) has replaced my hon. Friend the Member for Winchester as an alternate Member of the delegation.

Entry Clearance Applications

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many refusals of entry clearance applications for visitors from Pakistan have been made without reference to the United Kingdom; and in how many such cases the entry clearance officer has been able to make a decision without seeking information from the sponsor or relatives in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: I have been asked to reply.
The information requested is not available centrally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Office of Fair Trading (Leaflets)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure that leaflets available to the public from the Office of Fair Trading are produced in the main ethnic minority languages.

Mr. Howard: No. This is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading and I understand that he will be writing in response to the hon. Member.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increase since 1956 in the import and export unit values for manufactures, semi-manufactures and finished manufactures and the corresponding figures for the increase in volume and the increase in average values; and if he will give the same figures for the increases since 1966 and 1976.

Mr. Alan Clark: The available information is given in the table.

United Kingdom trade in manufactures—OTS basis

[1] First nine months.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish a table in the Official Report showing for the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Japan, Sweden, Finland, Switzerland, Norway and Austria the change in the ratio of export unit values for manufactures to the wholesale price of (a) manufactures and (b) consumer prices between 1956 and 1985, 1966 and 1985 and 1976 and 1985, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The available information is in the following table:

Ratio of export to producer prices

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for (a) the United Kingdom, (b) West Germany, (c) Japan, (d) France, (e) Italy and (f) the USA information available on the percentage, to one place of decimals, of imports of finished manufactures to (i) gross domestic product and (ii) manufacturing output in 1956, 1966, 1976 and the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will provide the same information for exports.

Mr. Alan Clark Information for 1956 is not readily available. Figures for other years are in the following table:

		GDP	Manufacturing Output	GDP	Manufacturing Output
United Kingdom	1966	2·6	9·0	6·7	23·1

Liverpool (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent visit of the Minister of State to Liverpool.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I visited Liverpool on 30 October 1986. In the morning I visited the English Estates office development, Mercury Court, where I met and addressed representatives from local industry and commerce. In the afternoon I visited a manufacturer of telecommunications equipment.

Systime plc

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has taken steps to recover or investigate the retention of United Kingdom export documents and export licences held by the United States Department of Commerce in relation to Systime plc; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. I have no evidence that any such steps are called for, nor have I been asked to take them by the company.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps Her Majesty's Government took to seek to protect United Kingdom sovereignty and to seek to secure the observance of international law in the proceedings in which the United States Government fined Systime plc of Leeds.

Mr. Alan Clark: In line with a request from the company the Government did not intervene in the United States Department of Commerce action against Systime, but a formal protest was made to the United States authorities.

Integrated Development Operations

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many studies for integrated development operations have been completed to date in Britain; and what were the areas concerned.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Integrated operations are a European Community initiative. The European Commission have contributed towards the cost of a number of studies by consultants to examine the possibilities for integrated operations. In Britain, such studies have been completed for:

Strathclyde, Clwyd, Merseyside, Humberside, Bradford and the Isles of Scilly.

In addition, the Welsh Office prepared a pilot document concerning industrial south Wales. Integrated operations have been implemented for Belfast and for the Western Isles of Scotland, but in those cases there were no prior studies by consultants.

Post Office

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, pursuant to the answer of 3 November, he will state the net cash surpluses retained by the Post Office within its business from 1980-81 to 1985-86.

Mr. Pattie: The external financing limits set for the Post Office's postal business and its performance against those limits for the years 1980-81 to 1985-86 are set out in the Post Office report and accounts 1985-86, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, pursuant to the answer of 3 November, he will state (a) the destinations and amounts loaned in each case of cash surpluses of the Post Office required by its external financing limits in the years 1980-81 to 1985-86; how much interest has been earned by the Post Office on this money in each year; and if this interest is part of the operating surplus of the Post Office.

Mr. Pattie: Loans of cash surpluses required by negative external financing limits are not separately identified by the Post Office but are included in the generality of lending and borrowing undertaken in the course of its business. Similarly, interest earned on such loans is not separately identified but forms part of the profits generated by the business and reported in the accounts. The total net interest receivable by the postal business in the years 1980-81 to 1985-86 is given in the 1985-86 report and accounts, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Lawnmowers

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the location of the nine testing centres he has authorised for testing lawnmowers under the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The names and locations of the listed laboratories are given below. It should also be noted that the laboratories can also undertake on-site testing whenever appropriate.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will make a statement setting out the means by which he intends to carry out periodic checks of lawnmowers, as provided in section 7 of the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986; what notice he will give of his intention to carry out checks at each location; whether he has powers under the regulations in appropriate circumstances, to force entry to domestic and industrial premises; and to whom he intends to delegate the powers of inspection;

(2) if batch sampling of new lawnmowers will be permitted after the implementing of the Lawnmowers (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations;

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 382]: During the negotiation of this directive the United Kingdom view was that noise from lawnmowers was not a problem of sufficient substance to warrant a total harmonisation. However other member states considered it was, and in order to secure agreement so that barriers to trade would be removed, the United Kingdom had to seek a compromise that put the least burden on United Kingdom manufacturers and users.

The compromise reached in respect of member states obligations to verify that lawnmowers conform was that it should be done where possible by means of spot checks. In consequence the implementing regulations do not call for official systematic batch sampling. Nor at this stage is it considered necessary to introduce systematic spot checks. Should such spot checks be considered necessary in the future they would be carried out at manufacturers and importers premises. Section 7 of the Lawnmower (Harmonisation of Noise Emission Standards) Regulations 1986 gives the Secretary of State the powers to carry out periodic checks, but it is envisaged that these powers will be exercised only when there are grounds for thinking that a manufacturer or importer is failing to comply with the directive. In such circumstances the inspection would be carried out by officials of the Department of Trade and Industry, assisted if necessary by suitable technical experts. The amount of notice to be given would be a matter for judgment in individual circumstances. The regulations do not give powers of entry and if entry were refused a court order would have to be sought. It is almost inconceivable that entry would be required to domestic premises as the directive refers to the marketing of new equipment which is not an activity generally carried out from such premises.

Contracts for Differences

Mr. David Howell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the effects of the current draft rules of the Securities Investment Board on certain sections of public trading outside recognised exchanges in contracts for differences; what is his policy in relation to such effects; and what steps he will now take to prevent damage to certain businesses from occurring.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend made representations to the Department on 23 September with respect to I G Index Ltd., supported by another licensed bookmaker City Index Ltd., concerning the anti-competitive effects of the draft rules previously published by the Securities and Investments Board for comment. When rules are submitted as part of the application by the board to become a designated agency under the Financial Services Act, they will be judged against the criteria set out in that legislation.

IBM UK

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to carry out his commitment of 15 July, Official Report, column 882, to request IBM UK to withdraw its letter of 22 December 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: There was no such commitment. The Government long ago made clear their objections to the letter in question.

Computer Companies

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements have been made to enable United States officials to inspect the books of United Kingdom computer companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: None. We are still considering the United States request for visits to check United Kingdom companies' compliance programmes in connection with the new United States distribution licence arrangements.

Cement Imports

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent steps he has taken to protect the British cement industry from the importation of subsidised cement from abroad; what further representations he has made through the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The threat of subsidised cement imports from Greece is being pursued vigorously by the Government. Action is being taken with the European Commission and directly with the Greek Government.

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the trade balance in manufactured goods with each of the United Kingdom's six largest export markets, excluding the EEC 12, in 1972 and in 1985; and what were the comparable figures for the six largest exporters of manufactured goods to the United Kingdom, excluding the EEC 12.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the following table:

System X

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of British Telecom's procurement decisions in relation to system X on the level of utilisation of the United Kingdom's telecommunications production capacity.

Mr. Pattie: British Telecom's procurement and the manufacturing capacity necessary to meet its orders are commercial matters for the companies concerned. However, the Director General of Telecommunications, in his report of 23 July 1985 about British Telecom's procurement of digital exchanges, did assess carefully the impact on manufacturers of system X in reaching his view that British Telecom's decision to purchase a second range of digital exchanges was acceptable.

Restrictions in the Professions

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the recent reports of the Director General of Fair Trading on restrictions in the professions.

Mr. Howard: In the past few weeks, the Director General of Fair Trading has published three reports covering respectively: restrictions on the kinds of organisation through which members of professions may offer their services; restrictions on the patent agents' profession; and remaining significant advertising restrictions. With that on advertising and charging rules of the professions serving the construction industry, published earlier this year, they complete the programme of reviews of restrictions in the professions which my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Fletcher) announced on 23 July 1985.

The report on advertising restrictions concludes that there has been significant liberalisation in this area, particularly in the past four or five years. It concentrates on those professions whose rules have not otherwise been subject to detailed scrutiny. In particular, it recommends that three professions allied to medicine—chiropodists, physiotherapists and osteopaths—remove their present restrictions on advertising. The removal of a minor restriction by the Institution of Mining and Metallurgy is also recommended. The Director General saw no need for a formal recommendation on four accountancy and notaries' bodies, but assumes that their already permissive advertising rules will continue to be relaxed in line with those of the main bodies for their professions. In endorsing these recommendations, I have asked the Director General to discuss their implementation with the bodies concerned.

The report on patent agents recommends the ending of the exclusive right which patent agents, together with solicitors, have to represent inventors in dealing with the Patent Office, and the removal of restrictions on the use of the title "patent agent" and on the form of business in which a patent agent can practise. These recommendations are intended to open the profession to greater competition, and to allow patent agents to enter into partnership with members of other professions to offer a range of protection and exploitation services. The Government are considering these recommendations and, if accepted, they will be included in the legislation implementing the proposals in the White Paper "Intellectual Property and Innovation" (Cmnd. 9712) published in April, which will be introduced as soon as parliamentary time permits. In addition, the report recommends that the Chartered Institute of Patent Agents should end its prohibition of practice through a limited liability company and its severe restriction of advertising by its members, and discontinue its annual charging guide. I have endorsed these recommendations and have asked the director general to discuss the necessary changes with the chartered institute.

The report on restrictions on the kind of organisation through which members of professions may offer their services makes three recommendations directed at Government. One is that Ministers should consider amending any legal restrictions which prevent solicitors from entering into partnership or other forms of association with members of other professions, as a precursor to corresponding alteration of the practice rules of the Law Societies. As regards England and Wales this recommendation is being considered in connection with work on implementing the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986, for recognised institutions to offer conveyancing. The second, that Ministers should consider whether to permit company auditors to practise in corporate form, is one of the proposals canvassed in the consultative document on the implementtion of the European Communities' 8th company law directive, published on 12 August. Finally, the report that my Department should review the operation of section 716 of the Companies Act 1985 and consider whether any amendment would be justified to avoid unnecessary impediments to multidisciplinary professional partnerships. Under this section, partnerships, with certain exceptions, are limited to 20 persons. However, section 716(3) enables the Secretary of State to exempt from his prohibition partnerships of a specified purpose and description. The Department is prepared in principle to consider application to exempt partnerships consisting of more than one profession. Applications would be examined to ascertain whether a need had been established for exemption, bearing in mind the possible alternative solutions (such as unlimited companies), and whether the disciplines of the professions concerned would provide adequate protection for clients of such partnerships. I welcome these three reports, which together with that published earlier, make an important contribution to the continuing work of removing unjustifiable restrictions in the professions.

Copies of the reports have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Balance of Payments

55. Mrs. Golding asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the latest balance of payments figures.

56. Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the latest balance of payments figures.

57. Miss Boothroyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the latest balance of payments figures.

58. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the latest balance of payments figures.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the 12 months ended September the current account was in surplus by £403 million.

Chemical Exports (Iraq)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list in the Official Report the chemicals which are on the restricted list for export to Iraq.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 381]: Under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1985, as amended, a number of chemicals are subject to export control to all destinations. Additionally, three chemicals, viz. chloroethanol, dimethylamine and potassium fluoride, are subject to export control specifically to Iraq and Iran. All controlled chemical products are listed in groups 1, 2A, 3I and 3J of the order, a copy of which is available in the Library.

SCOTLAND

Torness Power Station

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from Edinburgh district council about safety measures at Torness power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no such representations.

Nuclear Installations (Training)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will obtain from the South of Scotland Electricity Board a statement on the simulator equipment for the training of managers and staff at each nuclear installation in Scotland, giving (a) the name and location of each simulator, (b) the date when the simulator became operational for training purposes, (c) the cost of the simulator, (d) to what extent the simulator reflects the reactor, boilers and turbines of the installation, (e) the accuracy of the model of reactor behaviour and (f) the range of faults on reactor, boiler and turbine equipment that can be realistically represented on the simulator; and if he will place a copy of the statement in the Library.

Mr. Lang: I shall ask the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Cervical Screening

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list those health boards which have district-wide computerised cervical cancer call and recall schemes in operation;

(2) if he will list those health boards which do not have district-wide cervical cancer call and recall schemes in operation but which have plans to do so, giving the estimated date of introduction in each case.

Mr. John MacKay: Tayside health board intends to have its computerised cervical cancer call and recall scheme in full operation in early 1987. Grampian health board is currently developing a similar computerised scheme.

In addition the following health boards have various cervical cancer call and recall systems in operation:

Argyll and Clyde Health Board
Ayrshire and Arran Health Board
Borders Health Board
Dumfries and Galloway Health Board
Fife Health Board
Highland Health Board
Lothian Health Board
Shetland Health Board
Western Isles Health Board

Rates

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the proportion of rates in Glasgow and Edinburgh which were borne by business and commercial ratepayers, in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: Information for 1956 and 1960 is not available centrally. The estimated proportions of rates (excluding water rates) borne by commercial subjects in Glasgow and Edinburgh for 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1986 are shown in the table:

Local authority financial year	Glasgow	Edinburgh
	Per cent.	Per cent.
1970-71	41·4	35·6
1975-76	36·1	34·7
1980-81	39·0	37·7
1986-87	40·2	37·3

Prison Officers

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will arrange an urgent meeting with the general secretary and officers of the Scottish Prison Officers Association to discuss the problems which are arising in several Scottish prisons.

Mr. Lang: My officials keep in close touch with the SPOA and other constituents of the Scottish Prison Service Trade Union Side, on a regular basis. No request has been made for a meeting in respect of recent incidents in Scottish penal establishments, but I hope to meet representatives of the staff association before long.

Peterhead Prison

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the security arrangements at Peterhead prison.

Mr. Lang: Security arrangements at Peterhead prison were enhanced earlier this year. I am satisfied that they are consistent with the level of security required in a maximum security prison.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects that work will commence on the new Peterhead prison; and what is the anticipated completion date.

Mr. Lang: Present plans provide for work on the new Peterhead prison to commence in the spring of 1987 and for the project to be completed in 1990.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the Peterhead branch of the Scottish Prison Officers Association to discuss the proposed new prison in Peterhead.

Mr. Lang: Consultations have already taken place between my officials and the Peterhead branch of the Scottish Prison Officers' Association on the concept and design of the new Peterhead prison. Such discussions will continue as planning proceeds and I will be kept advised of their progress.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now set up a court of inquiry chaired by a senior judge and comprising independent lay assessors to investigate the allegations into brutality at Peterhead prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: No. Recent allegations of brutality at Peterhead prison have been general and unsubstantiated by evidence of particular occasions or events. Any allegation of criminal conduct, however, would be referred to the police and procurator fiscal for investigation.

I am asking Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons to pay a further visit to Peterhead prison and to report to me. I note that in his report on the Prison in 1985 he drew attention to the protests against the regime and put them into perspective, including the assaults by inmates on staff and on other inmates.

Under-age Drinking

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of convictions for under-age drinking in the Grampian region, the Banff and Buchan district, and Scotland as a whole in the years 1983, 1984, 1985 and the latest available figures for the current year.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is set out in the table:

Persons with a charge of under-age drinking proved against them, 1983-86

	1983	1984	1985	[1] 1986 (January to June)
Banff and Buchan	6	2	2	6
Grampian	13	7	12	9
Scotland	136	103	77	54

Duke Street Hospital, Glasgow

Mr. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if the Greater Glasgow health board has any plans to improve the fire escape provisions for all geriatric wards at Duke Street hospital; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if the Greater Glasgow health board has any plans to upgrade those geriatric wards at Duke Street hospital which are currently classed as unsuitable for nurse training to the standards required by the body responsible for nurse training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I understand that the Greater Glasgow health board has approved a scheme for the upgrading of the fire escapes at Duke Street hospital to bring them up to reasonable standards, together with other minor upgrading measures. Further decisions concerning the hospital will await the outcome of the board's strategic review of geriatric services which is expected to be completed early in the new year.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the guidelines for each local authority in Scotland and for Scotland as a whole, for 1987-88; and what were the corresponding guideline figures for 1986-87 and the local authority budgeted figures for 1986-87.

Mr. Rifkind: The information is contained in two Scottish Office circulars, copies of which are held in the House Library. Annex 1 to finance circular 5/1986 shows authorities' guidelines and cash budgets for 1986-87. Appendix 5 to finance circular 6/1986 shows authorities' guidelines for 1987-88; it also shows and explains the adjusted cash budgets for 1986-87 which were a factor in the calculation of those guidelines.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of assisted places scheme pupils in receipt of free school meals; and if he will disaggregate the figures for each participating school.

Mr. John Mackay: The information is as follows:

[1] provisional total for school year 1985-86.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what levels of parental income are laid down for free school meals under the assisted places scheme.

Mr. John MacKay: Charges which would otherwise be made by a participating school in respect of meals provided in the middle of the day are remitted in full if the parents of an assisted pupil are in receipt of supplementary benefit or family income supplement.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the limit of distance a pupil awarded a travel grant under the assisted places scheme may travel.

Mr. John MacKay: There is no prescribed limit of distance related to school travel grants, which are awarded to an eligible pupil where the walking distance between his home and the school exceeds three miles. However, expenditure eligible for grant may be calculated by reference to only a proportion of the distance travelled. Grants are determined in accordance with relevant income.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if the travel grants awarded under the assisted places scheme can be awarded (a) on a daily basis and (b) on a weekly basis; and if such grants involve the cost of daily or weekly railway fares for such travel, respectively.

Mr. John MacKay: The arrangements for the payment of school travel grants under the assisted places scheme are at the discretion of individual schools who may, in the course of, or immediately before the commencement of any school year, make such payments in advance. Schools are expected to ensure that travel expenditure incurred in respect of journeys by public transport is reasonable and takes full advantage of available arrangements for season tickets or reduced or concessionary fares.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing expenditure on (a) the assisted places scheme and (b) education authority expenditure since 1981-82 using 1981-82 expenditure as a base of 100 in both cases.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

£ thousand

	Assisted places scheme[1]		Education authority[2] (Total gross expenditure)
1981-82	799	(100)	1,340,287	(100)
1982-83	1,718	(215)	1,433,572	(107)
1983-84	2,454	(307)	1,495,125	(112)
1984-85	3,298	(413)	1,545,793	(115)
1985-86	[3]4,259	(533)	not yet available

[1] The figures relate to school years and the high growth rate reflects the gradual build up of the scheme over a 5 year period, financed by resources released by the phasing out of the block maintenance grant arrangements over the same period.
[2] The figures relate to financial years.
[3] Provisional figure.

Education (Expenditure)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will express educational expenditure per pupil in Tayside region (a) at outturn prices and (b) at constant prices in each year since 1982-83; and what are the corresponding figures for Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is given in the table:

Net school expenditure per full-time equivalent pupil (£'s)

Year	Tayside		Scotland
	At outturn prices	At November 1984 prices	At outturn prices	At November 1984 prices
1982-83	1,041	1,125	1,069	1,155
1983-84	1,130	1,173	1,155	1,199
1984-85	1,173	1,173	1,223	1,223

Information on 1985-86 expenditure is not yet available.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will express educational expenditure per pupil by the former Dundee corporation in 1974-75 and by Tayside education committee in 1984-85 at constant prices.

Mr. John MacKay: In 1974-75, the net school expenditure per full-time equivalent pupil by the former Corporation of the City of Dundee, expressed at November 1984 prices, was £1,077. The corresponding figure for per pupil expenditure by Tayside regional council in 1984-85, also expressed at November 1984 prices, was £1,173.

Job Creation, Dundee

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to the total number of jobs that have been created at (a) Dundee technology park and (b) Dundee enterprise zone since their opening.

Mr. Lang: The report "Enterprise Zone Information 1984-85", published last month, shows that the number of employees in the Tayside enterprise zone at December 1985 was 1,000 compared with 546 at time of designation. The report does not contain employment figures for the individual zone sites in Dundee, but it is estimated that around 190 jobs have been created to date in Dundee technology part.

Social Work Services

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what has been the total amount spent on social work services in Tayside and Scotland per head in each year since 1982-83; and if he will express these figures also at constant prices;

(2) what has been the total amount spent on social work services in Tayside region in each year since 1982-83; and if he will express this expenditure at constant prices.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

Social Work Net Expenditure

	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86
Tayside
Expenditure (actual) £ thousand	19,789	20,567	21,901	24,294

[1] The 1985-86 figures for Scotland are estimates based on incomplete returns.

Dundee and Aberdeen Colleges of Education

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, in view of the representations which he has received opposing the proposed merger of Dundee and Aberdeen colleges of education, he will now abandon the proposals.

Mr. John MacKay: No. I welcome the general line of the interim report of the working party set up to consider how the merger should be implemented. That report has shown that a cost-effective institution can be established which will make an important contribution to Scottish education. I hope that all parties concerned will adopt a constructive approach in the interests of the new college.

European Community College of Education

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made as to the suitability of Dundee college of education as the site of the proposed European college of education; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The European Parliament's Committee on Youth, Culture, Education, Information and Sport is considering in principle whether a European Community college of education should be established. When and if a definite set of proposals is submitted for consideration by the member states of the Community, I should wish to see Scotland's claims as a suitable location being seriously considered. Dundee college of education has modern facilities which are not at present fully utilised, but that situation may change in the light of the decisions to merge Aberdeen and Dundee colleges of education and to dispose of surplus accommodation throughout the college of education sector as a whole which were announced by my right hon. and learned Friend in his statement on 17 July 1986 at column 1187.

Mental Health (Code of Conduct)

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Scottish Home and Health Department is preparing a code of practice under the terms of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Action on the preparation of a code of practice under section 119 of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984 is in hand, and a draft of the code should be ready to be circulated to interested bodies for their comments by the summer of next year.

Workers Educational Association

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the level of Government financial support to the Workers Educational Association in Scotland in (a) recurrent grant aid and (b) capital grant for each of the last five years.

Mr. Rifkind: Grants offered to the Workers Educational Association in Scotland for each of the last five years were as follows:

Year	Recurrent Grant	Capital Grant	Training/ Supplementary Grants
1982-83	133,550	Nil	124
1983-84	140,227	Nil	Nil
1984-85	145,836	Nil	8,964
1985-86	169,500	1,780	27,030
1986-87	184,500	Nil	3,000

Mental Patients

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the number of patients (a) admitted to hospital and (b) detained in hospital under sections 18, 24 and 26, respectively, of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984.

Mr. Rifkind: Detailed statistics on the number of patients admitted to hospital under these provisions are published in the annual reports of the Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients were received into guardianship under Part V of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984 in the 12 months immediately following implementation of the Act.

Mr. Rifkind: This information is not available in the form requested; but at the beginning of 1985 there were 84 patients under guardianship. In that year 27 patients were discharged from guardianship and 15 new guardianship orders were made. At the end of 1985 there were thus 72 patients under guardianship in Scotland. Information on patients under guardianship is published in the annual reports of the Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland, copies of which are available in the Library.

Carlops and Broughton Bypass

Mr. Steel asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether plans for by-passing Carlops and Broughton on the A702 trunk road are likely to enter his Department's financial programme in the near future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: There are no plans at present for bypassing Carlops on the A702 trunk road. The need for improvements to this road will be assessed once the results of a study into routes to the south of Edinburgh are known. Broughton is on the A701, which is the responsibility of Borders regional council.

Musselburgh Bypass

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the Musselburgh bypass to be opened.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned friend proposes to open the Musselburgh bypass on Friday 19 December.

Glasgow Airport

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he received a request to meet representatives of Glasgow district council and other interested parties to discuss a review of policy on transatlantic flights from Glasgow airport; and what reply he has given.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend received the request on 4 November 1986. We have not yet replied.

Health Expenditure (Tayside)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will now consider an increase in the Tayside health board's expenditure to ensure that the 1985-86 spending shows an increase in real terms.

Mr. John MacKay: In 1985-86 Tayside health board was the best funded health board in Scotland in relation to the needs of its area. Refinements to the SHARE system of revenue allocation to make it more sensitive to changes such as population shifts, have resulted in Tayside receiving growth money in the current year.

Education (COSLA Talks)

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on education matters; and what he intends to place on the agenda for those meetings.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend met representatives of the convention on 4 November to discuss the issues arising from the Main report (Cmnd. 9893) on school teachers' pay and conditions.

Teachers (Dispute)

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he proposes to give guidance to Scottish education authorities on their contingency plans in the event of further industrial action in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Not at present. Advice was given to education authorities in March 1985. I am satisfied that education authorities are aware of their statutory duty to secure that there is made for their areas adequate and efficient provision of school education.

Roads

Mr. Allan Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the trunk road projects on which he expects work to start before the end of 1989.

Mr. Michael Ancram: Start dates for trunk road schemes are subject to a number of uncertainties, including the completion of statutory procedures and the availability of funds. Accordingly my right hon. and learned Friend's normal practice is to announce in the spring of each year only those major schemes which he expects to be ready to start in the following financial year. However, within the category of schemes costing over £5 million, possible starts in the period to the end of 1989 include the following:

M8	Newbridge to Edinburgh
M80	Stepps Bypass
A1	Tower to Dunglass
A7	Dalkeith Bypass
A9	Dornoch Firth crossing
A9	Dunblane Bypass
A68	Dalkeith Bypass
A75	Annan Bypass
A75	Dumfries Bypass
A76	Cumnock and Auchinleck Bypass
A76	New Cumnock Bypass
A77	Ayr Road Route
A78	Ardrossan and Saltcoats Bypass
A82	Luss to Camus Nan Clais
A92	Murcar to Balmedie
(A92)	East Fife Regional Road, Stages 3 and 4
A96	Inverurie Bypass

School Transport

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as the percentage of Scottish schoolchildren who enjoy free transport to school; how this figure compares with the same period in 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The school transport survey undertaken in September 1985 showed that 156,294 (18·5 per cent.) of the total pupil population received free school transport. Figures for 1986 are not yet available.

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has as to the percentage of Scottish schoolchildren whose parents pay only half of their transport costs to school; how the present figure compares with the same period in 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not collected centrally.

Schools Curriculum

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy towards the role of (a) head teachers and (b) other teachers in determining the curriculum in schools in Scotland and on the extent to which staff and parents should be consulted.

Mr. John MacKay: Head teachers have a responsibility for the management of the curriculum of their school working within the overall policy of the education authority and guidance issued by the Secretary of State. Arrangements for consulting other members of staff and parents, whether in schools councils or otherwise are matters for local determination.

Teachers (Right to Strike)

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to introduce legislation to remove from teachers the right to strike; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: We have no such plans.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy towards the weighting of increases in teachers' salaries in favour of those at the bottom of the scale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The question of starting salaries is dealth with at paragraphs 12.19 to 12.22 of the Main report (Cmnd. 9893). My right hon. and learned Friend gave his response to the Main committee's recommendations in his statement of 30 October at columns 475-88.

DEFENCE

Naval Quarters, Yeovil

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many naval quarters in the form of (a) houses and (b) flats administered by Yeovilton are currently empty in Greenwood road and Wessex road, Yeovil; and for each of the last six months, what was the total number of empty houses or flats and the number of months each had been empty.

Mr. Freeman: There are two houses in Greenwood road and 10 houses in Wessex road which are currently empty. Of those houses, one in Greenwood road and three in Wessex road have been allocated to, and are awaiting occupation by, naval families. There are no empty, Navy-owned flats in either road. Records are not held in a form which would allow the second part of the question to be answered.

Fulbeck (Police Costs)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of the Ministry of Defence police operations at Fulbeck to deal with the protest at NIREX exploratory work.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The cost has been £70,000.

Nuclear Missiles

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's position on their willingness or otherwise to equip British North Atlantic Treaty Organisation forces with US W79 nuclear warheads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 29 October 1986 at column 200.

Service Houses

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces' houses have remained empty for over one, three, five and 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: The number of service houses which have been empty for over one year totals 3,674; of these, 1,022 have been empty for over three years, 564 for over five years and 40 over 10 years.

Yantlet Range (Noise)

Dame Peggy Fenner asked the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the survey into the noise and effects of demolition practice on the Yantlet range in the Medway is due to commence; and if he will estimate how long it will take.

Mr. Freeman: Contract action for the initial study is in hand. The study itself is expected to take about two months but it will take a little longer to assess the results and to decide on any further action that may be necessary.

Plutonium Shipments

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) from which countries shipments of plutonium for defence purposes have come to the United Kingdom since 1979; on what dates they took place; and what was the mode of transport employed;

(2) how many shipments of plutonium for defence purposes have been made to the United Kingdom from other countries since 1979; what was the quantity of plutonium in each shipment; in what form it was shipped; and to what purpose each shipment was put;

(3) what are the administrative procedures for authorising shipments to the United Kingdom of plutonium for defence purposes from other countries; and what changes have been made to the procedure since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not in the national interest to provide answers to these questions.

Portsmouth (Dredging)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the special dredging works carried out at Portsmouth to enable the USS Iowa to enter the solent on 21 September.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 24 October at column 1008.

Falklands Garrison

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the latest estimates for the total costs of the Falklands garrison, its supply and maintenance for the financial years (a) 1985-86, (b) 1986-87 and (c) 1987-88.

Mr. Stanley: It is estimated that the total defence costs of the Falklands in 1985-86 including the replacement of equipment lost during the campaign is £572 million of which £397 million is the additional cost of establishing and maintaining the garrison. For 1986-87 and 1987-88 the planned provision for the Falklands amounts to £435 million and £257 million respectively of which £234 million and £140 million relate to the garrison.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current strenght of the Falklands garrison in each category; what is the projected final complement; and what that is expected to be achieved.

Mr. Stanley: It would not be in the public interest to detail the make-up of the forces defending the islands. Force levels in the Falklands reflect the continuing need for a military presence sufficient to deter agression and to defend the islands against attack.

Nuclear Reporting Cells (Royal Observer Corps)

Mr. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the Royal Observer Corps in Wales has established any nuclear reporting cells in conjunction with Armed Forces Headquarters;

(2) what are the intended functions of Royal Observer Corps nuclear reporting cells before and after a supposed nuclear attack.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Equestrian Events

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many man days of military personnel time were used in assistance in equestrian events for the last full year.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the information requested is not readily available from our records.

US Submarines

Mr. Ashdown asked te Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assistance was provided to the United States nuclear submarine Nathaniel Green by the United Kingdom in 1986; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he has information on how the United States nuclear ballistic missile submarine Nathaniel Green left United Kingdom water recently; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will detail what information he has received on incidents affecting United States nuclear submarines in United Kingdom waters and especially relating to the United States submarine Nathaniel Green; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 9 May at column 270. I understand that the USS Nathaniel Green left United Kingdom waters under her own power. We would expect any significant incident affecting United Kingdom interests involving USN nuclear submarines in United Kingdom waters to be reported to my Department by the United States authorities. The only such recent incident concerned the USS Nathaniel Green.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Christmas Bonus

59. Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to increase the Christmas bonus paid to retirement pensioners; and if he has any plans to extend it to the long-term unemployed.

Mr. Lyell: We have no present plans to increase the Christmas bonus or to extend it to the long-term unemployed. As already announced, the £10 bonus will be paid this year in the first week of December to the same beneficiaries as before.

AIDS

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those regional health authorities that have not forwarded district health authority complete service plans on acquired immune deficiency syndrome as requested in circular HC (86)2; and if he will list those district health authorities that have yet to draw up such plans.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report for each health authority the number of persons receiving treatment for acquired immune deficiency syndrome for each of the past five years.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what funds Her Majesty's Government have so far (a) allocated and (b) spent specifically on the fight against acquired immune deficiency syndrome, categorised under (i) research, (ii) public information and education, (iii) additional health care facilities, (iv) support for voluntary agencies and organisations and (v) other aspects.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to the hon. Members.

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to whether any persons in the United Kingdom have contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome following transfusions of infected blood that was not detected in the screening process; and what information he has about the efficacy of the screening process in other countries.

Mr. Newton: The safety of the blood supply in the United Kingdom is maintained in two ways. First, those people who may have been exposed to the AIDS virus are told they must not donate blood. Secondly, as explained in my reply to the hon. Member on 3 November at column 356, all donations are now tested and no cases of AIDS virus transmission through blood transfusion have been reported since testing was introduced. Comprehensive information on other countries who test blood donations for HIV antibody is not available, but their experience is understood to be comparable.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the regional variation in the incidence of cervical cancer over the last five years; and if he will give, in total and by regional health authority, the number of (a) registrations and (b) deaths involving cervical cancer in each of those years.

Mrs. Currie: Statistics on the regional variation of the registrations of newly diagnosed cases of carcinoma of cervix uteri (ICD (9) 180) and of carcinoma in situ of cervix uteri (ICD (9) 233.1) for England and Wales for 1978 to 1982 are published in "Cancer Statistics", MB1 Nos. 10-14 copies of which are in the Library. These show the numbers of registrations, the rate per 100,000 population and the standardised registration ratios at age under 75 for each regional health authority in tables 6, 7 and 8 respectively.

Statistics from 1981 to 1984 on the numbers of deaths with an underlying cause of carcinoma of cervix uteri and the standardised mortality ratios (SMR) by regional health authority are shown in table 5 and table 3 respectively "Mortality Statistics: area" DH5 No's 8-11. The number of deaths and the SMR's for 1985 are shown in the tables.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how the incidence of cervical cancer in the United Kingdom compares with that in other countries for which he has information available; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: The information given in the table is selected from Chapter 12 of "Cancer Incidence in Five Continents, Volume IV" published by the World Health Organisation and the International Agency for Research on Cancer. It is the latest information currently available. Data for other countries not shown may be found in the volume, a copy of which is in the Library. World Health Organisation expects to publish more up to date figures shortly.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to reply to the letter about cervical cancer policy sent to him by the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras on 23 September.

Mrs. Currie: I replied to the hon. Member yesterday.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to provide a substantive reply to the questions on cervical cancer by the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras due for answer on 29 October.

Mrs. Currie: I am replying to the hon. Member today.

Mr. Maxwell-Hyslop asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what provision he proposes to make in his Department's estimates for 1987-88 for financing a three-yearly cervical smear test cycle as recommended by the British Medical Association.

Mrs. Currie: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 30 October at column 237.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those health authorities which have district-wide computerised cervical cancer call and recall schemes in operation.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 29 October 1986, c. 186]: Regional health authorities' outturn reports on short-term programmes showed that as at 31 March 1986 the following 33 health authorities had implemented computerised call and recall systems for cervical cancer screening:

Barnet
Barnsley
Brent
Bristol and Weston
Central Manchester
Cheltenham and District
Chichester
Croydon
East Dorset
Exeter
Frenchay
Gloucester
Haringey
Harrogate

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those health authorities which do not have district-wide cervical cancer call and recall schemes in operation but which have plans to do so, giving the estimated date of introduction in each case.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 29 October 1986, c. 186]: In January this year all health authorities were required to give priority to implementing computerised call and recall systems for cervical cancer screening no later than March 1988. Of the 158 health authorities that had not implemented such systems as at 31 March 1986, 76 planned to do so during 1986-87 and 82 during 1987-88. Psychiatric Beds

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what accommodation is planned for long-term patients currently occupying psychiatric beds in district general hospitals.

Mrs. Currie: We have made it clear to health authorities that they must provide suitable in-patient accommodation for all their long-term patients for whom this is more appropriate than community care.

District general hospital psychiatric units are not designed to provide long-stay care and most contain few or no long stay patients. A number of patients admitted by such units will be found, after assessment and short-term treatment, to need continuing care, but those concerned will normally seek to provide this outside hospital, with the help of the social services authorities; they will make arrangements for care in a group home, sheltered lodgings, and so on. The numbers for whom such community care is unsuitable, and who therefore remain as in-patients in the unit, though small, tend gradually to accumulate, and we are anxious that health authorities should give more attention to providing accommodation specifically for this group.

Three districts (Camberwell, Southampton and South Manchester) have already provided such accommodation in the shape of a "hospital hostel" as discussed in the 1975 White Paper – that is, a small hospital unit providing 24-hour nursing supervision in a domestic atmosphere. As a first step we are proposing to arrange one or more seminars early next year so that National Health Service planners can consider the experience of these three districts, and discuss their own plans.

Hypothermia

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list, for the United Kingdom and for England and Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland separately, the number of cases where hypothermia was mentioned on the death certificate for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available; and if he will state how many of each annual total were deaths of people aged (a) 65 years and over and (b) 80 years and over.

Mrs. Currie: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Personal Incomes

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many full-time employees earn less than the state minimum benefit level.

Mr. Major: In 1983, the latest date for which information is available, the number of assessment units (as defined for supplementary benefit purposes) headed by a person in full-time employment whose net resources (net earnings, after housing and work expenses) were below their supplementary benefit scale rate was around 130,000. If all the in-work income-related benefits to which they were entitled were claimed and if those ineligible for supplementary benefit are excluded (because they have capital in excess of £3,000), this number would fall to around 90,000.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide a regional breakdown for England and Wales using "Low Income Tables" for 1979 and 1983, of the numbers of people who fall below the supplementary benefit level, who are on supplementary be and up to 140 per cent. of supplementary benefit, broken down by economic status, and family type, showing what proportion each group makes up of the particular region's population.

Mr. Major: I regret that the statistics cannot be broken down reliably in the manner requested.

Nurses

Mr. Shersby asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the recruitment of British nurses by Australia and of offers of better pay and career prospects; and if he will take steps to ensure that any such information is considered by the National Health Service management board in the course of its review of the problems of recruiting nurses.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of 23 June, Official Report, columns 63-64, if he will (a) provide a breakdown of the net 3,010 whole-time equivalent figure for the reduction in nurse learners between 1983-84 and (b) provide similar figures for 1984-85.

Mr. Newton: The information is as follows:

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide figures for numbers of nurses, broken down by category, completing training for every year from 1980 to 1990; and if he will publish comparable figures on the projected increase in demand for nursing staff from health authorities' annual programmes.

Mr. Newton: I regret that not all the information requested is available. Health authorities' plans for nurse training and projected increases in demand for the period up to 1990 are subject to continuing discussion and refinement between regional and district health authorities. Information supplied by the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting and its predecessor on the number of nurse learners completing training between 1980 and 1986 and projections to 1989 is shown in the table.

NHS (Treatment Criteria)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what criteria are used to decide whether treatment is non-urgent for the purposes of National Health Service statistics.

Mr. Newton: The classification of an in-patient waiting list case as urgent or non-urgent is decided by the clinician in charge on the date to which the statistical return relates. The steering group on health services information said in its first report that it may be of use for local purposes to subdivide statistics of patients awaiting admission by clinical urgency of patient but did not recommend that statistics classified by clinical urgency should be collected centrally. From 1 April 1987, when the recommendations of the steering group are implemented, this information will therefore not be collected centrally.

Benefits and Allowances

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the level of the pensioner addition to housing benefit needs allowance at April 1987 had it been increased in line with changes to the retail price index between May 1985 and September 1986.

Mr. Lyell: The pensioner addition to the housing benefit needs allowance has, in fact, never been linked directly to the retail price index. In the past it has been calculated as a fixed percentage of the single person's needs allowance. Had the movement in RPI between May 1985 and January 1986 and between January and September 1986 respectively been applied at the upratings in July 1986 and April 1987 and the normal rounding convention applied, the addition would have remained at 85p at both upratings.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Greenock and Port Glasgow are in receipt of (a) invalidity benefit, (b) housing benefit, (c) additional heating allowance, (d) mobility allowance and (e) sickness benefit for the latest available date.

Mr. Lyell: The information is as follows:

Invalidity benefit and sickness benefit: The number of claimants in receipt of invalidity benefit and sickness benefit as at 21 October 1986 (the latest date for which information is available) at the Department's local offices in Greenock and Port Glasgow is as follows:

GREENOCK	4,003
PORT GLASGOW	1,645

Separate records are not kept of the number of claimants in receipt of invalidity and sickness benefit.

Housing benefit: I regret that estimates of the total number of housing benefit recipients in the Inverclyde district council area, which covers Greenock and Port Glasgow, are not available. Neither are estimates of the numbers receiving rate rebate as these are administered by Strathclyde, the regional (rating) authority, which does not routinely break down its case loads by district. Estimates from Inverclyde district council's claim show that about 12,200 households received rent rebates or allowances in 1985-86.

Mobility allowance: Mobility allowance is administered centrally and details are not held locally of the number of beneficiaries in Greenock and Port Glasgow.

Additional heating allowance: These details are not readily available as information is gathered on a sample basis only.

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people received rent relief, rate relief, or housing benefit, in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Lyell: Information relating to 1970 and earlier is not available. The information requested for later years is given in the following table:

Estimated recipients of rent rebates, rent allowances and rate rebates Great Britain, Thousands

	[1]1975	[1]1980	1985
Rent rebates	1,110	1,310	3,650
Rent allowances	180	240	1,010
Rate rebates	2,910	3,340	6,780

[1]Note

Housing benefit was not introduced until 1983. It replaced the former DOE rent rebate and allowance, and rate rebate schemes and additionally brought in those who formerly received help for their rent and/or rates through the supplementary benefit scheme. The estimates for 1975 and 1980 only, therefore, reflect those who received help through the DOE schemes.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people had their mobility allowance renewal applications refused during (a) the 12-month period prior to the House of Lords' decision Leeds v. Secretary of State for Social Services on 25 April 1985 and (b) the 12-month period since that date; how many of those in (b) above were refused because: (i) their condition had changed and (ii) they were adjudged differently from their original successful claims in the light of the Leeds decision; and how many of those in (b) above were (i) severely mentally handicapped, (ii) severely behaviourally disturbed and (iii) with other severe disabilities.

Mr. Major: In the 12 months up to 25 April 1985, 4,360 renewal claims for mobility allowance (16·7 per cent. of the renewal claims decided in that period) were disallowed at the initial stage. The figures for the 12 months after that date were 4,250 and 15·7 per cent. respectively. I regret that records are not maintained of the reasons for disallowance of renewal claims or of the nature of the disability of unsuccessful claimants.

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people had their original mobility allowance applications refused during (a) the 12-month period prior to the House of Lords' decision Leeds v. Secretary of State for Social Services on 25 April 1985 and (b) the 12-month period since that date; and of these how many were (i) severely mentally handicapped, (ii) severely behaviourly disturbed and (iii) blind with other severe disabilities.

Mr. Major: In the 12 months up to 25 April 1985, 33,500 initial claims for mobility allowance (30·7 per cent. of the initial claims decided in that period) were disallowed. The figures for the 12 months after that date were 43,600 and 34·8 per cent. respectively.

I regret that records are not maintained of the nature of the disability of unsuccessful claimants.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if local offices of his Department can identify every person receiving supplementary benefit or supplementary pension, who has a dependent child under the age of two years, or is over the age of 65 years, or is in receipt of attendance allowance and mobility allowance.

Mr. Major: The Department's local offices do not keep these statistics. To mount a special exercise to identify every person within these groups would be disproportionately costly.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many extra civil servants he has employed in dealing with outstanding claims for invalid care allowance in respect of married women; and when he anticipates the backlog will be brought down to a similar level of outstanding claims as those pertaining to men and single women.

Mr. Major: The Department has engaged an additional 320 staff to deal with claims for invalid care allowance from married women. Experience with the cases processed so far indicates that the majority of these claims should be cleared by early in the new year.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish in the Official Report his Department's estimate of the number of (a) pensioner households, (b) families with children, (c) other households, (d) local authority tenants and (e) private tenants who will (i) suffer a reduction in their housing benefit entitlement, and (ii) lose all entitlement to housing benefit as a result of the change to the rent taper in April 1987; and if he will also give his estimate of the total saving in benefit expenditure which he expects will be made as a result of this change;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report his Department's estimates of the savings in benefit expenditure he expects to make in 1986-87 and 1987-88 as a result of his proposal to increase the main housing benefit needs allowances in July 1986 and April 1987 by the same cash amounts as the retirement pension rather than by the traditional up-rating formula; and if he will also provide an estimate of the total loss in benefit to November 1987 these savings entail for: (a) pensioner households, (b) single person households, (c) couples, (d) couples with one child and (e) couples with two children.

Mr. Lyell: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many workers in the Midlands social security region have claimed disablement benefit during the last 10 years; and how many of those were claiming for injuries assessed at between 1 per cent. and 14 per cent.

Mr. Major: Information is not available in the form requested, as the Midland social security region was only formed on 12 April 1982.

Between then and 23 September 1986, 95,097 claims for disablement benefit were made. We do not have a regional breakdown either of successful claims or of how many were for disablement below 14 per cent.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the maximum daily amount an unemployed person was allowed to earn without loss of entitlement to unemployment benefit in 1956, 1965, 1975 and 1985; and approximately how many hours' work this represented for a person earning half the national average.

Mr. Lyell: The information requested, based on half national average hourly earnings rates for male manual workers, is given in the table:

	Unemployment benefit earnings limit (per day)	Approximate number of hours work represented
1956	33½p	2¼
1965	33½p	1½
1975	75 p	1½
1985	£2.00	1

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the current value of the basic housing benefit needs allowances according to the traditional uprating formula; and what level of average local authority rent, rates and water rates have been used in this calculation.

Mr. Lyell: If the basic housing benefit needs allowances to be implemented from April 1987 were to be calculated now according to the traditional formula, they would be:

Single person	£49·65
Couple	£72·85

The levels of housing costs used to calculate the housing element would be:

average local authority rent	£15·82
average domestic general rates	£ 7·54
average domestic water rates	£ 1·67

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people have moved from unemployment to other benefits in the past 12 months.

Mr. Lyell: Precise figures are not available but it is estimated that in any year:

(1) approximately 100,000 people move from unemployment benefit to sickness benefit (and a similar number move from sickness benefit to unemployment benefit);
(2) approximately 10,000 people move from unemployment benefit to retirement pension;
(3) approximately 230,000 people move to supplementary benefit when they have exhausted their entitlement to 312 days of unemployment benefit; and
(4) small numbers move in other circumstances, for example to maternity or widows' benefits, but no reasonable estimates can be made of the numbers involved.

NHS (Staffing)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the numbers of consultants, registrars and general practitioners per head of population on a regional basis.

Mr. Newton: Figures are available on the number of hospital medical consultants, registrars and GMPs (excluding dental practitioners) per 100,000 population and are as follows:

Pensions

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations he has received about the upgrading of retirement pensions for British residents in Canada; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: Since 1 April 1986 we have replied to about 130 inquiries from hon. Members about the non-payment of annual upratings to our retirement pensioners living in Canada, some of which included representations in favour of paying such increases. Officers of the Department have also replied to about 40 inquiries and representations on this subject. On 23 April 1986 my predecessor responded to my hon. Friend the Member for Harborough (Sir J. Farr) when he raised this subject on the motion for the Adjournment of the House (columns 398-404). On the question of progress made towards a social security convention with Canada enabling pensions payable to British pensioners living in Canada to be uprated, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby, (Mr. Wareing) on 22 October at columns 906-7.

Restart Scheme

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many of the persons who left the unemployed count by September 1986 following invitation to a restart counselling interview or attendance at such an interview now receive supplementary benefit.

Mr. Major: Up to 11 September 1986, the number of people who had left the unemployment count as a result of restart but continued to receive supplementary benefit without being required to be available for employment was 55. In addition, 3,857 people had returned to the unemployment count having previously left following an invitation to, or attendance at, a restart counselling interview. Of these, the majority will be in receipt of supplementary benefit.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Scotland have had their unemployment benefit disallowed as a result of failing to attend an interview for the restart scheme.

Mr. Major: Up to 9 September 1986, the latest date for which figures are available for the national restart scheme, a total of 1,133 people in Scotland had their benefit disallowed as a result of failing to attend an interview. Of these, 21 received only unemployment benefit. The other 1,112 either had supplementary benefit of a combination of both benefits. A further breakdown of the figures is not available.

Departmental Staff

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people were employed in the social security office of his Department in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Lyell: Comprehensible figures on the total number of staff employed in the Department's local offices are not available before 1966. Information that is available is as follows:

	Number of staff in post
1 April 1970	46,590
1 April 1975	57,700
1 April 1980	64,036
1 April 1986	62,567
1 November 1986	64,899

Vaccine Damage Payments

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the application form for a vaccine damage payment asks for information on (a) what vaccine is alleged to have caused the damage and (b) when the vaccination took place.

Mr. Lyell: (a) Yes. (b) Yes.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many vaccine damage payments have been made in each year since payments began which relate to vaccination which was solely or partly for whooping cough; in each year, what were the dates of the whooping cough vaccination related to the awards that were made; and in how many cases each year this information was not available, and why.

Mr. Lyell: The available information is contained in the following tables. Table 1 shows the number of awards of a vaccine damage payment made in each year in which the claimant stated that the vaccination was pertussis or included a pertussis element. Table 2 gives the total number of awards made under the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979, analysed by year in which the vaccination was stated by the claimant to have taken place.

Information to relate the number of awards in which the claimant stated the vaccination was pertussis or included a pertussis element to the year of vaccination is no readily available and could be extracted only at disproportionate cost.

Whooping Cough

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report, the available statistics regarding the incidence of severe brain damage or death following an attack of the disease of whooping cough.

Mrs. Currie: Statistics are not available year by year on the incidence of severe brain damage following an attack of whooping cough but the national childhood encephalopathy study (1976 to 1979) noted 17 previously normal children from a total of 924 who had a history of whooping cough prior to admission to hospital for acute neurological disease. Black Report

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply of 29 October, Official Report, column 182, if he is satisfied with the progress and management of studies commissioned to implement recommendations 2 and 3 of the Black report; and when the findings of each study are likely to be received by his Department.

Mrs. Currie: Yes. In studies such as these it is vital that great care be taken to ensure the accuracy of the data collected, even if this results in some delay. According to the latest information received by the Department these studies are expected to be completed by January 1987.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to the reply of 29 October, Official Report, column 182, if he has any plans to increase the funding and resources available for the studies commissioned to implement recommendations 1 to 4 of the Black report; and if he will state the total cost and approximate duration of each study.

Mrs. Currie: No. We have no reason to believe additional funding would speed up completion of these studies. The total cost to the Department and approximate duration estimated for these studies are shown in the table; the recommendations 2 and 3 studies are combined as they have been jointly funded.

	Total Cost £	Duration (years)
Recommendation 1	57,300	3
Recommendation 2	11,000	2

Recommendation 4	89,600	3

Kidney Patients

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to encourage health authorities to provide facilities for provision of hospital kidney dialysis at night to assist kidney patients to obtain employment.

Mrs. Currie: It is for health authorities to decide how available resources can best be used to provide dialysis services. We would expect the needs of patients, including the requirements of their employment, to be taken into account when patterns of provision are planned.

Mr. J. A. Sandeman Allen

Mr. Steen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether his Department has completed preparation for the appeal of Mr. J. A. Sandeman Allen, DFM, FCA of Totnes reference 0/M3/20269, against the decision made on 4 March not to increase his war pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: Mr. Sandeman Allen's appeal is now with the doctors at Norcross for a medical opinion. The appeal should reach the pensions appeal tribunal shortly.

Children (Homelessness)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what are the latest available annual figures for the number of children received into care by reason of homelessness; and if he will give this information for England as a whole, and for each local authority area;

(2) what are the latest available figures for the number of children in local authority care where the reason for their admission into care was homelessness; and if he will give this information for England as a whole and for each local authority area.

Mrs. Currie: The latest annual figures available are for the year ending 31 March 1984. The 1985 figures will be available shortly. A child may be taken into care for a number of reasons of which homelessness may be a contributory factor although not identified as a specific cause in the statistics. Information available on children in care where the specific cause is that their family has been made homeless is given in the following table:

NHS (Costs)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the gross annual cost of the National Health Service in its first full year of existence and, allowing for inflation, what is the present expenditure on the service at those prices.

Mr. Newton: The gross annual cost of the National Health Service in Great Britain in 1949-50 was £447 million. At 1949-50 prices, the 1986-87 National Health Service expenditure in Great Britain (£18·75 billion) would have been £1,519 million.

Great Ormond Street Hospital

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what are the estimated fees for the rehabilitation work on the cardiac block of Great Ormond street hospital; and to whom they have been paid or are to be paid;

(2) what fees have been paid or incurred to date, respectively, to counsel, solicitors and expert witnesses in the current litigation about the cardiac block at Great Ormond street hospital.

Mrs. Currie: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the estimated cost of equipment for the cardiac block at Great Ormond street hospital;

(2) what happened to the equipment valued at £1·84 million originally bought for the cardiac block at Great Ormond street hospital; and how much of it is included in the estimated cost of equipment for the rehabilitated block.

Mrs. Currie: Items of equipment originally bought for the cardiac block at Great Ormond street hospital have either been redeployed elsewhere in the NHS or stored for use in the rehabilitated cardiac block. Additional equipment is now being purchased for the rehabilitation block at an estimated cost of £2·5 million, this sum being offset by approximately £450,000 received in respect of equipment sold. Expenditure of about £350,000 has been incurred in respect of costs associated with storage, testing and installation of the equipment originally purchased.

Paediatric Nurses

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what evidence he has of vacancies for trained paediatric nurses in hospitals in London and the south-east;

(2) what evidence he has of difficulties in recruiting trained paediatric nurses in hospitals in London and the south-east.

Mr. Newton: Information of this nature is not collected centrally. However, because of concerns about recruitment difficulties, the NHS management board has commissioned a study of the nursing services in London.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will tabulate the numbers of vehicles owned by the London ambulance service designed primarily for use in (a) emergency, (b) non-emergency non-ambulant and (c) non-emergency ambulant purposes for each of the years 1984, 1985 and 1986, together with the actual or expected mileages covered by vehicles in each category.

Mrs. Currie: The comparison of fleet sizes between the years 1984, 1985, 1986 is difficult because they will vary according to the rate at which vehicles are purchased and disposed of through each year. The current fleet size is as follows:

355—ambulances used on front-line work or for non-emergency "stretcher" journeys.
229—Tail-lift vehicles; these vehicles are needed for "chair-cases", but can also accommodate walking cases.
393—Sitting case vehicles.
977—Total.

Since 1984, the position is reasonably unchanged, with a slight increase in tail-lift vehicles and a slight reduction in sitting-case vehicles.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what studies he has made, and what evidence he has received, concerning alleged non-appropriate use of the non-emergency ambulance services in London; and by what percentage those calls have changed between 1984 and 1986.

Mrs. Currie: No formal studies have been made, as far as I am aware. The London ambulance service has drawn district health authorities' attention to the criteria set out in HC 78(45) which states:

Ambulance services are required to provide, or arrange, the provision of suitable transport, free of charge, normally to the nearest hospital or treatment centre with hospital based facilities where the necessary treatment can be obtained, to NHS convalscent homes, dentists' surgeries or artificial limb appliances and assessment centres, for any patient (emergency or non-emergency) who is considered by a doctor, dentist or midwife to be medically unfit to travel by other means. Ambulance transport should not be provided for patients whose medical condition does not prevent them from travelling by other means, that is, on foot, by public or private transport (either their own transport or transport provided by relatives, friends or voluntary services). Nor should it be used to convey a person on holiday or on recreational journeys, where the need is based on social or economic grounds, rather than medical.

We have no information on alleged non-appropriate use of non-emergency ambulance transport.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will tabulate for each division of the London ambulance service the number of: (a) emergency, (b) non-emergency non-walking, and (c) non-emergency walking patients, carried in each quarter of the years 1984, 1985, and 1986 to date together with the known number of cancelled calls on patients in the non-emergency category and the approximate vehicle mileage for each of the two main categories, together with all respective annual totals for each division, and for the service as a whole.

Mrs. Currie: The information is as follows. No record was kept prior to 1 April 1986 of cancelled journeys.

Mental Illness (Newham)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the rate of mental illness in the London borough of Newham; and what is the national figure.

Mrs. Currie: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. Statistics on prevalence of mental illness are not collected centrally, either at local or national level. Newham district health authority does not provide any in-patient care for mental illness, so Newham patients are treated in neighbouring districts.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends to make an early statement on the pay and conditions of speech therapists in the National Health Service.

Mr. Newton: Pay and conditions are a matter for Whitley negotiation. I understand that on 20 October a settlement was conluded which will be put into effect as soon as possible, backdated to 1 April 1986.

Dental Charges

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has any plans to introduce proportional dental charges: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Charges for routine dental treatment are already partly based on a proportion of the costs. The possibility of changing to a wholly proportionate system is raised in "Primary Health Care — an Agenda for Discussion" [Cmnd. 9771] which is currently the subject of widespread consultation.

Leaflet NI 247 (Court Judgment)

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will revise leaflet NI 247 to take account of the judgment of Mr. Justice Woolf in the Butterworth case to the effect that going to live in the same household as another person to look after them because of illness or disability does not constitute living together as husband and wife; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: No. Leaflet NI 247 reflects the guidance issued by the chief adjudication officer to those adjudication officers who are asked to decide whether couples are living together as husband and wife.

Lorazepam

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received about the drug lorazepam; whether he is conducting inquiries into its use and effects; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Cash Limits

Mr. Hind asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any changes will be made to his Department's cash limits or running costs limits for 1986-87.

Mr. Fowler: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the Department of Health and Social Security running cost limit will be increased by £4,200,000 from £1,815,840,000 to £1,820,040,000, and the cash limit on class XV, Vote 5 will be increased by £2,680,000 from £1,171,188,000 — as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 22 July at columns 143-46 — to £1,173,868,000.

Of the increase in running costs, £4 million represents an increase in the agency payment to the Department of Employment to cover the increased expenditure by the unemployment benefit service reported by my right hon. and learned Friend the Paymaster General on 28 October at column 81. The remainder represents additional costs to DHSS resulting from Jobstart, one of the employment measures announced by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his Budget statement.

The relevant proportion of these increases will be recovered from the National Insurance Fund; the resulting offset is reflected in the cash limit change.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will announce the rates of statutory sick pay that will apply from April 1987.

Mr. Major: Regulations will shortly be laid before Parliament proposing new rates of statutory sick pay with effect from 6 April 1987. The standard rate will rise from £46·75 to £47·20 per week, and will be payable where an employee's average weekly earnings are £76·50 or more. The lower rate will rise from £31·60 to £32·85 and will be payable where average weekly earnings are between £39 (the lower earnings limit for the payment of national insurance contributions) and £76·49. These represent increases in the rates of 1 per cent. and 4 per cent. respectively. At present 85 per cent. of spells of SSP attract the standard rate with the remaining 15 per cent. being split between the middle and lower rates. Having two rates of SSP applicable to only 15 per cent. of spells of sickness overcomplicates the administration of SSP for employers and does not provide a sensible structure. We propose, therefore, to merge the present middle rate of SSP with the lower rate with effect from 6 April 1987. All recipients of the middle rate at that date will continue to get the current rate of £39·20 until their spell of sickness ends or they reach their maximum entitlement to SSP, whichever is sooner. Following the merger between the two rates, the lower rate is being increased by 1·2 per cent. more than would have been required under a straight prices uprating. Statutory maternity pay will also be set at this higher level on its introduction in April 1987. The regulations bringing these changes in will be subject to affirmative resolution of both Houses.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Wood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has yet completed his review of national insurance contributions for 1987-88.

Mr. Fowler: I have completed the annual review under section 120 of the Social Security Act 1975. The proposals will take effect from 6 April 1987.

Employers and Employees

As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his statement earlier today, I do not propose to raise the standard rate of contributions for either employees or employers, which remain at 9 per cent. and 10·45 per cent. respectively. This is the fourth successive year that these have remained unchanged.

In line with the requirements of the Social Security Pensions Act 1975, the lower earnings limit for class 1 contributions is to be raised to £39 per week, which is just below the basic retirement pension rate for a single person, which I announced to the House on 22 October. The upper earnings limit is to be raised to £295 per week, which is a little under 7¼ times the new basic pension rate. The new earnings limits replace the current ones of £38 and £285 respectively.

The reduced contribution rates for the lower paid will continue unchanged. The reduced rates of 5 per cent. and 7 per cent. for employees, and 5 per cent., 7 per cent. and 9 per cent. for employers will extend further up the earnings scale and will apply to weekly earnings which fall below the ceilings of £65, £100, and for employers only, £150 (the previous ceilings were £60, £95 and £140 respectively).

Not Contracted-Out Employees and their Employers

Neither the employee nor his employer will have to pay any contributions if his earnings are less than £39 per week. For people earning between £39 and £285 (the former upper earnings limit) there will be no increase for either the employee or the employer. In fact, owing to the increase in the earnings ceilings for the reduced contribution rates, some lower paid employees will pay a slightly smaller contribution, as will their employers. For those employees with earnings above £285 per week, the maximum possible increase will be 90 pence per week. There will be no corresponding increase for employers since there is no upper earnings limit for their contributions.

Contracted-Out Employees and their Employers

Contributions payable by some contracted-out employees and their employers will rise slightly. (The maximum combined increase is 6p a week.) Where earnings are less than the former upper earnings limit of £285 per week, the increase will be very small reflecting the fact that the increase in the lower earnings limit increases the band of earnings on which the non-contracted-out contribution rates are paid. Some lower paid contracted-out employees, and their employers, will in fact have their contributions reduced as a result of the higher earnings ceilings for the reduced contribution rates.

Employees with earnings between the old and new upper earning limits, £285 and £295 respectively, will pay a maximum of 71p a week extra. The increase in the upper earnings limit will extend the contracting out rebate to contributions in respect of earnings between £285 and £295, with corresponding savings for employers.

Self-Employed People

The flat rate class 2 contribution will be rasied by 10p to £3·85 per week.

The rate of class 4 contributions will not be increased. The annual limits of profits between which Class 4 contributions are paid will be raised from £4,450 and £14,820 to £4,590 and £15,340 respectively. The effect of these changes is that, for self-employed people who only pay class 2 contributions, contributions in 1987-88 will be £5·20 per year higher than in the current financial year. For those self-employed people with profits between £4,590 and £14,820 (the former upper profits limit) class 4 contributions will be reduced by £8·82 per year in 1987-88 — assuming an unaltered level of profits. For those self-employed people with profits at or above the proposed upper profits limit of £15,340, class 4 contributions will be £23·94 per year higher in 1987-88.

Class 3 (Voluntary) Contributions

The rate of class 3 contributions is to be raised from £3·65 to £3·75 per week.

Treasury Supplement

The Treasury Supplement to the National Insurance Fund will be reduced from 9 per cent. to 7 per cent. with effect from April 1987.

Employment Protection Allocation

The employment protection allocation, currently 0·25 per cent. for employees and 0·20 per cent. for employers, will be reduced to 0·07 per cent. and 0·06 per cent. respectively from April 1987.

National Health Service Allocation

The allocation to the National Health Service, currently 0·75 per cent. for employees and 0·6 per cent. for employers, will be increased to 0·85 per cent. and 0·7 per cent. respectively from April 1987.

The draft orders and the contributions amendment regulations, which are required to give effect to my proposals, together with the Government Actuary's report on their effect on the National Insurance Fund, will be laid before the House shortly.

Manchester

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make an urgent official visit to the regional health authority in the north-west and district health authorities in Manchester to hear about their funding problems and in particular, the closure of hospital wards and the shortage of nursing staff.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 5 November 1986, c. 476]: I was at Hope hospital, Salford, yesterday for public consultation on primary care, and expect to visit central Manchester on 12 December to lay the foundation stone for the £30 million redevelopment of the Manchester royal infirmary.

Unemployed Persons (Benefits)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will present a table showing the total payments to, and the number of unemployed people receiving, housing benefit in Great Britain for each year since 1979.

Mr. Lyell [pursuant to the reply, 23 May 1986, c. 373-74]: The information is in the following table.

Unemployed Housing Benefit Recipients: Estimated Caseload and Expenditure

	1979-80[1]	1980-81[1]	1981-82[1]	1982-83[1]	1983-84	Great Britain 1984-85	1985-86
Caseload (thousands)	50	90	140	570	1,400	1,450	1,450
Expenditure (£million)	10	30	60	240	920	1,050	1,150

[1]Housing benefit was introduced for some in November 1982 and for all in April 1983. It replaced the former DOE rent rebate and allowance, and rate rebate schemes. Additionally it brought in those who formerly received help with their rent and rates through supplementary benefit. The estimates before April 1983 relate to the former DOE schemes but reflect the partial start of housing benefit in 1982-83.

Mortgage Assistance

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider introducing legislation requiring mortgage assistance for those on supplementary benefit to be paid direct to the lender rather than the borrower; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major [pursuant to the reply, 9 June 1986, c. 97]: I shall consider this suggestion along with the comments I have received from the Social Security Advisory Committee on the draft regulations concerning proposed changes to supplementary benefit payments for mortgage interest. An announcement of the final decision on the changes will be made in due course.

Hospital Beds (Thames Region)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the average daily number of available beds by sector in each of the districts of the four Thames regions in each year from 1979; and what were the equivalent figures for each of the years 1974 to 1978.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to the reply 30 June, 1986, c. 436]: I regret that I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks. Figures for all the years requested could be provided only at disaproportionate cost. The available information is given in the tables.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the latest figures for the percentage of in-patient cases that have to wait for longer than one year in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the West Midlands region, (c) the four Thames regions, (d) the North Staffordshire district health authority and (e) the district health authorities with the highest and lowest percentage figures in the West Midlands region;

(2) if he will give the latest figures for the percentage of urgent in-patient cases that have to wait for longer than one month in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the West Midlands region, (c) the four Thames regions, (d) the North Staffordshire district health authority and (e) the district health authorities with the highest and lowest percentage figures in the West Midlands region.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 23 October 1986, c. 977-8]: I regret I cannot give the right hon. Member all the information in the exact form requested. The available information is given in the table. Figures for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

[1] In terms of percentage of patients.
[2] Lowest/highest of the 19 districts in West Midlands with urgent cases.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish a list of district health authorities in rank order according to the percentage figure of in-patients who have had to wait for over a year for treatment;

(2) if he will publish a list of district health authorities in rank order according to the percentage of urgent in-patient cases who have had to wait for over a month.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 23 October 1986, c. 978]: The information requested is given in the tables. It should not be interpreted in any sense as a simple league table because circumstances vary from one district health authority to another.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will update the table showing total growth on the National Health Service expenditure given in his answer of 14 May 1985, Official Report, columns 119-20, so as to provide information for 1985-86.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 3 November 1986, c. 363-64]: The information is set out in the following table. Since the reply to the hon. Member last year there have been a number of technical changes to the figuring to reflect a revised Vote structure and a change in accounting for hospital and community health services expenditure. Health authority income from sales of surplus land and property is now included in the definition of gross National Health Service expenditure. I have therefore provided figures on a comparable basis from 1978-79 onwards. Fully comparable figures from earlier years are not available.

These figures take no account of cash released through health authorities' cost improvement programmes which make a major contribution to increasing patient care.

NHS spending is planned to increase by 3·6 per cent. in real terms in 1986-87.

Abortions and Sterilisations

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has concerning the average percentage of the workload of gynaecological departments which is spent in National Health Service hospitals upon non-emergency gynaecological out-patient attendances for (a) the performing of abortions and (b) the performing of sterilisations; and what percentage of such non-emergency gynaecological out-patient work is spent dealing with sequeliae of such procedures.

Mrs. Currie [pursuant to her reply, 3 November 1986, c. 367]: I regret that I cannot give my hon. Friend information in precisely the form he seeks. Information on day cases (where the patient attends for investigation, treatment or operation and occupies a bed under clinical supervision on a planned non-residential basis) is shown in the following table.

Day case activity NHS non-psychiatric hospitals, 1984—England

Health Services (Expenditure)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the revenue expenditure on health and community health services for each year from 1974-75 giving information adjusted by (a) the gross domestic product deflator, (b) National Health Service pay and prices and (c) the retail price index for (i) England and (ii) Wales.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 402]: The available information relating to England is shown in the table. The information relating to Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Strip Searches

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations he has received about strip-searching in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: About 40 letters, some from organisations and some from individuals, have been received during the last six months, mostly about the searching of women prisoners. In addition, a report was published by the National Council for Civil Liberties in July, and we have also received a report from the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights.

Strip-searching is a normal feature of prison security arrangements throughout the United Kingdom, and to the best of our knowledge, in other western European countries and North America. I am satisfied that the level of searches in Northern Ireland is the minimum consistent with requirements of security and safety.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Self-Employment

Mr. David Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will now review current tax arrangements for encouraging self-employment; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received concerning the current Inland Revenue rulings determining the status of a taxpayer as between being employed or self-employed; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether he will publish a list of the basic rules and procedures by which the Inland Revenue determines the status of taxpayers, for both tax and national insurance purposes; what plans he has for amending and relaxing these rules, in the light of Her Majesty's Government's policy of promoting self-employment; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what plans his Department has for promoting self-employment through changes in taxation policy and tax administration.

Mr. Lawson: Since this Government came to office, the number of self-employed people has risen by more than 800,000; an increase of almost half. This reflects the success of the Government's measures over the whole range of policy and administration.

Whether an individual is self-employed is a question of fact and of general law. Essentially the question is whether someone is in business on their own account. In the vast majority of cases, the rules provide a straightforward answer.

We have taken a number of steps to provide, in plain words, clear guidance on the rules, to ensure greater consistency of approach between Government Departments, and to reduce the administrative burden on individuals. Copies of pamphlet IR 56 which the Inland Revenue published last year to help any taxpayers who are in doubt whether they are employed or self-employed have already been placed in the Library.

Our consistent objective has been to encourage genuine self-employment and to help people to set up their own businesses.

European Monetary System

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new economic and financial obligations it is envisaged that Her Majesty's Government would have to undertake in the event of the United Kingdom joining the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: There would be an obligation to maintain the value of sterling within the agreed margins.

EC (Interest Payments)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the EEC Commission is not required to pay interest on delayed payments to EEC member states.

Mr. Brooke: The Council has always so far taken the view that it would not be fruitful for the Commission to pay interest to member states in such cases since member states themselves would have to finance the interest payments just like other Community budget expenditure.

Petrol

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to adjust taxation on petrol so that lead-free petrol retails at a lower price than leaded petrol.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the estimated tax revenue since 1982 from the taxation of unemployment benefit, both in total and for each year since 1982.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the European Court of Justice to consider and determine the case being promoted by the European Economic Community Commission for a declaration that the zero rating of sewerage, water, gas, electricity, new houses and protective clothing and footwear should be discontinued for purposes of levying value added tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The written part of the proceedings has now been completed: the United Kingdom's rejoinder was lodged with the court on 2 October 1986; but a date for the oral hearing has not yet been set. It is unlikely to be before March 1987. Judgment is normally given about two months after the oral hearing.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of additional revenue per annum which would accrue to the Treasury if the United Kingdom abolishes zero rating for certain goods and services as proposed in the infraction proceedings initiated by the European Economic Community Commission in the Court of Justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Government do not accept the Commission's contention that the sixth VAT directive requires the imposition of VAT on the goods and services covered by the infraction proceedings. If they did, however, the revenue yield would depend on the rate imposed.

Cigarettes (Taxation)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department has made a study of the correlation between changes in the total taxation in cigarettes and changes in the volume of sales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: It is estimated that for a 1 per cent. increase in the total tax on cigarettes the price of cigarettes rises by about three-quarters of a percent and the volume of sales is about one-third of a percent lower than it would otherwise have been.

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchquer what proportion of the retail price of cigarettes is taken up by the tax, including duty, on tobacco.

Mr. Brooke: Duty and value added tax together currently account for three quarters of the retail price of a typical packet of 20 cigarettes.

Form T5 (EC)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what approaches he has made to the customs directorate of the European Community Commission concerning the control copy T5 form; and what response has been received.

Mr. Brooke: The United Kingdom customs delegation to the appropriate committee of the Customs Union Service of the EC Commission secured agreement, at the most recent meeting of that committee, on 23 September, that the question of control copies of T5 forms should be further examined with a view to improving the system. The United Kingdom has pressed for Commission staff to prepare proposals to be put before the committee at an early future meeting.

Lloyd's Underwriting Profit

Mr. Evenett asked the Chancellor of the Exchquer what representations he has received concerning the assessment of Lloyd's underwriting profit for tax and national insurance purposes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I regret that it has not been possible to provid an answer before Prorogation. I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Business Turnover (VAT)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Chancellor of the Exchquer if he will set out, for each of the financial years from 1980 onwards, how many businesses registered for value added tax purposes had an annual turnover of less than £100,000; and in each year what proportion of the total businesses registered for value added tax those numbers represented.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Privatisation

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total cost of pre-flotation publicity for each of the concerns privatised by the Government since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 30 October 1986, c. 232]: The Government's pre-sale publicity costs on share sales since 1979 were, excluding VAT:

	£'000
British Aerospace (1981)	545
Cable and Wireless (1981)	303
Amersham International (1982)	99
Britoil (1982)	304
Associated British Ports (1983)	260
Cable and Wireless (1983)	806
Associated British Ports (1984)	125
Enterprise Oil (1984)	213
British Telecom (1984)	12,383
British Aerospace (1985)	1,656
Britoil (1985)	3,528
Cable and Wireless (1985)	2,422

Taxpayers (Statistics)

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people had incomes below the level which makes them liable to the standard rate of income tax in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980 and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 6 November 1986]: The information is as follows:

(million)

Year	Tax units[1] Not liable to tax	Liable at Reduced Rates[2] only	Total not liable at Standard/ Basic Rate
1956-57	[3]8·9	12·7	21·6

Public Expenditure

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the proportion of public expenditure taken up by rent rebates, rate rebates, and housing benefit, in 1956, 1960, 1970, 1975, 1980, and the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 6 November 1986]: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall write to my hon. Friend and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Matrimonial Homes (Family Protection) Act 1981

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the Lord Advocate's guidelines to chief constables on the workings of the Matrimonial Homes (Family Protection) Act 1981; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: As the guidelines are lengthy, I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will make available to interested parties the guidelines to chief constables on the workings of the Matrimonial Homes (Family Protection) Act 1981.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Courtesy copies of the guidelines will be made available to interested parties on request.

WALES

GCSE (Cash Support)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what recent represetations he has received on the introduction of the General Certificate of Secondary Education syllabus in Welsh schools; if he plans to increase cash support for the examination; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Since the start of the present school term representation about resources for the introduction of the GCSE have been received from three local education authorities, three parent teacher associations, one school governing body, one teacher and two parents. Considerable resources have been made available to local education authorities; special funding for books and equipment during 1986-87 of £300,000 from MSG and more than £900,000 through the education support grant mechanism, and £1·2 million over the two years 1987-88 and 1988-89. The Government consider that these resources are sufficient to ensure the smooth introduction of the GCSE bearing in mind that they are intended to be additional to adequate local authority provision through secondary school capitation allowances.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Wet, Salted Cod

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the adoption of an amendment to the current European Community tariff quota on wet, salted cod.

Mr. Alan Clark: As requested by the House of Commons Select committee on European Legislation, I wish to explain the agreement by the Government to the amendment to the operative date of the current tariff quota for wet, salted cod before it was possible for the Select committee to scrutinise it. There is no impact on the United Kingdom's interests. In order to meet the compelling economic needs of Portugal, agreement in principle was reached at the Fisheries Council on 22 September that the quota, which came into force on 2 July 1986, should be retroactive to 1 March 1986. The Government agreed to this exceptional measure, after satisfying itself that the use of retroactive application in this case met the conditions of the EC Council resolution of 27 June 1974 concerning measures to simplify customs administrations and although it had not been scrutinised by Parliament. I regret that the normal parliamentary procedures were not followed on this occasion but, in the circumstances, I hope the House will understand why the Government acted in this way.

Internal Market Council

Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Internal Market Council meeting held on 3 November.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Council, which I chaired, agreed three items in the presidency action programme on completing the internal market. These were directives on standards for direct broadcasting by satellite (which was adopted) and on the co-ordination of the laws of member states relating to self-employed commercial agents; and a resolution on the introduction of appropriate signboards at the communities external frontiers and internal borders. The Council also made progress on a number of other items in the internal market programme; on good laboratory practice for chemical products; on marketing and testing of pharmaceutical products; on Community trade marks; on the gradual abolition of controls and formalities applicable to Community nationals when crossing intra-Community borders; on a right of residence for EC nationals in the territory of other Member States and on roll-over protection structures for tractors.

Patent Life

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the average effective patent life of pharmaceutical products.

Mr. Pattie: The term of the patent is 20 years from the date of filing. Patents filed before June 1978 are subject, during the last four years of that term, to licences of right. The Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry has supplied statistics showing that, for products first marketed in recent years, the average time that had elapsed from filing of the corresponding patent was as follows:

	Years
1981	9·1
1982	11·6
1983	10·6
1984	11·7
1985	11·8

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps are being taken by Her Majesty's Government to encourage inventors by increasing the patent life of products;

(2) whether the Government proposes to legislate on the basis of paragraph 6.11 of chapter VI of Cmnd. 9712;

(3) when the Government propose to introduce legislation on the basis of Cmnd. 9712 on intellectual property and innovation.

Mr. Pattie: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing the trade deficits and surpluses in manufactures with the European Economic Community and the rest of the world, respectively, as set out in his reply of 5 November, Official Report, column 466, but on an overseas trade statitics basis.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

Dr. Kurt Waldheim

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 23 October, Official Report, column 933, to the right hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Freeson) if the search of the Ministry of Defence records revealed any involvement by Dr. Kurt Waldheim in the fate of service men taken prisoner by German Army Group E during world war two.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to my answer of 23 October to the right hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Freeson).

US Nuclear Submarine (Accident)

Mr. Ashdown asked the Prime Minister what information Her Majesty's Government have received recently in relation to an accident with a United States nuclear submarine in the Irish sea; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 9 May 1986 at column 270.

Wright Memoirs

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister (1) what discussions she or her Office had with the Australian Prime Minister Mr. Bob Hawke on matters relating to legal action in Australia on the Wright memoirs;

(2) whether she has discussed the proceedings or matters relating to the proceedings in the Wright memoirs case in the Australian courts with members of the Australian Government or Members of the Australian Parliament; and if she will make a statement;

(3) what advice she has given the Australian Government as to the way the Australian Government may wish to participate in the proceedings before the Supreme Court in New South Wales in the case of Her Majesty's Government's action against Heinemann Australia PTY Ltd. and Mr. Peter Wright for an order restraining the publication of Mr. Peter Wright's manuscripts.

The Prime Minister: Any such discussions, if they have occurred, would be confidential.

Mr. M. Vanunu

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister whether she has had any discussions with (a) Mr. Shimon Peres and (b) any other member of the Israeli Government regarding Mr. Vanunu prior to Mr. Vanunu's departure from the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Prime Minister whether any member or official of the Israeli Government communicated to the Prime Minister or her office their intention to seek to procure the return of Mr. Vanunu from the United Kingdom.

The Prime Minister: No.

SCOTLAND

Main Report

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total cost to the taxpayer of compiling the Main report on teachers' pay and conditions of service in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The cost of the inquiry up to the date of publication of the report, but excluding the cost of publication, was some £67,000. No remuneration was paid to any member of the committee.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been paid out in travel grants to each school in Tayside region participating in the assisted places scheme in each year since the scheme was implemented.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

School	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86

Planning Education

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future of planning education in Scotland; and what representations he has received from the Royal Town Planning Institute on entry into the profession.

Mr. John MacKay: The report of the transbinary review of town and country planning education in the United Kingdom was completed in March this year.

Following representations from interested parties, including the Scottish branch of the Royal Town Planning Institute, it has been decided that planning courses will continue to be provided at higher education institutions in Dundee, Edinburgh and Glasgow. The Royal Town Planning Institute advocated the retention of three Scottish centres for planning education, resourced on the basis of the report's recommendations, with some additional funding for postgraduate students. No final decision has yet been taken on the latter question.

Dunfermline College

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional accommodation costs at Dunfermline college site will be incurred to meet the proposed transfer of students from Jordanhill college of education.

Mr. John MacKay: I do not expect any additional accommodation costs incurred as a direct result of the transfer of students from Jordanhill college of education to be of more than a minor nature.

Bus Services

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many services registered under the Transport Act 1985 and which were due to come into operation on 26 or 27 October did not in fact operate.

Mr. Ancram: This information is not available. However the Traffic Commissioner has powers under the Transport Act 1985, where a case is brought to his attention, to penalise any operator who fails to operate a service that has been registered.

Young People (Accommodation)

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from the Edinburgh council for the Single Homeless about accommodation for young people in the public sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have received letters dated 28 October from the Edinburgh Council for the Single Homeless, making a number of points about youth homelessness. We are still considering these representations; when my reply issues, I will send a copy to the hon. Member.

Centre for Continuing Education (Dundee University)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Sectretary of State for Scotland if he will now instruct the Scottish Education Department to increase its annual grant to the centre for continuing education at Dundee university to a level comparable with the 1985 funding of at least £11,500.

Mr. John MacKay: No.

Police Training (Video)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will include the video "Getting over the Fear" in the training programme for police officers at Tulliallan police college.

Mr. Lang: The relevance of this video to police training is currently being assessed by the college.

Tulliallan Police College

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hours the course at Tulliallan police college lasts for (a) new recruits, (b) refresher courses for officers up to the rank of sergeant and (c) refresher courses for officers; and how many hours on each course are specifically allocated to the workings of and the implementation of the Matrimonial Homes (Family Violence) Act 1981.

Mr. Lang: The training programme at the Scottish police college is based on the recommendations of a working party of the Police Advisory Board for Scotland which reported in 1983. The programme is kept under regular review and adjustments are made as necessary to meet changing demands. Courses are provided for:—

Probationer constables (Basic and Advanced courses—both eight weeks)
Sergeants (two weeks)
Selected Sergeants (eight weeks)
Newly Promoted Inspectors (five weeks)
Superintendents (six weeks)
Detective Training
Traffic Training

At present probationer constables receive two periods devoted to the Matrimonial Homes (Family Violence) Act 1981 and domestic violence generally. The selected sergeants' course has three periods on violence against women and two periods on the role of the female and child unit which is operated by Strathclyde police. The newly promoted inspectors' course has two periods on the 1981 Act, and the detective courses have three periods on crime against women. In all cases, each period lasts for 50 minutes. In addition, the safety of women features in other aspects of the training.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Wright Memoirs

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer of 3 November, Official Report, column 301, what advice he has given to the Australian Government as to in what way the Australian Government may wish to participate in the proceedings before the Supreme Court in New South Wales in the case of the action against Heinemann Australia PTY Ltd. and Mr. Peter Wright for an order restraining the publication of Mr. Wright's manuscripts.

The Attorney-General: Discussions on these matters between Her Majesty's Government and the Australian Government are confidential.

Simon Wiesenthal Institute (Murder Allegations)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Attorney-General if he will refer to the Director of Public Prosecutions the allegations of murder contained in the submission to Her Majesty's Government by the Simon Wiesenthal Institute concerning 12 persons currently residing in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I have not yet had an opportunity fully to consider the submission referred to by the hon. Member and will therefore write to him.

Supreme Court and County Court Rules

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Attorney-General when the Lord Chancellor proposes to publish the results of his review of Order 113 of the Rules of the Supreme Court and Order 24 of the County Court Rules; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor is considering the responses to his paper on the summary procedure for the possession of land and the Rule Committee will then decide what changes, if any, to make to the rules in the light of those responses. It is possible that such changes will be concluded in a statutory instrument in December.

"Conspiracy of Silence"

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General if he is taking any steps to seek to ban the distribution of the book "Conspiracy of Silence".

The Attorney-General: No.

MI5 (Information)

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General whether he proposes to take any steps against Sir Dick White, Mr. Arthur Martin or Mr. George Russel Leigh in respect of information on MI5 which they have given to publishers.

The Attorney-General: This matter is under consideration.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Milk Inspection

Sir Peter Mills asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what criteria he used in fixing the level of the charges which have been introduced for milk plant inspections; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The object of charging for milk and dairies work is to cover all the costs which the Ministry incurs in administering the milk and dairies regulations. These costs — which comprise not only wages and salaries but travel expenditure, office and laboratory services, accommodation and other overheads — currently total approximately £2·2 million a year. Following informal discussion with the NFU, FUW and MMB we have concluded that the most equitable way to collect this sum from producers is to charge on the basis of two flat rates, one for routine visits to farms by dairy husbandry officers to check compliance with the regulations and another for visits to farms to sample and later test raw milk sold by holders of an untreated milk producer's licence and private water supplies used for dairying purposes. In the course of discussion with the industry my officials have indicated that these rates are likely to be in the region of £90 a visit and £22 a visit respectively. Dairy husbandry officers visit wholesale producers once every two years on average, so £90 a visit is equivalent to £45 a year. Wholesale producers with high standards of compliance with the regulations are visited once every three years or even less frequently, and for them the proposed charge is equivalent to £30 a year or less. I recognise that holders of an untreated milk producer's licence, including farmhouse caterers, are visited more frequently and that there is concern about the effect of charging upon this sector. I am therefore considering this aspect of charging. I shall then issue formal proposals as a basis for consultation with interested parties in accordance with Section 118(6) of the Food Act 1984, and regulations will then be made and laid before the House in the usual way.

Lamb Exports

Mr. Sims asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about the conditions in which a lorry load of 500 live sheep were transported from Dover to Spain on or about Friday 10 October; and what action he proposes to take.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A journey on 10-11 October was reported in The Observer newspaper on 19 October and further details have been supplied to my Department by the RSPCA. The sheep were transported in French lorries from Calais to Spain. We have contacted the French and Spanish authorities to discuss these reports and ask for their future co-operation. We are investigating whether breaches of United Kingdom law have occurred and have told exporters of sheep to France that they must provide more extensive information, including documentary proof of final destination from the French importer, before further export licences are issued.

Dinoseb

Miss Maynard asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by whom the chemical Dinoseb was cleared for use in the United Kingdom; what account he proposes to take of the action taken by the Environmental Protection Agency in the United States of America in relation to the chemical; what estimate he has of the size of the workforce of both sexes exposed to this chemical in the United Kingdom; if products containing Dinoseb are available over the counter for use by amateur gardeners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The herbicide dinoseb has been evaluated on a number of occasions since 1961 by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and its scientific sub-committee. On the basis of their advice, successive Governments have agreed to allow its use, subject to certain conditions, under the pesticides safety precaution scheme and more recently under the new statutory arrangements for pesticides approvals. Under these, Dinoseb has provisional approval. This was agreed jointly by my Department, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office, and the Departments of Employment, Health and Social Services and the Environment.

Companies supplying Dinoseb products in the United Kingdom have been requested to provide us with the data on which the EPA based its decision. As soon as we have those data, they will be evaluated and reviewed as a matter of urgency by the independent experts of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and its scientific sub-committee.

No data on exposure to workers using Dinoseb in the United Kingdom are available in the form requested. However, Dinoseb is not widely used in the United Kingdom and, under the terms of its approval, does not leave residues in crops at harvest. Moreover it is subject to the poisonous substances in agriculture regulations as a second schedule part II substance which require operators to wear, according to operation, faceshield, rubber gloves, coverall, rubber boots and hood.

The risk of exposure is therefore low.

No products containing Dinoseb have been cleared or approved in the United Kingdom for use by amateur growers.

Intervention Stores

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the volume or tonnage of cereals which is estimated to have been lost or stolen from intervention stocks in the United Kingdom during the last seven years.

Mr. Gummer: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that there is adequate supervision and effective management of intervention arrangements as far as food surpluses held in the United Kingdom are concerned;

(2) if he is satisfied that the management of stocks of cereal surpluses in intervention stores is and has been of adequate competence; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what checks are carried out, prior to the approval of companies and premises for storage of intervention stocks of cereals, as to the quality of their staff's equipment and experience; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what is his estimate of the size of the stock of cereal held in intervention within the United Kingdom; and on how many sites these stocks are held;

(5) how many prosecutions have been initiated in regard to the adulteration of cereal stocks in intervention stores during the last seven years; and if any further prosecutions are currently envisaged;

(6) if he will investigate reports that silica sand had been added to cereal stocks held in intervention; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Ashley asked the Minister of Agricultue, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions companies involved in holding intervention stocks of agricultural produce have been found to be in financial difficulties; how many have gone into liquidation or are threatened with it; and if he will name the companies involved and state in each case the action taken by officials to safeguard public money and the amount of public money that has been or is likely to be lost as a result of the liquidations that have taken, or are likely to take, place.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 419]: Details of the companies which went into liquidation are given below. Other information held by the Intervention Board on companies' financial affairs is commercially confidential.

Company	Exchequer loss £	Action
Bedford Transport Limited	239,770·20	Beef stocks were sold at a reduced price to minimise loss after mould growth had developed.
Industrial Storage and Forwarding Limited	4,523·70	The stock of skimmed milk powder was taken over by another company. The loss represented handling charges.
F C International Limited	12,233·70	The stock of skimmed milk powder was moved to another store and the sum shown arose principally from the transport costs incurred.

Fisheries Limits

Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the area in square kilometres of water bounded by the United Kingdom fishing limits; how many (a) vessels and (b) aircraft are available to police those waters; what estimate he has of the average number of fishing vessels active in United Kingdom waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The total sea area within British fishing limits is 581,584 sq km. It is not possible to give a precise estimate of the average number of fishing vessels active in United Kingdom waters but our approximate estimate is between 300 and 500 vessels at any given time, depending on seasonal patterns of fishing and the weather. The Royal Navy fishery protection squadron comprises 13 ships, which are deployed with the aim of securing continuous coverage throughout the year equivalent to 4·7 ships on station. In addition, the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland operate four offshore and three inshore patrol vessels to the west of Scotland. At the present time four aircraft are available for inshore and offshore surveillance.

The United Kingdom fishery protection services are widely recognised as doing a magnificent job and the surveillance and enforcement of fisheries legislation within British fishery limits are among the best in the world.

Official Secrets Act

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review the application of the Official Secrets Acts in regard to the operation of intervention policies in the storage of food surpluses.

Mr. Gummer: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Food Rationing (Contingency Plans)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's contingency plans for the supply and rationing of food in the event of war together with any expenditure that is being incurred by his Department on preparation for the administration of a rationing system and on stocks of food for human consumption.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Contingency plans for the control and distribution of food in the event of war are developed as part of the normal civil emergency planning functions in my Department. They are summarised in section 11 of the emergency planning guidance issued to local authorities by the Home Office and are the subject of discussions with local authority representatives.

Apart from staff costs, the expenditure on these activities is set out in class IV vote 4 of the 1986-87 Supply Estimates.

Food and Environment Protection Act 1985

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement as to the effectiveness of part I of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 and any circulars issued pursuant to it in dealing with the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster; if he proposes to introduce any amending legislation in the light of experience of those consequences; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he proposes to introduce standard training exercises in order to seek to ensure that the provisions of part I of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 are understood fully by the local authorities concerned in their implementation, and that the place of those provisions in the wider context of emergency procedures is also understood; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he is satisfied with the qualifications and training of investigating officers designated under part I of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I am satisfied that the emergency measures implemented by this Department in the aftermath of the Chernobyl accident worked well. We are participating in a full review of all aspects of the Government's arrangements and will be examining any specific aspects such as the involvement of local authorities as part of that review. Any changes in present emergency arrangements will be notified to those required to implement them.

European Community (Legislation)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether during the summer Adjournment United Kingdom agreement was given to the adoption by the Council of any European Community measure before the European Legislation Committee had considered it.

Mr. Jopling: Yes. The Fisheries Council agreed, as a result of a United Kingdom request, to increase the total allowable catch for Clyde herring from 3,100 tonnes to 3,400 tonnes; and the Agriculture Council adopted with United Kingdom agreement a measure repealing certain retaliatory trade steps against the United States of America following the roll-back agreement between the Community and the United States of America. My right hon. Friend, the Minister of State has explained to the chairman of the committee why he agreed on behalf of the United Kingdom to adoption of these measures and of a number of other items of lesser importance.

The House will also wish to know that the Agriculture Council agreed to devalue the Irish green rate by three points for crops and six points for livestock products before the committee had considered the proposal. The United Kingdom did not vote in favour, but the measure was nonetheless adopted by a qualified majority.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what forestry development is currently proceeding or is in process of preparation within environmentally sensitive areas; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what drainage projects are planned or proceeding on wetland of ecological or environmental attraction within environmentally sensitive areas;

(3) what current developments are taking place within environmentally sensitive areas which he assesses are likely to be injurious to the present character of such areas; and which of these projects are supported by grants from public funds.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 423]: There may be a number of existing investment projects within environmentally sensitive areas which will need to be reassessed in the light of the designation of these areas. Whilst my Department will honour its commitments where appraisal has already been granted to a project, I have asked my local staff to ensure that where decisions remain to be taken on existing or future works, suppport is given only to those projects which respect the new environmental status of the area.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Appeals

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority in Dorset for each of the last five years (a) the number of appeals against planning refusals heard by his Department, (b) the total number of houses involved in these appeals, (c) the number of appeals, (i) upheld and (ii) rejected, (d) the total number of houses involved in (c)(i) and (c)(ii) and (e) the total number of houses involved in (c)(i) and (c)(ii) expressed as a percentage.

Mr. Tracey: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Archaeological Sites (Development)

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria he uses (a) when deciding whether building development should be disallowed on archaeological sites and (b) when deciding whether to fund archaeological survey or rescue work.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Secretary of State determines each application on its individual merits, following consultation with the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission which is his statutory adviser on archaeological matters. Responsibility for funding archaeological surveys or rescue work rests solely with the commission.

Spectrum Arena, Warrington

Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how, when and at what price the Spectrum Arena, Birchwood, Warrington was sold by the Warrington and Runcorn development corporation.

Mr. John Patten: The sale of the Spectrum Arena has not been completed.

DEFENCE

Holy Loch

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the United States Naval ship Vega first visited Holy Loch;

(2) what is the purpose of the visits of the United States Naval ship Vega to Holy Loch.

Mr. Stanley: I understand that the USNS Vega began visiting the Holy Loch in 1983 for routine resupply operations.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether any discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the United States Government on the introduction of facilities at Holy Loch for United States Navy strategic missile submarines armed with the Trident I (C-4) missile;

(2) whether the Government have been informed by the United States authorities of any use of facilities at Holy Loch by United States Navy strategic missile submarines armed with the Trident I (C-4) missile.

Mr. Stanley: Under existing arrangements, United States SSBNs capable of firing Poseidon missiles may use Holy Loch. The question of the use of Holy Loch by Trident I (C-4) armed United States SSBNs has not arisen.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any discussions have taken place between Her Majesty's Government and the United States Government on the introduction of facilities for United States Navy attack submarines at Holy Loch.

Mr. Stanley: United States Navy attack submarines have made some use of the facilities at Holy Loch for some years under existing arrangements.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what class of missile-firing submarines is supported by the visits of the United States Naval ship Vega to Holy Loch.

Mr. Stanley: I understand that the USNS Vega supports operations conducted by all classes of submarines from the Holy Loch facility by the United States Navy.

Private Education

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will now publish the total amount spent on boarding school allowances to assist service personnel to have their children educated at private schools in Scotland in each year since 1981-82 on account of posting moves at home and overseas;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report figures showing for the latest available year the successful applicants by rank whose children are being educated privately at public expense on account of posting moves at home and overseas.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 21 October 1986 at column 822. Records are not maintained in the form requested and the information could not be provided without disproportionate effort.

Nimrod AEW Aircraft

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence what commitments were given to his Department by the French Government or Air Force as to the purchase of Nimrod AEW aircraft, before commercially confidential information about the project was made available to such representatives.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the criteria whereby his Department allowed French Defence Ministry and French Air Force officials to be privy to commercially confidential information in connection with the Nimrod AEW project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Because there are potential savings to be obtained through a joint airborne early warning procurement, the French authorities, with the agreement of both GEC Avionics Ltd. and the Boeing Aerospace company, have been given commercially confidential information about both the systems we are still considering.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to order extra Tornado aircraft for the Royal Air Force as replacements for those originally ordered which formed part of the export contract for the Royal Saudi Air Force.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As announced in the RAF debate on 26 February at column 960, agreement has been reached with British Aerospace that the Tornados being diverted to the Royal Saudi air force will be replaced at no cost to the defence budget.

Nimrod

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the Nimrod AEW mission system avionics are now operating at an acceptable standard;

(2) what is his assessment of the present efficiency of the GEC Avionics Radar in the AEW Nimrod programme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 4 November 1986, c. 432]: We are assessing the merits of each of the two remaining contenders as part of the current AEW competition which is now nearing its final stages.

Nuclear Reporting Cells

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Royal Observer Corps in Wales has established any nuclear reporting cells in conjunction with armed forces headquarters.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, 6 November 1986]: The locations of the Royal Observer Corps nuclear reporting cells are classified.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the intended functions of Royal Observer Corps nuclear reporting cells before and after a supposed nuclear attack.

Mr. Stanley [pursuant to his reply, on 6 November 1986]: The function of the nuclear reporting cells is to provide details on nuclear bursts and assessments and advice on the path and intensity of fallout.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Dundee University (Engineering and Science Graduates)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the number of graduates in the faculties of engineering and science at Dundee university in each of the past five years.

Mr. Walden: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Teachers' Salaries (Departmental Document)

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total cost of the production and posting to each state school of his document concerning teachers' salaries.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The total cost is estimated to be about £50,000.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which he has been asked since 1979 to use his powers under the Police Act 1964 so as to allow for the possession of plastic baton rounds by a police force in England and Wales; what was the police force involved in each case; and if he will state the nature of his response in each case.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: To date there has been one occasion on which, under the procedure set out in my reply of 19 May 1986 to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) at columns 15-16, a chief constable has asked the Department to supply baton rounds following a refusal by the police authority to authorise purchase. The force concerned was the West Yorkshire police. The baton rounds were supplied.

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received from members of police authorities against the possession of plastic baton rounds by their police force; and if he will state the police force concerned in each case and the nature of his response.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Since we announced the setting up of a central store of plastic baton rounds and CS equipment on 19 May 1986, we have received representations either against the central store arrangements, or against the use of baton rounds generally, from the police authorities for Cleveland, Gwent, Merseyside, Northumbria, South Yorkshire and West Yorkshire. The responses have varied according to the particular points raised. The representations made have not caused us to change the policy announced in the replies of 26 November 1985 to a Question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Mid-Bedfordshire (Mr. Lyell) at columns 515-16 and 19 May 1986 to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) at columns 15-16.

Security Industry (Controls)

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received from the Institute of Professional Investigators advocating statutory controls over the security industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Six hon. Members have very recently written enclosing correspondence from the Institute of Professional Investigators, or from companies and investigators who are members of the institute, advocating statutory control to support self-regulation.

We fully understand the desire on the part of the Institute of Professional Investigators for proper regulation of its profession. We do not agree with its view that such regulation should be by statute. We shall continue to support and encourage self-regulation for professional investigators as we do for the private security industry.

Irish Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received from the National Association of Probation Officers about the transfer of Irish prisoners from England to Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have received no such representations.

Children

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prosecutions were instituted in each year since 1975 in respect of the murder or manslaughter of children; and how many such prosecutions each year were against a parent or step-parent of the victim;

(2) how many convictions were secured in each year since 1975 in respect of the murder or manslaughter of children; and how many such convictions were of a parent or step-parent of the victim;

(3) how many children were murdered in each year since 1975;

(4) how many convictions were secured in each year since 1975 in respect of sexual offences against children; and how many such convictions in each year were of a parent or step-parent of the victim;

(5) how many prosecutions were instituted in each year since 1975 in respect of sexual offences against children; and how many such prosecutions each year were against a parent or step-parent of the victim;

(6) how many convictions were secured in each year since 1975 in respect of assaults on children; and how many such convictions in each year were of a parent or step-parent of the victim;

(7) how many prosecutions were instituted in each year since 1975 for assaults on children; and what was the number of such prosecutions each year against a parent or step-parent of the victim.

Mr. Mellor: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Police Patrols (London)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the frequency with which (a) Warrior square, London E12 and (b) the Little Ilford estate is patrolled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that the Little Ilford estate is patrolled by two home beat officers working overlapping shifts of 8 am-4 pm and 2 pm-10 pm. Patrol cars based at Forest Gate police station also visit the estate from time to time. Warrior square is part of the Little Ilford estate and no separate arrangements are made for it.

Operation Condor

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what quantities of heroin, cocaine and cannabis were seized in consequence of Operation Condor in Brixton on 24 July.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A total of 300·12g of cannabis resin, 905·59g of herbal cannabis, 33·69g of cocaine and 42mg of heroin were seized by police during the course of Operation Condor.

Litter (Prosecutions)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were brought against people for litter offences for each year of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Copyright Material (Blank Cassettes)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were brought against people for copying copyrighted materials on to blank cassettes for each year of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Crown Court Sentencing Practice

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any proposals concerning Crown court sentencing practice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Most sentences passed by the courts are in line with what the public expect. For less serious offences, specially those not involving violence, sentences should clearly be no more severe than necessary, and full use should be made of sensible alternatives to custody. But there is a small minority of sentences for serious offences which are widely regarded as unduly lenient. This can damage public confidence disproportionately. The main guarantees of high sentencing standards are the good sense of the judges and the guidance provided by the Court of Appeal. I welcome the Court's willingness to extend and develop its guidance, and the steps which are being taken to make that guidance more accessible to sentencers. I do not at present think it necessary to take forward the suggestion in the White Paper on Criminal Justice legislation (Cmnd. 9658) that the publication and dissemination of the guidelines by the Judicial Studies Board should be put on a statutory basis.

I am, however, persuaded that there is a case for reinforcing the Court of Appeal's role by providing a means by which the issues raised in individual cases can be ventilated and the correct sentencing principles laid down. I therefore intend to include in the Criminal Justice Bill a procedure under which the Attorney General would be able to draw cases to the attention of the Court of Appeal, thus enabling the Court to state or reaffirm the principles which should be applied in any future case of a similar character. The procedure would be similar to that proposed during the passage of the Prosecution of Offences Bill. As with the earlier proposal, the sentence of an offender whose case was the subject of the new procedure would not be affected. Unlike that proposal, however, it would be confined to cases which in the Attorney-General's view raised sentencing issues of public importance.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Foreign and Commonwealth Questions

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Lord Privy Seal whether any revision is proposed for the arrangements for Foreign and Commonwealth Office questions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: The experiment for Foreign and Commonwealth questions introduced last year on 22 March 1985 at column 624-5 whereby oral questions to Foreign and Commonwealth Ministers were no longer divided between those relating to European Community affairs and those relating to the rest of the world, has been concluded. Following consultations through the usual channels it has been decided that the new arrangements be made permanent and that this will take effect with the introduction of the new questions roster.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Chile

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the burning by military personnel of Rodrigo Rojas and Carmen Gloria Quintana in Chile on 2 July; and if he will make representations to the Chilean ambassador.

Mr. Eggar: Investigations by the Chilean military prosecutor into this atrocity are continuing. One army lieutenant has been charged with using unnecessary violence, which led to the death of Sr Rojas and serious injury to Srta Quintana.

We have made strong representations to the Chilean ambassador and to the Chilean Foreign Minister in Santiago, and have urged that the Chilean authorities publish soon the full facts of the case.

Refugees

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the treatment of refugees destined for the United Kingdom during their period of detention in Thailand.

Mrs. Chalker: Refugees leaving Indo-China are not detained in Thailand. Thailand responds in a humane manner by offering first asylum to Indo-Chinese fleeing their countries. These refugees are housed in camps under the auspices of the United Nations High Commmissioner for Refugees. Conditions in the camps are adequate in terms of shelter, food, health care and security. Any with a claim to resettlement in third countries, including the United Kingdom, are screened in the camps to determine whether they meet the resettlement criteria.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made about the problems of piracy faced by refugees in the South China sea.

Mrs. Chalker: We continue our full support for the anti-piracy programme run jointly by the Thai Government and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. We have pledged a further £70,000 for the programme in 1986-87, and have also provided the services of a Royal Navy officer to report on how the efficiency of the programme can be improved.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the number of refugees escaping from Vietnam each month; as to how many perish at sea; and as to how many are victims of piracy.

Mrs. Chalker: We do not know the fate of all those who leave Vietnam by boat. However statistics show that in the first eight months of 1986 around 20,000 refugees arrived in south-east Asia by boat. Over 1,600 in the first six months of 1986 were rescued at sea. Of the refugees boats arriving in Thailand, the proportion which have suffered attacks by pirates has fallen steadily to around 20 per cent. We cannot tell how many refugees are lost at sea.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial or other assistance he is prepared to give to Christian Care Projects' efforts to provide a boat in the South China sea to rescue refugees who escape by boat from Vietnam.

Mrs. Chalker: We have received no request from Christian Care Projects for assistance. If asked, we would provide no support. Such "mercy ships", though well intentioned, exacerbate the problem, encouraging more Vietnamese to risk their lives by setting out in unseaworthy craft with no guarantee of making contact. We shall continue to support more effective responses to the problem, such as the orderly departure programme and the rescue at sea resettlement offers programme.

Falkland Islands

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the number of fishing vessels active in the waters bounded by the newly promulgated fishing limits around the Falklands.

Mr. Eggar: Some 600 vessels were sighted fishing in the Falkland Islands protection zone during the main 1986 squid fishing season which ended in June. For 1987 the Falkland Islands Government will be aiming to reduce significantly the numbers of vessels targeting squid in the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone.

Detailed licensing arrangements will be drawn up shortly.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether, during the course of discussions with the Soviet Union over the last six months on the subject of the south Atlantic fisheries, the Soviet Union objected to the imposition of the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone;

(2) whether he has received any response from the Soviet Government or their representatives in London on the question of Her Majesty's Government's establishment of the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone.

Mr. Eggar: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave the hon. Member on 6 November.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he expects any difficulties with the Soviet Union or other East European countries to arise following upon his decision to establish the Falkland Islands interim conservation and management zone.

Mr. Eggar: It is in the interests of all the fishing nations and fleets including those of the Soviet Union and other East European states to co-operate in orderly functioning of the interim conservation and management zone.

Human Rights

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is meant by the term European partners in the EEC Council statement on human rights.

Mrs. Chalker: In the declaration on human rights issued by the Foreign Ministers of the Twelve in Brussels on 21 July 1986 the term European partners refers to the member states of the European Community.

Diplomatic Staff (Children's Education)

Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how much money the Government have paid to independent and grant-aided schools in Scotland in each year since 1980-81 as boarding allowances for the education of the children of diplomatic staff;

(2) how many children of diplomatic staff have been educated and boarded at independent and grant-aided schools in Scotland under his Department's finance in each year since 1983.

Mr. Eggar: The detailed information of this nature is not available in the form requested. It is not required for administrative or accounting purposes and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Systime plc

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the response of Her Majesty's embassy in Washington to inquiries about the United States investigation of Systime plc initiated by the United States Department of Commerce; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: It is not clear what inquiries the hon. Member has in mind. At the request of Systime plc we did not intervene in the US Department of Commerce action against the company. However, a formal protest was made to the US authorities on 26 June 1986.

Chile (Police Visit)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department gave assistance in arranging the recent visit to Britain by senior Chilean police officers to study radio equipment manufactured by Pye.

Mr. Eggar: No.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Food Imports

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the implications of the European Communities (Amendment) Bill for the control of food imports into the United Kingdom with particular reference to the maintenance of existing public health standards.

Mrs. Currie: I am satisfied that the Bill will not affect our ability to maintain public health standards.

Children in Care

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of children in the London borough of Newham are in local authority care; and what is the national figure.

Mrs. Currie: There were 520 children in care, which equates to 9·7 children in care per thousand population under 18 in the London borough of Newham as at 31 March 1984; the equivalent figure for England was 6·5. These are the latest figures available.

Social Services Expenditure (Newham)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for social Services what is the per capita expenditure on social services in the London borough of Newham; and what is the national figure.

Mrs. Currie: Gross personal social services current expenditure in 1984-85, the latest year for which full details of actual spending are available, was £96 per capita in the London borough of Newham and £56 per capita nationally.

Hospital Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the hospital accident and emergency departments which will have been closed in each year since 1979, showing respectively which have closed permanently and which have closed temporarily.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. It is not available centrally.

Child Abuse

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money his Department allocated in 1985-86 and 1986-87 for local authorities to help in the fight against child abuse; for which local authorities; and for which projects.

Mrs. Currie: Local authority services for children are mainly funded through the rate support grant system and it is for individual local authorities to determine how the money should be distributed between the services for which they are responsible.

On 30 October to help with child abuse training projects for professional staff and telephone counselling services we announced grants of £400,000, part of which sum will be spent in 1986-87. The training projects will be based at The National Children's Bureau under the aegis of the training advisory group on the sexual abuse of children and at the department of psychological medicine at the Hospital for Sick Children at Great Ormond Street. The two counselling services are Touchline, based in Leeds and run by the National Children's Home, and Child Line.

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many children were removed from the family home in each year since 1975 by reason of abuse by their parents or step-parents;

(2) how many cases of child abuse by parents or step-parents were reported to social services departments in each year since 1975.

Mrs. Currie: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Forrest Report

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to receive the Forrest report; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Currie: I understand that the expert group on breast cancer screening chaired by Professor Sir Patrick Forrest has almost completed its report and that we shall receive it very shortly.

Project Smoke Free

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the cost to public funds of Project Smoke Free; what information he has on (a) its objectives, (b) how many people it employs and on what salaries and (c) on the rateable value of its offices; and how many meetings he has had with its officers in the last year.

Mrs. Currie: Project Smoke Free is a three-year project in north-west England which commenced in June 1985 with the objectives of helping people give up smoking, encouraging schoolchildren not to take up the habit and providing more non-smoking facilities in indoor public places. The scheme, which will be fully evaluated, is funded jointly by the Health Education Council (£200,000 pa) and the North-Western regional health authority (£70,000 pa) from whose premises it is run. The project employs six people on salaries of £14,800 (1), £10,490 (1), £9,290(1), £7,040 (2) and £4,360 (1). We have not yet met the officers, but hope to do so.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the change in the death rate from cervical cancer since 1965; and what was the equivalent change between 1960 and 1965.

Mrs. Currie: The table shows the age-specific mortality rates per million population for malignant neoplasm of cervix uteri for England and Wales for 1960, 1965 and 1985, and the average annual percentage change in these rates between 1960 and 1965, and between 1965 and 1985.

Age-specific mortality rates per million population for Malignant Neoplasm of Cervix Uteri (ICD[1] (7) 171, (9) 180), 1960, 1965, 1985; average annual percentage change 1960-65, 1965-85, England and Wales

[2] per million population.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing the number of deaths from cervical cancer for each year since 1973 to the present time.

Mrs. Currie: The information is shown in the table.

Number of deaths with underlying cause as Malignant Neoplasm of Cervix Uteri (ICD[1] (8, 9) 180) 1973-1985 England and Wales

Year	Number of deaths

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the change in the rate of positive smears for cervical cancer since 1973.

Mrs. Currie: The information requested is given in the table.

Cervical Cytology England and Wales

Year	Postive smears per thousand examined	Index (1973 = 100)
1973	4·3	100
1974	4·7	109
1975	4·8	112
1976	5·2	121
1977	5·9	137
1978	6·3	147

1982	7·6	177
1983	7·8	181
1984	8·9	207
1985	9·2	214

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the cost of the present cervical cancer smear test campaign; and what assessment he has made of the cost of providing for screening at three-yearly intervals.

Mrs. Currie: Expenditure on cervical cancer screening is not separately identified in health authority accounts. It is estimated that the current cost is in the range of £20 million to £30 million. A change to three-yearly screening for all women aged 20-64 years might increase expenditure by some £10 million to £15 million.

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the anticipated annual change in cervical cancer cases between the current time and 1996;

(2) what is the estimated number of deaths from cervical cancer for each year between the current time and 1996.

Mrs. Currie: I regret that the information requested is not available. We are pursuing vigorously policies to reduce the rate of incidence and of deaths from cervical cancer.

Nuclear War (Casualties)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to issue guidance to health authorities about which categories of people will be allowed treatment for injuries after a nuclear war and who will not.

Mrs. Currie: After any disaster the responsibility for sorting of casualties and allocation of priorities for treatment lies with doctors or ambulance personnel attending the injured at the material time. This principle applies in both peacetime and wartime emergencies.

We are at present considering revised guidance on civil defence planning in the National Health Service but it will not attempt to categorise casualties. Planning officers who will respond to the guidance are aware that this is a matter for professional judgment in the light of particular circumstances.

London Teaching Hospitals

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to ensure that where London teaching hospitals are providing services for many patients from outside the region which allocates their resources extra funds will be provided.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Westminster Hospital Pacemaker Unit

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will arrange for the National Health Service Management Board to review the future of the Westminster hospital pacemaker unit and examine the funding of the unit in the light of the level of referrals from outside the region.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Christmas Bonus

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects that the date of payment of the Christmas bonus for retired pensioners for 1987 and subsequent years will be announced.

Mr. Major: It is planned to pay the Christmas bonus for 1987 and future years on the pension pay day in the week beginning with the first Monday in December (Schedule 6, paragraph 1(3) of the Social Security Act 1986 refers).

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent improvements have been made in the treatment of cystic fibrosis; and how many regional or sub-regional specialty centres for cystic fibrosis are in operation.

Mrs. Currie: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

NHS (In-house Contracts)

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in how many cases heath authority auditors have monitored the performance of "in-house" contracts; and in how many cases they have reported cost over-runs.

Mr. Newton: I shall write to my hon. Frend.

Maternity Allowance and Grants

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what provisions there are for ensuring that mothers who give birth to premature infants will get their maternity allowance and grants at the time of birth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Children (Special Units)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what provisions there are for giving assistance to mothers whose children are hospitalised in special units far from home who must travel to be near their children; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if there are any plans to modify the existing benefits structure to allow mothers of prematurely born infants to collect their child benefits more easily;

(3) what provisions there are for mothers whose children are hospitalised in special units far from home for grants or an allowance to enable the mothers to stay close to their children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lyell: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Strikers (Supplementary Benefit)

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the deduction from the supplementary benefit payable for the dependants of strikers will be increased at the time of the uprating of benefits in April 1987.

Mr. John Major: The deduction will not be increased on this occasion and will therefore remain at £17.

TRANSPORT

Manchester Airport

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received representations from the authorities concerned at Manchester airport since the recent disaster on the availability of adequate facilities for dealing with fire hazards in the event of aircraft accidents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: No. The requirements for fire fighting facilities at Manchester airport are a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority. The authority has informed me that it, too, has received no representations from the authorities at Manchester, but that the facilities at Manchester exceed the minimum required—as they did at the time of the tragic accident last year.

British Rail (Subsidies)

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from south-east region commuters' organisations concerning the reduction of Government subsidies to British Rail.

Mr. David Mitchell: I have had one letter referred to me from a travellers' association and a number of others from individual members of the public. I can reassure them and my hon. Friend that the reduction we are seeking in subsidy by 1989-90 from Network South East and the provincial sector is a modest 8 per cent. This amounts to a saving of only 4 per cent. of costs over three years. At the same time our new objectives require an increased quality of service; and we are supporting major investments in new rolling stock, electrification, station refurbishment, the improvement of passenger information systems and speeding the issue of tickets. Our commitment to developing a reliable, efficient and modern railway serving the needs of commuters is clear.

British Rail (Investment)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the levels of capital investment by British Rail in (a) new rolling stock and (b) electrification, in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. David Mitchell: The information my hon. Friend requests is not readily available. I will write to him shortly.

European Road Safety Year (Exhibition)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the European Road Safety Year to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the Authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 17 November to 21 November.

My right hon. Friend looks forward to opening the exhibition on 17 November.

Uranium Hexafluoride

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations govern the use of hazchem signs in connection with the transportation of uranium hexafluoride.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Hazard warning panels must be displayed by road vehicles carrying in bulk the substances specified in Part I of the authorised and approved list issued under the Dangerous Substances (Conveyance by Road in Road Tankers and Tank Containers) Regulations 1981. These regulations do not cover the transport of uranium hexafluoride, which must be labelled in accordance with the regulations of the International Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations and safety conditions apply to the transportation of uranium hexafluoride.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The regulations and conditions for the transport of all radioactive materials in this country (including UF6) are based on the internationally accepted standards of the International Atomic Energy Agency Safety Series No. 6. A copy is held in the Library. For United Kingdom road consignments these are given effect by the following:

The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) Great Britain Regulations 1974 (SI 1974 No. 1735) and Amendment Regulations 1985 (SI 1985 No. 1729).

The Radioactive Substances (Carriage by Road) Northern Ireland Regulations 1983 (SR 1983 No. 344) and Amendment Regulations 1986 (SR 1986 No. 61).

The Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985 (SI 1985 No. 1333).

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether emergency services are advised when transport of uranium hexafluoride is taking place, and how to deal with the substance.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The emergency services do not receive prior notification of the transport of uranium hexafluoride, as the relevant regulations require safeguards to be incorporated in the design of the containers in which the material is carried. This ensures that even a severe accident could not give rise to a significant release of radioactivity. Nevertheless, in the event of an accident or incident, expert radiological advice is rapidly available to emergency services through the NAIR scheme (national arrangements for incidents involving radioactivity), details of which have been circulated to local authorities, police, fire and ambulance services by the Home Office.

Roads (Archaeological Sites)

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the criteria he uses when deciding whether new roads should be rerouted around archaeological sites; and whether there have been cases in which his Department has funded archaeological survey of rescue work in these circumstances.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Buses

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many services registered under the Transport Act 1985 and which were due to come into operation on 26 or 27 October did not in fact operate.

Mr. David Mitchell: Although some initial teething problems with the new system of bus registration were inevitable I am pleased to say that no major examples of services failing to operate have come to my attention. Where continuing problems have arisen they will be thoroughly investigated by the Traffic Commissioners.

Hazardous Goods (HGV Drivers)

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to how many heavy goods vehicle drivers are employed in the transportation of hazardous goods.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department does not record this information.

HGV Licences

Mr. David Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many people hold heavy goods vehicle licences; and what information he has as to how many of them were in employment at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Moore: About 850,000 people are currently licensed in Great Britain to drive heavy goods vehicles. Of these, about 75,000 are in the Armed Forces; apart from those, I have no information on the extent to which these licences are held by people whose principal occupation is not heavy goods vehicle driving. On the basis of the latest readily available Labour Force Survey for Great Britain (1984), the Department of Employment estimates that 430,000 people are in employment as drivers of road goods vehicles: this probably includes some who drive vehicles below the 7·5 tonne threshold of the heavy goods scheme.

Barnetby Top-Redbourne Link

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has given the go-ahead to Humberside county council for the construction of the A15, Barnetby top/Redbourne link; if funding for this project is now available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I have already given approval in principle to this scheme for grant purposes. Progress depends on the council obtaining confirmation of the necessary orders. I understand that these are to be published soon. A public inquiry may be necessary before any decision can be taken.

London Regional Transport

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Transport if London Regional Transport has any plans to publish a full current timetable for its bus and its railway operations respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The manner and form in which timetables for bus and Underground services are published are matters for London Regional Transport.

Marine Pilotage

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received from the Scottish Guild of Pilots about proposals permitting foreign vessels to enter United Kingdom coastal areas without the services of a qualified pilot; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have recently received a representation from the Scottish Guild of Pilots on a number of points concerning the Government's proposals to reform the present administration of marine pilotage. Under present legislation pilotage exemption certificates, permitting vessels to navigate in an area of compulsory pilotage without the services of a licensed pilot, may be granted only to EC nationals and only in respect of vessels registered under the law of an EC Member State. Under the proposals for new legislation which we intend to bring forward as soon as possible, these restrictions, for which there is no justification in terms of safety of navigation, will be removed. However it will of course remain necessary for applicants for certificates to satisfy the issuing authority that their skill, experience and local knowledge are such that they can safely navigate in the area concerned.

Racal-Decca Navigator

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for the future of the Racal-Decca navigator system for shipping; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The Racal-Decca navigator system is an important marine navigational aid in the waters around the British Isles. It provides highly accurate position-fixing signals that can be picked up by purpose-built receivers. For well over 30 years Racal-Decca (and the Decca Company before it) recovered the cost of this service from the rentals of receivers. In recent years, however, advances in technology have made it feasible for other manufacturers to sell relatively low-cost receivers, so eroding Racal-Decca's rental revenue. Racal-Decca decided earlier this year that this loss would quite shortly make it impossible for it to continue to provide the service on the previous basis. After extensive discussions with my Department it was agreed in principle that the company would be prepared to continue to run UK transmitters to the same high technical standard as hitherto under the superintendence of the General Lighthouse Authorities and as a charge to the General Lighthouse Fund. The agreement envisaged that this arrangement would last initially for seven years, with an option to extend for a further three years. An important element of the agreement is that the company, as it has already announced, will no longer require that its receivers should be rented: they will be freely sold (as will those of other manufacturers). The detailed terms of the arrangements will be the subject of a contract at present under negotiation between the company and the authorities. A pre-requisite of the authorities entering into such a contract is that their statutory functions should be extended to include superintendence and management of the navigator system. For this purpose I will lay an order early in the new Session which, subject to Affirmative Resolution by both Houses, would enable the new arrangements to take effect from 1 January 1987.

Nothing in these arrangements affects any of the contractual commitments bearing on the navigator system that Racal-Decca has with marine authorities in many other parts of the world.

Rail Barrier, Cranswick

Mr. John Townend asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will request British Rail not to proceed with work on the installation of an automatic half-barrier at the Cranswick railway crossing until the findings of the independent inquiry on the safety of unmanned crossings is published.

Mr. David Mitchell: No. For the reasons given in the letter I sent to my hon. Friend on 17 September, the terms of reference of the independent inquiry, and the ban on the installation of new crossings, apply only to automatic open crossings.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of persons registered unemployed in the St. Helens area at the last date available.

Mr. Lee: The following information is in the Library. On 11 September 1986, the number of unemployed claimants in the St. Helens local authority area was 15,145.

Community Programme

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of persons registered on community programme placements in the St. Helens area at the last date available.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to give information in the form requested. However, at the end of September, the latest date for which statistics are available, there were 4,649 people employed on community programmes in the Merseyside outer area. This includes the Metropolitan borough council area of Knowsley, Sefton and St. Helens.

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General if, further to the answer of 30 October, Official Report, column 215, he will give details of the 10 community programme projects with improved funding referred to therein.

Mr. Trippier: We are not yet able to give details of the 10 community programme projects with improved funding. Proposals are being discussed between officials and potential project sponsors.

Benefits (St. Helens)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of persons in St. Helens who have had their benefits suspended for failure to attend restart interviews at the latest date available.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Up to 9 October 1986, the latest date for which figures are available, 28 people in St. Helens had been disallowed unemployment or supplementary benefit for failure to attend restart interviews.

Social security and supplementary benefit law has always provided for disallowance of unemployment or supplementary benefit where an unemployed person fails without good cause to attend an interview about employment to which he has been twice invited. The disallowance continues to such time as he or she does attend. Twenty-five of these people have now attended an interview and had benefit reinstated.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General (1) what is the total number of persons being seen on an average day by benefit offices conducting availability testing interviews in the St. Helens area;

(2) what is the total number of persons whose benefit has been terminated or suspended as a result of interviews conducted on the availability test in the St. Helens area;

(3) if he will make it his policy to advise claimants interviewed on the availability test in the St. Helens area to seek independent advice before completion of the questionnaire.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The unemployment benefit office at St. Helens did not take part in the experimental testing of availability for work other than keeping statistics for comparison purposes. Therefore, there were no suspensions or disallowances on availability grounds arising out of the experiment although the usual procedure followed by all offices would identify some cases of doubtful availability in the normal way.

In the past claimants have not been advised to seek independent advice before completion of claim forms and we have no intention of changing this policy.

Inner City Projects

Mr. Leighton asked the Paymaster General if he will list the 34 inner city pilot projects mentioned in his answer of 30 October, Official Report, column 214.

Mr. Trippier: The 34 inner city projects for which my right hon. and learned Friend has approved task force support are:

(1) The Coach House Bristol, a small business centre
(2) Handsworth technical college, a personal services workshop
(3) Business Action Team Project, Handsworth, supporting local businesses
(4) A feasibility project for a shop selling ethnic cultural items in Leeds
(5) Positive action training in housing (PATH) in Leeds, providing training in professional services
(6) Michael Peters group design consultancy, Middlesbrough, a design and marketing consultancy advising local firms
(7) "Black Business in Birmingham", a local enterprise agency
(8) "Education for Enterprise" promoting education for enterprise in local schools
(9) "Head Start in Inner Cities" enterprise training for young people by the industrial society

(32) Feasibility study for Handsworth Asian business centre
(33) Support for "Outward bound" in Handsworth
(34) South Highfields and Vulcan road boundary walls Scheme, a local building project.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 103

SESSION 1985–86

27th October—7th November 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.
